

NO HASTY MARRIAGES.

Higher Education Makes Women Less Dependent. "So long as the attraction of sex remains you cannot abolish marriage!" excitedly exclaimed the conservative man, according to Vogue.

"I have no desire to do away with marriage, but simply to mitigate it," replied the woman propagandist. And most thoughtful people will agree with the woman speaker that the recklessness which characterizes marriage should be moderated. It is encouraging to those whose hearts are touched by the manifold sorrows of humanity to observe that, in this matter of marriage (a most prolific source of misery to human beings), different agencies are at work, educating people to an appreciation of the gravity of the estate, and its tremendous consequences to individuals and to nations. The higher education of women has, from the start, shown a tendency to discipline those who took the college courses toward early marriages and toward imprudent ones—quite a large percentage of them moreover, taking up careers and remaining single. A recent canvass of college graduates is said to have shown that, while 90 per cent of non-college women become wives, only 55 per cent of college graduates resign their lives into the keeping of husbands. From other sources it is learned that those who marry do not swell the lists of invalid wives; neither do 50 per cent of the children born to them figure in mortality tables, as is the ghastly fact with the everyday woman's children. College women are not apt to marry a man to save him, and thus insure for children morally weak or vicious fathers; neither does love (?) in a cottage—translated in these days into a cheap flat in an unwholesome locality—appear to her finer or more winsome than the self-respecting independence of the bread-winning positions that are now within her reach. Years ago some conservative men had the perspicacity to realize and the courage to state that fuller life for women meant the lessening of her interest in marriage (the only profession her foremothers had been permitted to consider) and that she would be harder to please and more deliberate in her choice. That the phobias have come to pass is matter for congratulation or for condemnation, according to the observer's point of view.

A WIFE'S TYRANNY.

Some of the Awful Things She Does to Amey Her Husband. She contradicts him at the head of his own table, interrupts his anecdote to set him right on an utterly unimportant little detail—say the date of a transaction, which he makes the 7th of September and she asserts was the 8th; she interferes in all his arrangements, and questions his authority in the stables, the field, the church, the consulting-room; she apportioned his food and regulates the amount of wine he may take; should she dislike the smell of tobacco she will not allow him the most transient whiff of the most refined cigarette, and, like her brother with his victim, she teaches the children to despise their father by the frank contempt with which she treats him and the way in which she vents his opinion and denials his amity. If she is more affectionate than aggressive she renders him ridiculous by her effusiveness. Like the "Sammy, love," which roused Dean Alford's reprobation, she loads him with silly epithets of endearment before folk, oppresses him with personal attention and treats him generally as a sick child next door to an idiot. All out of love and its unreasoning tyranny she takes him into custody—in public as in private life—and allows him no kind of freedom. Robust and vigorous as he is, she worries over his health as though he were a confirmed invalid; in the hey-day of his maturity coddling him as if he were an octogenarian bordering on the second childhood. She continually uses the expression, "I shall not allow my husband to do so and so;" or, "I will make my husband do this or that." Never by any chance does she confess his right to free action, bound as he is in the chains of her tyrannous affection. In the end she makes him what she has long fancied him to be, a backboneless valetudinarian, whom the sun scorches to fever and the east wind chills to pneumonia—one who has lost the fruit by "fadding" about the fever.—Chicago Chronicle.

Dr. Clark's Novel Idea.

The Rev. F. E. Clark, president of the Christian Endeavorers, suggested a unique plan a week or two ago. It is to start a "chain of prayer," to reach clear around the world, and in which every member of the society, if he wishes, might form a link. Each Endeavorer is to offer one short petition every day for other members and for the cause at large. Special objects may from time to time be included. To become a link in the chain requires but one condition, viz., belief in prayer.

It Was Rotten.

A tory speaker in Berwickshire held a nut in his hand and said: "This represents the whole church question. This shell is the free church, good in its way, but not the best of things. Now crack this nut and you get the established church." He cracked it and it was rotten and he had to retire amid derisive cheers.—Fun.
