THE LAST WORD.

This is the last issue of THE FRONTIER before election, and in closing the campaign as far as we are concerned we desire to admonish republicans to work tirelessly and be vigilant, as by proper effort we are sure to be successful next Tuesday. Go to the polls early, stay late and have your weather eye on the count. The state committee promises to prosecute all fraud, either on the part of election officials or men who cast ballots who are not qualified voters. We have a new form of ballot this year that may be puzzling to some and you should be on hand to instruct those who do not understand its complications and see that they make no mistakes.

Do not be deceived by the sensational and fake stories that the populist papers are sure to spring this week. The campaign on their part has been conducted on the lowest plane of journalism. They have had no regard for common decency and have not been within speaking distance of the truth. Being unable to say anything against the men nominated on the republican ticket they have ransacked the dusty archives of the dead and forgotten past and dragged out the grim ghosts of former administrations—many of which they have misrepresented—with which to appeal to the passions and old time prejudices of the people, which no longer exist. No doubt they have reserved their most improbable stories for the last time, knowing that no opportunity will be afforded for their refutation. Every night during the present week the office of the Independent has been lighted up away into the small hours of the morning. The court house ring is there. They are probably reviving, reanimating and rejuvenating the roorbacks, the oormorants and the dancing dervishes which did such valiant service two years ago, and will set them to beating the tomtoms and sounding the sackbut this week. Look out for them and be not deceived thereby.

Voxz the eagle ticket and vote it straight.

THE NEW BALLOT.

During the past week many old-time populists have called at this office and requested that their names be added to the republican roll. Others say they are no longer populists and in proof of this say that they will work and vote for the entire ticket on election day with but one or two exceptions; these say: "I have a neighbor or an old friend on the populist ticket and that I feel it my duty to support him this time." Other populists say: "I intend to vote one-half of the populist and one-half of the republican ticket." Others say: "I feel so disgusted with my party nominees that I do not know what I will do until election day." In nearly every instance they ask us to advise them how they can, under the new election law, vote a mixed ticket, that is part republican and part populist. In view of the many inquiries we think it well to explain how they can vote such a ticket.

Now if you (a populist) wish to vote for only certain persons on the populist ticket and wish to vote for a number of republicans on the republican ticket you will make an X in the circle at the head of your party (populist) ticket only, then an X opposite the names of the republicans on the republican ticket that you want to vote for. The judges in counting your ballot will record your vote for the populist ticket with the exception of those persons on the republican ticket whose names you have placed an X opposite. Only the persons on the republican ticket having an X opposite their names will be counted for the republican ticket. In other words put an X in the circle at the head of your party ticket, then look over the names of the candidates appearing thereon and when you come to the name of a person on your ticket you do not want to vote for then make an X opposite the name of the republican candidate on the republican ticket for the office you want him to hold. You will then have voted a populist ticket with the exception of those on the republican ticket after whose names you have placed an X. Or if you do not fully understand you may pay no attention whatever to placing the X in the circle at the head of your party ticket but can place an X opposite the names of such persons on the several tickets that you wish to vote for, being careful to vote but for one person for the same office. A ballot so cast would be legal and would be like voting under the old law and your vote would count for only such persons as you had placed an X opposite the names.

LIES LIKE AN EPITAPH.

It seems to be the case that when a man becomes a candidate for office on the populist ticket in Holt county he considers it honorable and legitimate to throw whisky, boodle and lies where he thinks they will result in the most good to himself. And John Morrow is no exception. Mr. Harnish received the following letter this morning:

CHAMBERS, Oct. 26, 1897.

J. C. HARNISH: Mr. Fluckey, the present mail contractor, a republican and one of your friends, tells me that Morrow is circulating a story that you have promised to assist F. H. Charles, who is a pop, to get the mail route when tenders are let. Mr. Fluckey don't know what to think of the matter.

Yours for success,

R. C. Wax.

Mr. Harnish says the report circulated by Mr. Morrow bears not a syllable of truth; that he is not interesting himself in the private affairs of any man. The denial is sufficient and will be credited by all.

The public will be interested in this matter. It will be interesting to the people to learn that Mr. Morrow's regard for the truth is so feeble; that his conception of honor is so meager; that his moral status sinks so low; that his greed for office leads him down on a level with the liar, the slanderer and the back-biter.

We submit to the voters that a man of improper moral training is not qualified to stand at the head of and direct our educational interests.

Don't forget to vote for Bowden for county surveyor.

A NUMBER of people are supporting H. R. Henry from merely mercenary motives. They do not believe him to be the more capable, honest or trustworthy, but he owes them and they would like to furnish him a job and draw the salary themselves to apply on accounts long past due. This may be a matter of business with them but it is of no consequence to the great body of voters of the county further than to indicate to them the kind of a business head the gentleman has developed up to date. We do not think it a dishonor to be poor, as misfortune is liable to camp on any man's trail until it finally overtakes him, but it is not wise for the people to be too sympathetic when it comes to selecting a man for the responsible position of county treasurer and vote for him just because he is poor. When such a man is nominated for office by any party it then becomes a privilege and the duty of the voting public to inquire into the man's financial standing and business ability, and it is fair to take his individual interests as an indication of his qualifications. The office of the county treasurer is a business office and requires a business head to conduct it to the advantage of the public. If a man cannot conduct a little one-horse farm successfully, or as successfully as his neighbors who reside about him, how much more can you expect of him in the responsible position of treasurer? H. R. Henry has made a failure of his own business. He is in debt. He owes money that should have been paid long ago at any sacrifice. He owed money to the defunct Holt county bank, a considerable amount. Many widows, orphans, laboring men and hard-working farmers lost their little all in that memorable and lamentable failure, and a dividend from the amount owed by Mr. Henry would, had it been paid in to the receiver, have helped those unfortunate people out wonderfully. As stated above, we believe Mr. Henry should have paid the money, no matter what the sacrifice to himself might have been. The matter spoken of here is one of common knowledge to the people and they are now in a position to again say they do not approve of that way of doing business and are not ready to intrust that kind of a man with the duties devolving upon the county treasurer. They said it two years ago when the gentleman was a candidate for district clerk.

