COUNTY REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

The republican electors of Holt county, Nebraska, are requested to send delegates from their several townships and wards, to meet in the city of O'Neill on Saturday, June 13, at 10 o'clock A. M., for the purpose of placing in nomination candidates for the following offices:

Two representatives.
County attorney.
Eleven delegates to the state convention.
Eleven delegates to the senatorial convention.
And to elect a county central committee and a chairman and secretary thereof.
And to transact such other business as may properly come before the convention.

THE APPOINTMENT.

CLYDE KING, S. J. WRENKES,
Secretary. Chairman.

The republicans of southeastern Holt are favorable to the candidacy of Mr. Glassburn, of Wheeler, for state senator.

A. E. KING, of Hitchcock county, is a candidate for state treasurer and we suppose the junior editor of THE FRONTIER really ought to support him—but then what's in a name?

The Atkinson Plain Dealer falls into line and supports Kautzman for national delegate. Well, the Plain Dealer gets most of the patronage and it can afford to be magnanimous where positions of honor only are to be distributed.

The Kearney Hub says Geo. A. Brooks' candidacy was launched at the Omaha convention. "Launched" is a good word. If the boom was not launched at Omaha it certainly was not on account of a lack of liquid in the oil room.

The Niobrara Tribune says the Beacon Light is the only newspaper published in O'Neill. How cruel! If THE FRONTIER would only support Geo. Brooks for state treasurer then it would be the only newspaper published in the Elkhorn valley. A very little heat in the region of the collar is liable to warp thin minds.

C. C. McNish was in the city Monday visiting with old friends and making new acquaintances. Mr. McNish is acquainted with all of the old-timers, having served as district attorney in this district when Holt was young, away back in the 70's. Should Mr. McNish succeed in getting the nomination for state treasurer he will get a handsome vote in this part of the state.

The editors of the Bee and World-Herald recently had a joint discussion on the silver question. The editor of the Herald was rather hard hit and in casting about to find how it was done discovered that Bossy used a speech delivered some time before by Aldrege, of Texas. But that doesn't cut any figure that we can see. The only question in the case is, which was the more able, the speech delivered by Bryan or the one composed by Aldrege?

The supreme court has rendered a decision in the sugar bounty case. The decision, so the dispatches say, was very brief. The court simply held that it was an equitable consideration for which congress had authority to provide. This reverses the ruling of the comptroller of the treasury and requires the payment of the bounty provided for by the last congress. If congress has a right to make a bounty we presume the state legislature has the same authority. If that is the case it settles the question of bounty on Nebraska sugar and chicory.

WE ARE in receipt of a communication from Sanford Parker, of Spencer, protesting against the mention made by us last week of Eugene Moore securing passes for the return of Boyd county citizens who were taken before the federal court on a charge of cutting government timber. Mr. Parker says, in part: "The assistance he rendered these poor and needy fellows, who have been dragged from pillar to post, was not granted through any political or mercenary motive. The beneficiaries are mostly populists and could not possibly render him any assistance in nominating conventions if asked or required. Mr. Moore is certainly entitled to credit instead of cuffs for his benevolence in this matter by reason of his generous assistance." THE FRONTIER has no desire to injure Mr. Moore politically or otherwise, but the article in the Spencer Advocate certainly challenged comment.

CONSIDERABLE loud talk is being indulged in by Holt county citizens regarding the action of the supreme court in admitting Barney and Fenton to bail. They even go so far as to criticize the attorney for the defendants, and the district clerk, who was entrusted by the supreme court with the duty of passing upon the sufficiency of the bonds. There is reason in all things and the people here should apply a little of it in this case. They should realize that these men, even though proven guilty, have a perfect legal right to have their cases reviewed, and if error was made in the trial, to have a new trial. If they were not tried according to law in the first place it was not their fault, but the fault of the trial judge. We appreciate the fact that it seems hard that men must spend their time and money to convict cattle rustlers and then see them turned loose for a year or so and then probably get a new trial after the state's witnesses have scattered beyond recall, but there is only one way to do these things and that is the right way. We would not like to accept the responsibility of saying whether or not these men should be admitted to bail, or whether the bonds given are sufficient, but we would advise our friends, the cattlemen, to allow the law to take its course.

The State Journal's Washington correspondent has discovered Kem at the capitol, and has the following to say concerning him: "The house, during the past two weeks, has had much of Kem of Nebraska. In this time he has inserted himself into notice and his name into print in the congressional record with persistent insistency. He has been a chronic kicker. He has posed as the objector to requests for unanimous consent and has over and over again demanded the regular order for the purpose of cutting off debate upon a question or to deny another subject right to the floor. He has been sitting in his seat in the last row like a hen on a roost in a thunder storm during this session of congress and his name has appeared in the record with nearly every roll call, and of course, nearly always upon the wrong side of the question. To be sure, he popped up when the Dawson-McCarty claim was being discussed by Representatives Hainer and Mercer, with a request for information. He wasn't sure whether the parties in the affair lived in his district, or in the state, but he was positive that Alliance had the misfortune of being represented by him and if they lived in Alliance they must be in his district. Since then he has looked around for some means of inserting himself into notice and at last has fallen into a trap. There is no job on the floor easier than rising two or three times a day and calling for the regular order or objecting to unanimous consent, and it seems to suit the champion salary-drawer from Broken Bow to perfection. If he keeps up at the pace he is going, before the end of the session he will actually have become known by name to at least two or three men on the floor, besides the tally clerk, but his unwonted notoriety, it is feared, would have a bad effect upon him in the future. It was a sad thing in the beginning for the people of the Sixth district to send him down here, but if he would only keep still and say nothing, that might be forgiven."

PRESS COMMENT.
We notice that Judge Kinkaid is mentioned as one of the prominent candidates for contingent supreme judge. We believe that it would be hard to find a better man for the place.—Greeley-Leader Independent.

There is an unmistakable Kinkaid sentiment in the air that bodes no good to Useless Kem or any other pop. The Sixth has evidently grown weary of being represented by a nonentity and proposes to send a man next time. So mote it be.—Butte Gazette.

Judge Kinkaid will be nominated for congress. The rank and file of the party demands it and this will be no year for bosses. The people are taking an interest in politics. They want the right that the constitution and laws of this country gives them to name their choice from the president on down to the smallest office at home. There is no man in this district who feels more the sentiments of the common people than does Kinkaid. His interests are all here and his future home is here. He will be nominated.—Ainsworth Star-Journal.

It is a matter of no small concern to the state of Nebraska to own a citizen which is making himself felt in all parts of the land like John M. Thurston. Perhaps no American has arisen so steadily and powerfully by the force of his innate qualities as has John M. Thurston. Other men have been brought to the nation's notice by reason of toward circumstances, but every step in Thurston's advancement is due to his own worth. A man like that, with a solid state behind him and a nation admiring him is bound to make his mark in life.—Ord Quiz.

Among all the candidates for nomination by the republican state convention for any place upon the ticket, there is no one more eminently or specially qualified for the nomination sought after than is C. C. McNish for state treasurer. He is an attorney of splendid attainments, and a business man and a financier of the first rank. His chief traits are exactness and precision, and a rigid insistence upon strict business methods. Furthermore, his name is a synonym of integrity. No man is more jealous of his professional and official honor than C. C. McNish, and the affairs of the state treasury will be as straight as the moral code while he is responsible for their administration.—Wisner Chronicle.
