

MULLEN CAUSES ARREST

County Attorney Begins Action Against Clarence Tenborg.

ALLEGES ILLEGAL LIQUOR SALES

Preliminary Hearing Begun Monday in County Court and Continued Until Saturday.

County Attorney Mullen instituted proceedings last Friday on behalf of the state of Nebraska against Clarence Tenborg, of the village of Emmet. Tenborg is charged with selling intoxicating liquors without a license.

Sheriff Hall went to Emmet Friday and served the warrant on Tenborg and also made a search of his premises but found no liquors.

The case was brought to trial before County Judge Malone on Monday, a large number of witnesses being called from Emmet and vicinity. Various witnesses testified to having drunk pop, seltzer water, bitters, and an article known at Emmet as "peawall." The state secured an admission from one or two witnesses that the bitters might be called whisky and the "peawall" beer. The county attorney had much difficulty, however, in establishing dates anywhere nearly accurately as to when these drinks were dispensed, as the "peawall" seemed to have a bad effect on the memory of several of the witnesses.

The state brought E. R. Adams, agent of the Northwestern railroad at O'Neill, and the records of freight shipments from this point, into court, which records and testimony of Mr. Adams disclosed that a number of cases of liquor had been shipped from a local dispensary to Tenborg Bors. at Emmet.

One witness for the state was absent and the case was continued over until Saturday, January 20, at 10 o'clock, when further testimony will be taken and the arguments made.

Mr. Dickson is defending Mr. Tenborg and Mr. Mullen prosecuting the case.

Wants to Start Mill.

J. W. Isaacson of Page was in town Tuesday looking over the grounds and feeling the public pulse with a view to putting in a mill here. Mr. Isaacson says he has the machinery for a mill and expects to establish a mill some place as soon as an opening presents itself. He prefers to remain in Holt county, where he has been for fifteen years and where all his interests are. O'Neill presents many favorable features for a mill, he thinks. He would expect to operate the mill by water power and utilize the old mill race which he thinks could be put in shape at small cost.

Mr. Isaacson believes the country has reached a stage of development when there should be a good mill established here and believes it will come sooner or later. He is not a practical miller himself but says he is an engineer and is confident of success should he start the enterprise.

It is a matter that the Commercial Club will doubtless do all it can to help along and a meeting of that body is expected to be called in the near future at which Mr. Isaacson says he will submit a proposition if desired.

Gamblers are getting a touch of the law in other towns than O'Neill. Down at Fremont the other day five of the profession were caught in the police net, three of them being fined $25 each and the other two $50 each, with trimmings.

Coal has been discovered in Boyd county on the farm of Joseph Klansn, four miles west of Gross. It is said that the vein appears to be a paying quantity one, and it is hoped by the citizens of that section that the prediction will prove true. Coal has been found in other sections of that county.

Next Monday night the O'Neill Dramatic company will put upon the boards at the opera house for the pleasure of O'Neill theatre goers that entertaining farce comedy entitled "Chuckles," under the direction of Francis J. McCarthy. The cast is extra strong and the play promises to be a great success.

A new affliction is doing some mischief among cattle, according to a report from Brown county. It is stated that the state veterinary pronounces losses of cattle recently sustained up there to be due to the cattle eating too much ripe millet, which clogs the digestive machinery. A steer, as well as a man, can overeat.

Dan Murphy of Hot Springs, S. D., Tim and wife and Mike of Lead, S. D., arrived in the city Sunday morning in an answer to a telegram stating that their brother John was very low. He was brought up from the hospital last Thursday night and is now at the home of his parents northeast of town, where he still lingers in a critical condition.

The state press association meets at Lincoln the latter part of next month, when the greatest meeting in the association's history is anticipated. The railroad advertising and pass questions will be tackled and discussed in a masterful manner, and the public may expect to see many vexing questions of national importance permanently disposed of.

