A VOICE FROM WALL STREET

The Independent thought it found something great when, in looking around for something to apply as an answer to a pointed question in The Frontier, it ran across an associated press dispatch from Washington concerning a conference of republican leaders with the president. It quotes the whole thing—which, by the way, has about as much bearing on our question as Milton's "Paradise Lost"—and puts in "caps" this much of it:

"It was permitted to become known after Mr. Cortelyou's arrival here that he has been assured of abundant funds with which to conduct a winning campaign."

What this has to do with our query that if President Roosevelt was Wall street's candidate why did Wall street force Parker's nomination we don't know. Parker is notoriously the favorite of the plutocrats, and the Independent knows it. The Frontier calls the Independent's attention to the testimony of the Wall Street Journal, the official organ of the money kings, which says:

"It is safe to say that while Wall street will contribute to the campaign fund of both political parties this year the largest share of campaign money will go to Judge Parker. Very confident assertions are made by local democratic politicians that there will be ANY AMOUNT OF STANDARD OIL MONEY FOR PARKER. The hatred of the 'high finance' for President Roosevelt is undiminished, and, indeed, rather refreshed by the hope of defeating him. He is unforgotten, because he is unrepentant. IT IS STILL IN WALL STREET AS IT WAS IN FEBRUARY, 1903, ANYTHING TO BEAT ROOSEVELT."

What do you think of this testimony direct from headquarters? Assuredly our esteemed contemporary knows that the great and ravenous representatives of the plutocratic combines are straining every bloated sinew to defeat Roosevelt because he stands with the great common people; it knows that there are many democrats and populists on its own list of readers who as between Parker and Roosevelt a thousand times prefer the latter. The Independent professes to be populist in politics, but its attitude toward the national candidates can be construed in no other way than it has sold itself to the Hill crowd.

M. F. Harrington comes out in the World-Herald with an able discussion of the fusion question in Nebraska. He virtually sets himself against fusion by demanding that the candidate for governor be one pledged to vote for Watson—in other words, fusion on state and division on national issues. Two of the ablest populists in the state, Harrington and Allen, are now arrayed against fusion and they will come pretty nearly having their way.

It is amusing to read some of the democratic state papers since the nomination of Parker. Those chaps who are so wedded to the name "democrat" that they would support any sort of contradictory men or measures are now explaining their reversal of themselves on the grounds that "it is a cardinal principle of democracy that a majority should rule." It also appears to be a cardinal doctrine with the democrats to humbug the public if they can.

When it comes to a showdown, the European isn't in it in any sense of the word. This has just been demonstrated again by the American athletes from Yale and Harvard winning six out of nine over the flower of the British Isles.

STIRING PARAGRAPHS

From President Roosevelt's Speech of Acceptance.

Three years ago I became President because of the death of my lamented predecessor. I then stated that it was my purpose to carry out his principles and policies for the honor and the interest of the country. To the best of my ability I have kept the promise thus made. If next November my countrymen confirm at the polls the action of the convention you represent, I shall, under Providence, continue to work with an eye single to the welfare of all our people.

We who have been intrusted with power as public servants during the past seven years of administration and legislation now come before the people content to be judged by our record of achievement. In the years that have gone by we have made the deed square with the word; and if we are continued in power we shall unswervingly follow out the great lines of public policy which the Republican party has already laid down; a public to which we are giving and shall give, a united, and therefore an efficient, support.

In all of this we are more fortunate than our opponents, who now appeal for confidence on the ground, which some express and some seek to have confidentially understood, that if triumphant they may be trusted to prove false to every principle which in the last eight years they have laid down as vital, and to leave undisturbed those every acts of the administration because of which they ask that the administration itself be driven from power.

Seemingly their present attitude as to their past record is that some of them were mistaken and others insincere.

Our opponents, either openly or secretly, according to their several temperaments, now ask the people to trust their present promises in consideration of the fact that they intend to treat their past promises as null and void. We know our own minds and we have kept of the same mind for a sufficient length of time to give to our policy coherence and sanity.

In dealing with the great organizations known as trusts, we do not have to explain why the laws were not enforced, but to point out that they actually have been enforced and that legislation has been enacted to increase the effectiveness of their enforcement. We do not have to propose to "turn the rascals out," for we have shown in every deed that whenever by diligent investigation a public official can be found who has betrayed his trust he will be punished to the full extent of the law without regard to whether he was appointed under a republican or a democratic administration.

We know what we mean when we speak of an honest and stable currency. We mean the same thing from year to year. We do not have to avoid a definite and conclusive commitment on the most important issue which may at any time in the near future be before them again.

Upon the principles which underlie this issue the convictions of half of our number do not clash with those of the other half. So long as the republican party is in power the gold standard is settled, not as a matter of temporary political expediency, not because of shifting conditions in the production of gold in certain mining centers, but in accordance with what we regard as the fundamental principles of national morality and wisdom.

In the fiscal year that has just closed the excess of income over the ordinary expenditures was nine millions of dollars. This does not take account of the fifty millions expended out of the accumulated surplus for the purchase of the Isthmian Canal. It is an extraordinary proof of the sound financial condition of the nation that instead of following the usual course in such matters and throwing the burden upon posterity by an issue of bonds, we were able to make the payment outright and yet after it to have in the Treasury a surplus of one hundred and sixty-one millions. Moreover, we were able to pay this fifty millions of dollars out of hand, without causing the slightest disturbance to business conditions.

That whenever the need arises there should be readjustment of the tariff schedules is undoubted; but such changes can with safety be made only by those whose devotion to the principle of protective tariff is beyond question; for otherwise the changes would amount not to readjustment but to repeal. The readjustment when made must maintain and not destroy the protective principle.

We believe in reciprocity with foreign nations on the terms outlined in President McKinley's last speech, which urged the extension of our foreign markets by reciprocal agreements whenever they could be made without injury to American industry and labor.

It is a singular fact that the only great reciprocity treaty recently adopted—that with Cuba—was finally opposed almost alone by the representatives of the very party which now states that it favors reciprocity. And here again we ask that the worth of our words be judged by comparing their deeds with ours.

We recognize the organization of capital and the organization of labor as natural outcomes of our industrial system. Each kind of organization is to be favored so long as it acts in a spirit of justice and of regard for the rights of others. Each is to be granted the full protection of the law, and each in turn is to be held to a strict obedience to the law, for no man is above it and no man below it. The humblest individual is to have his rights safeguarded as scrupulously as those of the strongest organization, for each is to receive justice, no more and no less. The problems with which we have to deal in our modern industrial and social life are manifold; but the spirit in which it is necessary to approach their solution is simply the spirit of honesty, of courage, and of common sense.
