

NO HASTY MARRIAGES.

Higher Education Makes Women Less Dependent.

"So long as the attraction of sex remains you cannot abolish marriage!" excitedly exclaimed the conservative man, according to Vogue.

"I have no desire to do away with marriage, but simply to mitigate it," replied the woman propagandist. And most thoughtful people will agree with the woman speaker that the recklessness which characterizes marriage should be moderated.

A WIFE'S WITNESS.

Some of the "Wedding Blessings" She Does to Her Husband.

She contradicts him at the head of his own table, interrupts his anecdote to set him right on an utterly unimportant little detail—say the date of a transaction, which he makes the 7th of September and she asserts was the 8th, she interferes in all his arrangements, and questions his authority in the stables, the field, the church, the consulting-room; she appertains his food and regulates the amount of wine he may take; should she dislike the smell of tobacco she will not allow him the most transient whiff of the most refined cigarette, and, like her brother with his victim, she teaches the children to despise their father by the frank contempt with which she treats him and the way in which she flouts his opinion and denies his authority.

All out of love and its unreasoning tyranny she takes him into custody—in public as in private life—and allows him no kind of freedom. Robust and vigorous as he is, she worries over his health as though he were a confirmed invalid; in the hey-day of his maturity coddling him as if he were an octogenarian bordering on the second childhood. She continually uses the expression, "I shall not allow my husband to do so and so," or, "I will make my husband do this or that."

Dr. Clark's Novel Idea.

The Rev. F. E. Clark, president of the Christian Endeavorers, suggested a unique plan a week or two ago. It is to start a "chain of prayer," to reach clear around the world, and in which every member of the society, if he wishes, might form a link. Each Endeavorer is to offer one short petition every day for other members and for the cause at large. Special objects may from time to time be included. To become a link in the chain requires but one condition, viz., belief in prayer.

It Was Boston.

A tory speaker in Massachusetts held a nut in his hand and said: "This represents the whole church question. This shell is the free church, good in its way, but not the best of things. Now crack this nut and you get the established church." He cracked it and it was rotten and he had to retire amid derisive cheers.—Fun.

His Reverence—I can't take your cab, Pat. I see your horse has been on his knees.

Pat—Arrah, yer riverence; be aisy about that. The last place he had was with a preste and faith, he had to keep up a semblance of religion.—Sydney Bulletin.

Idiosyncrasies Noted in its Appearance at Different Seasons.

To the casual observer the motions of the moon appear to be exceedingly whimsical and irregular, says the St. Louis Republic. If its place in the sky is watched it will be found that it is first north and then south of the sun's path, and that it is sometimes east and sometimes west of that luminary. The last two motions are steady and regular from east to west, carrying the moon in its endless swing around the heavens, starting at new moon near the sun and progressing until at full moon the whole visible portion of the sky separates the two bodies. After this there are two weeks in which the moon still appears to move backward, approaching the sun from the other side, then, again apparently all of a sudden, it passes the sun and we behold a "new moon." The north and south motions of the moon are entirely different. While performing its endless journey from west to east there are two special periods in which it either moves far northward or takes up its position low down in the south. In spring the first motion is north, but afterward the general motion is reversed. In December you will note that the full moon occurs at the most northerly point in her course and in June at the most southerly. This is why we have most light from the full moon of winter and least from that of summer. Observations on these various movements indicate to us the path in which the moon moves about the earth and also show us that that body in different parts of its orbit is at varying distances from the earth. This indicates that the moon's path is not a circle, but an ellipse, having the earth in one of its foci. The moon being governed directly and held in position by the attraction of the earth, holds its primary movements in a path around our globe, but the attraction energy of the sun and of the giant planets, perhaps, in a lesser degree, produces motions in the moon which may be summarized briefly as a combination of the six following movements. (1) Its revolution about the earth, (2) its revolution with the earth about the sun, (3) the vibrating eccentricity of its orbit, (4) the slow, direct rotation in the "line of apsides," (5) the retrograde rotation in the line of nodes and (6) its rotation on its axis. It would be proper to enlarge this "note" so as to give a full explanation of the causes of each of the above-mentioned movements, but as each would require the use of several of diagrams and technical phrases need a feat cannot be attempted.
