Swain's Big City Show is the only first class attraction which is now traveling in this part of the country. The opera-house manager is trying to secure it for his patrons. The company carries fourteen people and will no doubt be the event of the season. The attraction will probably be here about the middle of the month.

Perry Miller of Phoenix was a pleasant caller on Monday. Mr. Miller is one of the substantial men from a substantial section of the country. He has been a reader of The Frontier since the day it was founded and intends to continue it. Speaking of county division, he thinks it would be an extremely unwise move to divide the county.

November 1 marked the close of the fishing season and opening of the quail season. Quails are the legitimate property of any one who is good enough shot to get them during the month of November only. The law says that no fish shall be caught from now till next April, but it is probable there will be plenty of fish on the market and tables just the same.

The ballots for next Tuesday's election have been delivered to the county clerk who is sending them out with the poll books to the various townships. There are five presidential tickets, republican, democratic, populist, prohibition and socialist. The ballot is over five feet long and was printed in two sections and pasted together.

Lincoln Star: The right of a county treasurer to discriminate between county banks bonded as county depositories was one of the most important cases to be submitted to the supreme court at the beginning of the November session this morning. The question is involved in the suit of the First National bank of O'Neill against Cronin and the First National bank of Atkinson against Cronin, appealed from Holt county. In these cases the bankers charge that they have complied with the county depository law and have given depository bonds to County Treasurer Cronin, but that the county treasurer does not give them an equal share of county deposits with other banks at O'Neill and Atkinson. The banks seek by mandamus to compel the treasurer to distribute the funds to the several banks in a fair and equitable manner.

Spencer Advocate: Mrs. Dennis Handley, mother of our fellow-townsmen P. J. Handley, has so far recovered from her illness that she was able to return to her home at O'Neill on Saturday last. She has been in the hospital at Omaha for the past three weeks. Pat went down to the city last week and accompanied his mother to her home on Saturday, and returning to Spencer Sunday.

These are strenuous days around O'Neill newspaper offices. The Frontier has had about double its capacity with the present force and regrets that some of its patrons have been inconvenienced by having to wait for their work. We hope to be soon caught up so that work can be turned out as fast as wanted. Frontier readers will also bear with us a little until we can get some of the job printing out of the way and have more time to gather news for the paper.

Col. Bryan has come and gone. The great orator failed to draw anything like a multitude or sway with silver tongue or stirring eloquence those who came to hear him. The man who once could draw attentive ears at O'Neill from fifty miles around was met at the Northwestern depot Friday night as the late train came in by a few local fusion leaders without blare of trumpet or beating of drum. A chicken hunt Saturday forenoon, a political but not violent harangue in the afternoon and the colonel was on his way west, where he spoke at Stuart in the evening. His speech here failed to arouse any marked enthusiasm. It consisted of ironical but vague references to the new revenue law, of apologies and explanations why he, a silver democrat, was in favor of the election of a gold democrat to the presidency and clever moralizing on the duty of American citizens. Perhaps Mr. Bryan's very ardent admirers were pleased, but those who are in the habit of weighing things for what they are worth were disappointed. They had expected more than they got.
