ETHICS OF TRAVELING.

Have Tassengors Certain Rights Which Should Be Respected?

"I should very much like to know," said a plain citizen to a New York Sun reporter, "whether there are any ethics of traveling. I mean of railroad traveling in this country. Now, I went out on the 9:40 train on the New York Central the other morning and as I got on the train a little late, I found some difficulty in getting a seat. Not because the cars were crowded, for they were just about half filled. That is the twelve or fifteen seats on each side held each one person instead of the two that should find accommodation. The other halves of the seats were occupied by coats or valises, children or other impediments of the preemptors.

"I walked up and down three coaches all filled in the same way, and not one person offered to make room Finally, and after the train for me. had started, I asked permission to take the place of a hand-satchel and luncheon bag, and was sourly allowed to do so. Other desperate people crowded in, and the coach was pretty well filled by the time we got to Poughkeepsie, but I failed to see a single instance in which half of the seat was voluntarily left open, or in which it was graciously given up.

"Right across from where I sat was an aggravated case of this usurpation. In one seat the furthest from me, sat a lady with a milliner's box, taking up the space between her and the window. In the next seat behind was a gentleman who I found was the husband, and who had his half of the seat littered with a dozen parcels. Behind him sat a young lady, the daughter, guarding the aisle half of the seat with a rampart of canvas traveling bag. All three stolidly held their own against every comer, and kept the six seats until they got off at Hudson.

"The point I wish to make is that while every passenger has the right to all the comforts and conveniences for which he has paid and which are therefore his by right of purchase, he has no right whatever to occupy, or even attempt to occupy, that part of a seat for which he has not paid. I know this preemption of the double seat is an offense of such everyday commission that it is accepted as one of the commonplaces of railroad travel nowadays, but it seems to me to merit a little official attention, not with a view of limiting the comforts of travel, but of preserving the rights of all travelers.

FUNERALS AT NIGHT.

They Are Increasing in Cities-Few Funerals With Pallbearers Nowadays.

The custom of holding funeral services at night is, according to an un-dertaker, growing steadily in this city, says the New York Sun. Its growth dates from about five years ago. There were night funerals in New York before that, but they were comparatively few. The growth of the custom is due to several causes: The night funeral is less expensive and it meets the convenience of a much greater number of friends of the dead. With the increase of societies and their growth of membership the loss of a day or half a day in attendance at the funeral of a member has come to be a serious tax, and in this respect the night funeral makes a saving of time. In line with this ceremony of time is a decided change, within five or six years, in the custom with regard to pallbearers. There are now perhaps twenty funerals without pallbearers to one with them.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put to-gether, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For Fattening Hogs, Professor J. H. Shepperd is accredited with saying:

From all published data I regard wheat about equal in value to corn. Barley seems to be worth about 8 per cent less than corn. The real value of wheat as a feed can be learned only by com-paring its price with that of other grains. If barley, corn and shorts are cheap enough to produce 100 pounds of pork at less cost than wheat, it is folly to feed wheat. However, with wheat at its present low price and other grains high, it will in very many cases pay to feed wheat, and especially that which is "off" in grade. The value at the farm of wheat, corn or other foods should determine which to use.

Snow Registers Wanted. Up in the cold north a weather observer wants to find a man who will invent an instrument to measure the depth of snow correctly. All sorts of mechanical devices have been devised to measure rain and fog and sunshine, but nothing smaller than a level ten acre lot has been produced to show the correct depth of snow, and even that device, if the wind happens to be out of "time" isn't of much use for scientific purposes. If any one has an idea for a machine of this kind he will re-ceive the grateful thanks of the observer by communicating with him. He wants to issue a snowdrift bulletin that will average up the depth of snow in fence corners and open fields.

Speaking from her Experience,

After years of practical use and a trial of many brands of baking powder (some of which she recommended before becoming acquainted with the great qualities of the Royal), Marion Harland finds the Royal Baking Powder to be greatly superior to all similar preparations, and states that she uses it exclusively, and deems it an act of justice and a pleasure to recommend it unqualifiedly to American Housewives.

The testimony of this gifted authority upon Household Economy coincides with that of millions of housekeepers, many of whom speak from knowledge obtained from a continuous use of Royal Baking Powder for a third of a century.

Some of the night funerals are held at home, some at church. If at church, the body is taken after the services to the undertakers, and there kept until the burial. If at the house the body may be taken to the undertaker's or it may remain in the house over night. The morning service, a prayer by the clergyman, would be attended by only the imme-diate members of the family, who would take leave of the dead alone. The interment would be without further service at the cemetery. The number of funeral services held at the undertakers' is also increasing. No charge is made for the use of the shop for this purpose. It is in some respects more economical than a funeral at home or church, and with larger space than in a house it brings all attending together instead of separating them in various rooms.

Numerous correspondents have recently been writing to the London Times, pointing out that no originality should be claimed for the kinetoscope, as it is only an improved zoetrope, and one writes to say that he saw a similar toy seventy years ago.