D. C. HARRISON was born March 20, 1848, in Edinburg, Scotland. Shortly after his birth his parents came to this country. In July, 1862, Mr. Harrison enlisted in the union army, 1st brigade, 3rd division, 14th army corps, and served through the war. He was one of the youngest men in the service. After the war he took a college course and at its completion studied law for two years in southwestern Iowa, and is therefore well qualified for the office of county judge. In 1879, when the yellow fever was raging throughout the south, he volunteered as nurse at Memphis, Tenn. In 1889 he moved to Holt county and settled in Verdigris township, where he has since resided. His standing at home will be shown by the fact that he will get a large majority in Verdigris, although it is a strong populist township. He was appointed postmaster at Emporia in 1891 and still holds the office. Since 1894 he has been chairman of the republican senatorial committee, a position which he has filled with credit to himself and the party. His election is conceded by his political opponents, and some of the strongest populists in the county admit that he will make the best judge Holt county has had for years. Mr. Harrison is a hardworking farmer and not a politician, but is in every way qualified to perform the duties of the office. Vote for Harrison.

JAMES C. HARNISH was born in Riverburg, Clarion county, Penn., June 4, 1856, and received his education at the public schools of his native town and at Clarion collegiate institute, one of the leading educational institutions in that section. At an early age he evinced a desire to go west and seek his fortune, and on September 21, 1882, he located in Niobrara, Neb. At the latter place he worked in a general store for some time, and his ability and fitness for a clerical position secured him a position in the United States land office, then located at that place, a position he held until he resigned it to accept the position of deputy county clerk under Ed Butler. On February 21, 1886 he was married to Miss Jennie Jacobs, of Blackbird, Holt county. That he will be the next Superintendent of this county we think there is no question, and he will conduct the affairs of that office in such a manner as to reflect credit upon the people who placed him there. Vote for Jim Harnish and the upbuilding of the public schools of Holt county.

THERE is not a reputable attorney in this state that would say that Judge Post has ever been in the least prejudicial or influenced in any of his decisions on account of politics. Judge Post is too broad minded to do such an act. The people generally hold that same opinion of him and will so express themselves on election day. The mud slinging that has been indulged in against him in both the former and present campaigns emanated from a source that can possibly carry no weight with honest or intelligent voters.—Grand Island (free silver) Democrat.

An omen that portends much good for the republican ticket next Tuesday is the evident determination of populist voters to be less hide bound than formerly, and vote for a set of honest and efficient officers regardless of their political affiliations. This resolution on their part is patriotic and commendable. In such freedom of thought and action lies the safety of the commonwealth. When voters firmly refuse to be dictated to by party bosses, cliques and clans, they have performed a valuable service to the government.

THE court-house syndicate must be getting desperate when they have to resort to falsehoods to secure votes for their candidates. Vote for the republican ticket straight and turn these ringsters out.

WHEN Mr. Liese was nominated by the populists for the office of county clerk he said in his speech of acceptance that he would do no electioneering, ask no man to vote for him. The gentleman's actions of late call his veracity into serious question. He has been rustling around lately like a frenzied gold-seeker on Bonanza creek, and like many of those poor fellows in the land of the midnight sun he will find that he has staked out a barren claim. Collins will win in a walk.

THE man who said "the common observation of the common people is better than the opinion of a specialist in theories" wrote a salient and self-evident truth. The common observation of the common people of Holt county two years ago was that H. R. Henry ought not to be elected to office, and their wise conclusion reached at that time will hold good this fall as against the opinions of political specialists who forced him upon the people and the party again this fall.

MINISTERS are expected to pay more attention to the conversion of souls than to dabbling in politics. Let this be a warning to those preachers who are more interested in drawing the shekels from the people's pockets than they are in their spiritual welfare. The above will effect the conscience of those only who are guilty.—St. Paul Press.

THE Ewing Advocate secured the contract for printing the ballots this year. The new management of the Independent doesn't seem to be as high all around. This is the first time since the adoption of the Australian ballot system that the contract has been let outside of O'Neill.

THE court-house "gang" will soon discover what the people think of them. Next Tuesday night they will imagine themselves suddenly transported to the frigid climate of Alaska.

BRO. BATES, on the Stuart Ledger, has landed repeatedly on the solar plexus of the populist party during the campaign. His heavy swings and short arm jabs are effective.

JOHN ALDERSON will carefully guard the county funds entrusted to his care. He has no boss, who wants to go into the banking business, to stake. Vote for Alderson.

HARRISON may not be as smooth a politician as Selah, but he will make a better judge.

If you have ever seen a little child in a paroxysm of whooping cough, or if you have been annoyed by a constant tickling in the throat, you can appreciate the value of One Minute Cough Cure, which gives quick relief.

HEBESHISER & GILLIGAN.

Moments are useless if trifled away; and they are dangerously wasted if consumed by delay in cases where One Minute Cough Cure would bring immediate relief. HEBESHISER & GILLIGAN.
