

The Maybee Love Affair.

BY ADA C. SWEET.
(Copyright, 1932, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)
The stenographer bowed to the coachman on his box.
Joyce took off his hat and then leaped down and stood ready to speak to the fair and dignified young woman. She asked after the man's family, bowed again, smilingly, and walked quickly away, down the long, lighted street.
It was half past five in the evening.
More than one pair of eyes noted the chance meeting upon the sidewalk. The coachman climbed back to his seat, muttering to himself.
He was waiting for his employer, Henry Maybee, the railway magnate. At last Maybee came out into the open air rejoicing in his liberty. As he opened his carriage door, for himself, Maybee was arrested by the sound of honest Joyce's voice.
"I've just seen Miss Salome, sir."
"Where," asked Maybee, looking up and down the street.
"She came out of that big door, sir, an hour ago, and she stopped and asked after the children, and then went her way without saying anything about herself."
"Well—which way?" Maybee's voice was anxious.
"Just down street—that way," said the man.
"Very good, thank you, Joyce."
"She do be workin' in this big place," said Joyce.
Mr. Maybee stepped into the carriage, closed the door, and Joyce gathered up the reins for the home ward drive.

Before the fire sat Lewis, the rich man's son. He looked up when his father came in. His salutation was but an indifferent murmur.
The elder man affected a brisk cheerfulness. He drew his chair to the fire, threw the evening papers to Lewis, and feigned not to notice that they dropped upon the rug.
"How are you, and has the doctor been here to-day?" inquired the father.
"Yes, father, same old story," answered the young man. "Advices a change, and all that—"

"You must have a change," began the elder Maybee—
"Quiet and rest would be a change," sighed Lewis. "I've been traveling these six months—and I'm tired of new things. Let me stay here. I like the sameness of life that the doctor complains of."

His face drooped again—the pale, listless face.
He sat down far back in his deep chair, and to his father's ear there came the whispering sound of a half stifled sigh.

"What shall I do with Lewis, Doctor?"
"What's the matter with him?"
"What's the matter with him? Why, you're his physician and ought to know!" retorted Mr. Maybee.
"What's the real matter with him?" persisted the doctor.
"In love," said the father, laconically.

"And a hard case," the doctor muttered, "lasts a good while—travel, change, other women, sea voyage, and

When Alice started out from Mr. Leavett's house it was half-past five. When she and Tony were still two miles from the woods, at a lonely turn in the road, the horse suddenly shied, then stood stock still. A woman was standing directly before them—a tall woman dressed in black, with a big mourning veil over her face.
"Oh, miss," she whined in a feeble voice, "can you tell me where I will find Silas Perry's house? I'm his mother, and I wrote him to meet me at the Junction. But he couldn't get the letter—he was always a good son, Silas was. Is it a long walk to his house?"
"Walk! You can't walk it. You must be real old," said Alice hospitably. "Get in with me. I go right by Silas Perry's house."
With a muttered "Thank you," the woman climbed awkwardly into the sleigh.
"Let me take your satchel," said Alice, making room at her feet; but the woman clung to it. "It's got all I own in the world in it," she said. So she sat prim and severe, with her precious satchel in her lap, while Alice tucked the warm robes about her.

The moon came up and shone with little scuds of cloud across it. They were very silent. All at once Tony's quick pace and the wind together

The wind caught the veil and disarranged it, caught the black veil and tossed it out of place. It was quickly snatched back, but Alice had seen—whiskers! Her blood ran cold. It was the man at the station. He was after the money. What should she do. It would do no good to shriek. She must think quickly.

Suddenly Tony began to dance. The girl gave a peculiar little twist to the line—it was an old trick they had played with a rope in the field. Something frightened him," the girl cried breathlessly, "but I guess I can hold him." Dance, kick, snort, Tony seemed possessed of a veritable evil spirit. When she had quieted him a bit, the girl suddenly clapped one hand to the bosom of her jacket. "I've lost it!" she cried excitedly—"the money—pa's money—it was a hundred and seventy-five dollars."
"I had it a minute ago. Can't you see it back there?" The figure by her side turned its head. Yes, there in the gleam of the light on the snow was a small dark packet. "I can't leave Tony," cried the girl. "Can't you—won't you, please, get it for me!"

Depositing the precious satchel, the figure climbed reluctantly down from the sleigh and started back toward the object. It was almost reached.
"S—s—s, Tony!" Alice cried under her breath—and instantly Tony was off at great leaps, quieting gradually to long, even strides as he neared the forest road.

The girl never moved; all she said was "S—s—s!" at intervals. The trees shoo by. Was it an hour, two hours, a week? The light of the Perry farmhouse showed through the thinning trees. Tony slowed down and turned the curve of the home drive with sides foaming, nostrils dilating and eyes fairly bursting from their sockets. The father was waiting at the gate, the mother on the stoop, Sarah and Wallie Burch at the window. It was nine o'clock.

"What in the world!" ejaculated the farmer. Alice thrust the money into her father's hand and flung her arms about her mother's neck. "I've had my experience," she cried, and fainted dead away.
The next morning when the satchel was brought in, it was found to contain a revolver, an ugly-looking knife and a small dark lantern.

"I hope he enjoyed the peanut candy," drawled Alice languidly.—Grace Adele Pierce in Los Angeles Times.

Penal Institutions.
Commenting upon the manner in which young men are made to work in the technical schools as compared with the more easy ways of life in colleges, President Pritchett of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology told this story on his own institution at the recent installation of Alexander C. Humphreys as president of Stevens Institute:
"At a civil service examination in Massachusetts there was one applicant who had tried the course at Tech' with ill results. A question on the paper asked the names of the penal institutions of Massachusetts, and this was the reply:
"The state prison at Charlestown, the reformatory for women at Sherburne and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology."—New York Times.
