Lynch Journal: E. J. Mack was over the first of the week from O'Neill looking after the Ditch company's feeders here and swapping gossip with his many friends.

Editor Josiah Combs, of the Spencer Advocate, blew in with the wind Monday. He made this office a call and swapped a few yarns about politics and business.

Joel Coykendall is prostrate from apoplexy, which came on yesterday. The right side is paralyzed and the victim is speechless. Mr. Coykendall is near eighty years of age, but Dr. Gilligan tells us he may recover all right, as it is the first attack. Thomas Quilty an old gentleman of about the same age, is also prostrate from the same cause.

The State Journal March 20 contained the following special from Ewing: A report comes from Bliss, twenty miles south of Ewing, of the accidental shooting of Mrs. J. N. Summerer by her husband. The wound was inflicted by a shotgun at close range, the charge entering the woman side. She is in a critical condition and her husband is crazed by the results of his carelessness.

The Academy Dramatic company presented "Through Snow and Sunshine," to a $150 house last Saturday night. The play was one of the strongest ever staged by amateur players in this section and the words of praise received by them after the rendition of the drama is evidence of the ability with which the characters were presented, and were very gratifying to the members of the company.

Blair Polit: A Boston Judge in deciding a breach of promise suit based on the fact that the contract was made on Sunday, held that the contract was legal and added: "I should doubt very much if it was generally thought that an engagement made on Sunday was void. In the part of the country where my youth was passed, through it may have been only a pleasant delusion, we used to think that such engagements were the thing for Sunday and that was especially what Sunday evening was instituted for."

FOR SALE—My suburban home, just outside city limits, consisting of six acres of fine bottom land, all well fenced with net wire fencing and set to fruits, shrubbery, shade and ornamental trees, 150 fruit trees part of which are bearing. Three good wells, windmill and supply tank for irrigating purposes. Will sell cheap. Inquire of Theo Walmer. 37-2

A verdant youth from the country came into The Frontier's back yard the other morning with gore in his eye and determination on his brow. He had been in town the day previous and tied his horse to a bale of hay at neighbor Keyes' hay barn. Mr. Keyes discovered the horse contentedly eating hay at his expense and walked out to it, removed and brought the saddle in. The verdant youth with gore in his eye and determination on his brow sought from sundown till morning bright for his saddle and approaching Mr. Keyes a la Pinkerton the lost article was restored, a hint being suggested that it might be well to tie his nag elsewhere when he came to town.

Samuel Beavers has purchased the Will Walmer property near the Presbyterian church and moved thereto, Mr. Stansberry and family, who had occupied the place, having moved into the first residence east of the power house, which Mr. Stansberry bought of Alfred Minnick.

We clip the following from the musical department of the Omaha Bee: "Miss Nellie Hagerty, pianist, pupil of Mr. Schubert of Fremont, gave a piano recital last Saturday night in that city, playing the 'Moonlight Sonata' (Beethoven), 'A Day in Venice' (Nevin) and Chopin numbers bracketed. She was assisted by Mr. Preston, basso, and by Miss Yakish and Mr. Bloomer, violinists." To be able to command favorable mention in the metropolitan press is something does not fall to the lot of every professional. In Fremont, where Miss Hagerty is studying, her talent is in frequent demand on musical occasions. O'Neill people are pleased at her advancement.

The Academy Dramatic company has consented to produce the famous Irish Drama entitled the Wanderers Dream, a beautiful realistic story of love, suffering and patriotism, which brilliantly portrays the affection of the people of Ireland for honor liberty and justice. Inasmuch as the Shamrock is now allowed, "by order of the Queen" to grow on Irish soil, the heart of every lover of liberty will go out in sympathy to this beautiful drama which gloriously assisted in keeping alive the sentiment of purity, which are emblematic of the dear little shamrock. The date set for the production of this play will be the first week of May and the cast of characters, which we will publish later, will be as strong as possible, ensuring an evening of pleasant enjoyment for all.

Two weeks from next Tuesday city election comes off and while the campaign has not warmed up very much as yet the indications are that before the election is over it will be warm enough to suit all parties interested. The candidates for mayor are Ed F. Gallagher and David Stannard, and we have heard it said that George Washington Triggs is a third candidate and has passed around a petition, but as the document has not come to our notice we cannot assert to the correctness of the report. James F. Gallagher, now city clerk, is a candidate for re-election and is opposed by Sam Barnard. For treasurer, the present incumbent, B. McGreevey, is a candidate, D. A. Doyle being his opponent. So far but one candidate for police judge is in the field, Police Judge Davidson is up for re-election. In the First ward O. O. Snyder will probably have the field to himself in the councilman race, he being the only candidate out, and seems to be acceptable to all. The Second ward is in the same happy condition, Frank Campbell being the solitary candidate, and will probably be given a certificate of election without opposition. But in the Third—the bloody Third—it is different. A. B. Newell and F. C. Gatz are rivals for the honor of representing that ward on the council and the fight promises to be a warm one.

A Typical Democrat.
Atkinson Republican:
A good story is told at the expense of a delegate from the west end of the county, to the recent democratic county convention at O'Neill. After arriving at the "Emerald-Tinted City," he inquired of some of his friends where the convention was going to meet. He was informed that the meeting would take place at Campbell's. He immediately hid himself to Campbell's which, in accord with the "eternal fitness of things," was a place well supplied with a variety of democratic prerequisites always on tap in a well ordered saloon, and kept by a man named Campbell. He secured an easy chair and waited the arrival of the delegates. In the meantime the convention had met at Frank Campbell's implement house, and after effecting a temporary organization, appointing committees, etc., they, at the request of a prominent democrat, adjourned to attend a short "spiritual" seneca at Tom Campbell's genial resort and garnish their vocal organs with the usual democratic elixir. As a matter of course, on dropping into the aforesaid saloon, the spirits-invoking delegates fresh from the dry quarters of the implement sheds, discovered their anxiously expectant brother delegate from the wild and woolly borders of Holt, comfortably ensconced in an arm chair, evidently trying to personify "Patience sitting on a monument, smiling at grief." One of his co-delegates, surprised at his delinquency, exclaimed: "Why, Bill, where have you been? we have been wondering where you had gone." "I have been right here, inhaling the pure spirit of Jack-sonian democracy," replied Bill—"You said you were going to meet at Campbell's and as this is Campbell's place and as he sells whisky, I supposed that democrats would naturally go where there is that kind of inspiration on tap, so I thought I was in the right place."
