The Independent, "with sublime innocence," comments on a column in the Stuart Ledger under the head, "Backhaus Notes." The Frontier is again called upon to remark that perhaps Mr. Eves of Amelia will be surprised to learn that this same comment appeared in the Gordon Journal a week before it did in the Independent. But perhaps the Independent's intelligent compositor is to blame for "inadvertently" overlooking the introduction which Mr. Eves can now explain was written to "protect himself."

Chambers Bogle: The old settlers' picnic was in every-sense a success. The address of welcome by J. M. Alderson is highly spoken of by those who were present. Numerous speeches were made by those who many years ago aided in making this part of the county destined to be the part. The program was carried out as published with Uncle Ralph as manager. The chair was occupied by L. G. Lambert. The music by the Chambers brass band is reported to have been of a very high order, and elicited much praise.

Ewing Advocate: Monday C. T. Anson and S. L. Whitmore of Venus were in Ewing on the trail of seven hogs which had been stolen from Mr. Anson Friday night. He identified them among a lot of hogs which VanZandt Brothers had bought Saturday from Ed Lyons and Frank Angus. As soon as it was known that Mr. Anson was in town, Lyons appropriated Mrs. Burlew's pony and commenced to make his get-away. He was followed by Constable Finwall but without success. Lyons turned the pony loose several miles out and it returned home. Mr. Angus offered to settle for his son's escapade but Mr. Anson refused. Frank Angus claims to be a victim of Lyons who he says is the principal and real offender.

"Finnigan's Ball" underlined for an engagement in this city at the opera house, September 26, has been a most invigorating success both financially and artistically. In every city where this combination has appeared, the theatres have been tested to their utmost capacity and many turned away, unable to secure even standing room. There are reasons for this truly wonderful success of "Finnigan's Ball." It is a farce-comedy, with a plot, introducing the latest ideas in the way of novelties. It is a play you can attend and witness nothing that will offend or bore, and it is safe to say that you will not hear or see a number, incident to the play that was previously given by another company. Everything—song, dance, melody and dialogue—was gotten up for this production. Special scenery, mechanical and electrical effects are carried intact for each act, which enables the management to offer a play perfect in every detail.

Many Nebraska towns have exhibited their enterprise during this month by holding fairs or carnivals. The success achieved and the benefit accrued to the business interests of the towns has been more than expected by the promoters. This reminds The Frontier that O'Neill business men are not keeping up to the times. Nothing is done to draw trade or attract attention. No harvest season should pass without some effort made to furnish the profile of the rural districts a chance for a celebration. This will draw crowds to town and be of material benefit, especially to the merchants. Many towns have adopted the street fair plan. Several days are given up to pageantry and large crowds flock in, spend their good money and go away feeling that they have had a good time. O'Neill could build a hay palace and present a carnival that would attract attention far and wide. The Frontier would like to see the business men of O'Neill fall in line with the enterprising men of the state and toot the public horn a few blasts.

DRS. KINSLOW.

His Method of Treatment A Boon to Suffering Humanity.

We base our ability to locate and treat disease on our perfect knowledge of the anatomy of the human body and existing pathological conditions. Osteopathy stands alone. It has no equal; it cures all curable diseases, except the purely surgical.

The osteopath regulates the human body as a machine, a perfect machine, capable of running on indefinitely, if kept in perfect order. If you are sick, some part of your system is out of order. If so, try the only natural, permanent and satisfactory method of cure—Osteopathy. It relieves pain, corrects nerve action, frees the circulation of the blood and other fluids of the body by adjusting displaced bones, ligaments and muscles. It equalizes the vital forces and restores harmony to every part of the system.

It invigorates nutrition and assimilation and also gives perfect drainage for the wastes of the organism. Many of the most hopeless cases are cured by its wonderful power. Osteopathy is the great discovery of the age, and it cures are affected by the application of unerring laws.

The following is a list of some of the diseases amenable to this treatment: Nervous diseases, asthma, rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, wry-neck, diseases of the nose, throat and air passages, catarrh, deafness, loss of voice, eye affections, stomach and liver diseases, diarrhea and constipation, hip joint and all joint diseases, spine curvature paralysis, atrophy, varicose veins and ulcers, eczema, swollen glands, heart disease, kidney and bladder diseases, goitre, piles, pimples and other blemishes of the face, spasms and cramps, diseases of women, painful menstruation and irregularities. Consultation and examination absolutely free.

ENGLISHMEN ABROAD.

Why They Are Disliked When Away from Home.

Writes an Englishman: "One of the reasons which make us so much disliked as a nation abroad is the way we carry our customs with us and oblige the foreigner, for the sake of his own pocket, to conform to them. At the watering places which are much frequented by the English the hours of meals slowly alter at the principal hotels to suit the English taste. Wherever there is an English colony there arises soon an English cricket club, golf club, lawn tennis club, sometimes a man's club, and the little society acquire an unity and corporateness which no other nation achieves. In deference to the fact that the English prefer to speak their own language, the hotel keeper, keen on attracting English custom, engages English-speaking employees. The English come and pay, take everything as a matter of course, convey to the other nations how much superior are the English hours, ways, games and, above all, that even in his own country the foreigner is still the poor miserable foreigner. Now the P. M. F. naturally does not like any of this, and I believe he hates the games worst of all. I remember once, at a French watering place, a party were playing golf on some newly laid out links. A citizen of the district walked across them and stopped in front of the next hole in order to observe what the mad English were doing. The golfers yelled to him in both languages to get out of the way, but he did not budge. He felt he was on his native heath, did not understand the excitement and wanted to see the end of it. Finally the girl, in a rage, gave a tremendous drive. The ball whizzed along and bounded unexpectedly into the amazed citizen. He swore. How he swore and danced! It was impossible that he was hurt, but it was the contumely of the thing that enraged him. That a party of despicable foreigners should dare treat a citizen of the most glorious country in the world in such a way, to bombard him with their vile balls in his own country, on the soil of France! It took two hours of hard work to properly soothe him."