The Sanford Dodge company's rendition of Shakespear's greatest play, "Julius Caesar," at the opera-house Monday evening was not up to expectations. Mr. Dodge himself and the ladies in the company are well qualified to deal in classic drama and did their parts well, but it is the opinion of the dramatic critic of The Frontier that the balance of the company ought to seek other avocations.

A woman's club was organized at the home of Mrs. T. V. Golden on Monday afternoon. Mrs. G. W. Smith presided as temporary president and Mrs. C. B. Scott as secretary. Permanent organization was effected by the election of Mrs. Golden president, Mrs. Smith vice-president and Mrs. A. F. Mullen secretary. The object of the club is that of self-culture as carried on by women's clubs elsewhere and they expect to connect with the state work. Meetings will be held every two weeks on Tuesdays, the next meeting being with Mrs. W. T. Evans.

Chadron Journal: Rev. A. R. Julian of Long Pine, who was recently appointed register of the land office at Valentine by the president, has decided not to accept the appointment and will retain the presiding eldership of the Long Pine district. Some little surprise has been expressed at Mr. Julian's action, but he thought the best and wisest thing for him to do was to continue in the ministry.

Mrs. Elizabeth Kernan died at her home in O'Neill on Sunday morning at the age of seventy-five years. Interment was made in the Catholic cemetery on Monday. The deceased was a native of Ireland, where she was born in 1830. She had lived in O'Neill with her husband for many years, her husband, however, at the time of her death and for some time previous being in the soldier's home, himself being an invalid.

The populist superintendent of public instruction over in Wayne county likes the job so well he refuses to give up the office to his successor, elected last fall. The newly elected superintendent secured his first grade certificate under the new certificate law by an examination which begun November 4. The department at Lincoln ruled that he should take the office, but the other fellow refuses to vacate. The superintendent-elect now asks the supreme court to oust him.

Elmer Walters' "A Thoroughbred Tramp," which appears at the opera house Sat., Jan. 20, carries a thorough equipment for the presentation of the play. Much pains have been taken to make the new third act, (The Hospital Ward for the Feeble Minded) natural and picturesque. "A Thoroughbred Tramp" unquestionably excels all other dramas of its class and certain it is that the comedy element is more hilarious. T. Rush Thompson is one of the most humorous character parts ever conceived, and though but a vagabond, the character carries prestige with the refined theatregoer.

Chadron Journal: Mrs. Tom Kane entertained Friday afternoon in honor of Miss Margaret McCarthy and Miss Jennie Kane, of O'Neill, at whist. Miss Minnie Broghamer and Miss Margaret McCarthy having won an equal amount of games, cut for the prize, Miss McCarthy being the lucky one. The prize was a handpainted dish. At five-thirty light refreshments were served. Those invited were Misses Nellie Nelson, Mayme and Mabel Dargan, Irene and Carrie Elliott, Lorena and Minnie Broghamer, Blanche Williams, Sadie Loewenthal, Olga Scott, Lenora Lockler, Jennie Kane and Margaret McCarthy, of O'Neill, Annie Beebe, of Hay Springs, Meda and Gertie Bresse, of Rusville.

In the last issue of his paper, the Winside Tribune, J. C. Ecker, editor of the Minneola Sun in the days when there was a thriving pioneer town where now only the memory of it remains, reverts to his experience in the "big blizzard" of the 12th of January, 1888. He says: "The writer was living in an inland town about twenty miles northeast of O'Neill, at that time, and we remember distinctly how we had to remain in the office until 5 o'clock in the morning before we could get to our home, which was only about three blocks away. Other members of the family made the trip in the evening by tying a rope around their bodies so that they could not get separated. It was necessary to get to the house, as a couple of the children were there with only a young lady for company. Although the trip was a hazardous one, brother and sister made it in safety. When we arrived home in the morning, a half frozen sheep was on the porch and as soon as the door was opened, it rushed into the house. The sheep was one of the few that was saved out of a flock of nearly 100. A week's washing was on the line when the storm struck, and all the next summer we found fragments of the clothes scattered over the prairie."

