A Word For Dad.

We happened at a home the other night, and over the parlor door saw the legend worked in letters of gold, "What Is Home Without a Mother?" Across the room was another brief, "God Bless Our Home." These mottoes will be found in many homes, worked by nimble fingers, and expressive of the love and devotion felt by the members of the household for the holiest and happiest of earth's blessings—"Mother" and "Home." "Home, home, Sweet home; be it ever so humble, there's no place like home." But there is another factor in the blessedness of home that is too often forgotten, or, at least, perhaps sometimes, not fully appreciated, and that factor is "Dad." It is no discouragement to "Mother" to say that alongside of the above legend this other would be appropriate, "God Bless Our Dad!" An exchange says:

"Dad gets up early, lights the fire, boils an egg, grabs his dinner pail and wipes off the dew of the dawn while many a mother is sleeping. He makes the weekly handout to the butcher, the grocer, the milkman and the baker, and his pile is badly worn before he has been home an hour. He stands off the bailiff and keeps the rent paid up.

"If there is a noise during the night Dad is nudged in the back and made to go down stairs and find the burglar and kill him. Mother darns the socks, but Dad buys the socks in the first place, and the needles and the yarn afterward. Mother puts up the fruit well, but Dad buys it all and jars and sugar costs like the mischief. "Dad buys chickens for the Sunday dinner, carves them himself and draws the neck from the ruins after every one is served. "What is home without a Mother?" Yes, that is all right. But, "What is home without a Father?" Ten chances to one it is a boarding house, father is under the slab and the landlord is a widow.

Dad, here's to you. You have got your faults—you may have lots of them—but we will miss you when you're gone."

Yes, dear old, appreciated Dad! The legend which ought to grace the walls of the cottage or the palace in your honor, may not appear. You may tread the pathway of life, bearing the burdens cheerfully and ungrudgingly, and go down to the grave unhonored and unsung in framed legends, but you will be missed and mourned nevertheless in the cold, gray days when you can no longer answer the call for your services, and will receive your reward on the other shore. God bless Dad!