A large portrait of President Roosevelt now adorns the north wall of the county judge's office where hung a picture of Col. Bryan or some other democratic or fusion leader for fifteen years. It has been a long time since a picture of a republican leader was accorded a place in the judge's office, and also some of the other offices, but now the democratic decorations have disappeared from all but John Harmon's quarters. In this connection it is noted, however, that the tastes of Sam Barnard, in the recorder's department of the clerk's office, run to portraits of prominent men of neither party, and he is being accused of favoring woman's suffrage. At his side hangs a rare and painted beauty so popular on calendars this year, to which he turns his tired eyes when weary of pouring over the records. Mr. Simar says Sam turns the picture to the wall when his wife comes in.

State Superintendent McBrien is notifying the county superintendents that the supplies heretofore furnished by the state superintendent's office would be no longer furnished and that each county would supply their own blanks and record books used in the superintendents' office. "The change is made in the interests of economy," says the state superintendent. "The transportation of small and numerous shipments, the waste of supplies in some counties, the use by many counties of their own special blanks on account of the better quality of supplies and their better adaptation to public service, were among the reasons that led us to this action. The expense to the people in having counties furnish their supplies will be less. The people have to pay all these bills in the end any way. The service will be better under the new plan than under the old. Contemplating this action, we asked the legislature to reduce the appropriation for this office to a point below that for any biennium within the last twenty-five years."

LAND FRAUDS INQUIRY

The Case of the Rev. Mr. Ware Before the Court.

SAID HE SECURED MANY FILINGS

Trial in Federal Court Brings Out Interesting Details of Fraudulent Homestead Filings.

Relative to the trial in federal court at Omaha of Rev. G. G. Ware, a minister at Lead, S. D., who is involved in the Nebraska land scandals, the Omaha News of Tuesday contained the following:

The expense account kept by Frank Lambert of the money, which he claims to have spent in procuring old soldiers and others to file on government land, which was introduced as testimony by the government Monday afternoon, was still further gone into this morning.

The direct examination of Lambert continued throughout the morning, but it is expected that the cross-examination will be reached this afternoon.

Lambert stated positively that the items in the expense account kept by him were for money paid out for expenses, incidental to securing old soldiers and others to file on homesteads. He swore that the Rev. Mr. Ware reimbursed him for the expenses.

One item on the book shows the receipt of $230 from G. G. Ware. "What was that $200 paid you for?" asked Special Prosecutor Rush.

"It was to reimburse me for the money I had spent in procuring entrainers."

Lambert's expense account shows that the Lead pastor spent something like $3,000 for expense money in procuring title to the homesteads, in addition to about $1,500 as commissions to Lambert for securing the old soldiers.

Lambert entered each detail of expense in his note book, showing railroad fare, hack hire, filing fees and expense for building shacks upon the different homesteads. The date of each item is entered along with the amount and also the date upon which Lambert says he was reimbursed by Ware.

The government sought to introduce Lambert's bank book as additional evidence showing that the dates and amounts corresponded with the amounts itemized in the note book. The court held that the bank book was not admissible as evidence.

Lambert testified that in 1902 he secured the following homesteaders for Ware: Jonathan Olds, Charles McKibben, John J. Bunn, W. H. Grove, Max W. Lentz, G. W. Steadman, Sanford B. Brown, John Ross-work, Peter Lemon, F. D. Carpenter and George M. Reed.

In 1903 he secured others from the old soldiers' home, including Margaret Reed, Jacob F. Schobler, George H. Rhodes, John Harmel, Mrs. E. L. Dawson, Priscilla Emerson, Henry Lauer, John C. Blue, P. J. Little and R. McClenahan.

Those secured by Lambert in 1904 were A. G. Zaelks, Isaac Haner, George B. Lewis, Thomas B. Jones and Elijah Thomas.

The witness said that he had employed a carpenter to build shacks on the homesteads. The average price for each, he said, was $7.50.

"They were built," he said, "to serve as evidence that actual settlement had been made upon the homesteads. Each shed was about twelve feet by eight. They were not plastered and were built of boards and two-by-fours. They couldn't have been lived in during the winter."
