Mr. Hancock says the large republican vote in his township this year is not a temporary political slump, but something that is going to stay as many former democrats and populists have become disgusted with the pretensions of their leaders in this county.

Heretofore there has been objection to the use of oil stoves because of the smoke and odors. A Nebraska man has invented an oil stove that does away entirely with these objectionable features and is guaranteed to furnish more heat than a coal stove of the same size. It will burn on an average 15 cents worth of kerosene in twenty-four hours. The factory where the stoves were made recently burned down, and hence there is a limited supply on the market. Brennan is the agent here and has a few of the stoves in stock.

Complaint is heard from a number of merchants on account of goods shipped to them by freight from eastern points being carried by this station. A number of instances have occurred lately where goods that were needed badly were carried on west by the trains and not returned for several days or a week, some even having been carried as far west as Douglas, Wyo. One dealer says that a large portion of his holiday goods have been lost in transit and he presumes carried west. This condition is attributed to the carelessness of the train crew, who are more or less superficial in looking over freight in the cars when unloading it.

C. H. Foxworth, a son-in-law of C. M. Hunt who has bought the Caldwell ranch, arrived here Thursday last from Albion with his wife, and they will make their home with Mr. Hunt for a time, expecting to build later. Mr. Foxworthy is a breeder of Poland China hogs and brought fourteen head of thoroughbreds with him and will continue in the same line of business here which he followed in Boone county.

Mr. Foxworthy paid The Frontier a business and social call Friday. He says it is natural for him to hunt up a newspaper office in a new town as he has a brother who is a newspaper man. He is a pleasant gentleman to meet and evidently a substantial citizen to live in the community. He starts out by at once becoming a subscriber to The Frontier.

Alliance Times: A gold mine found in a chicken gizzard sounds strange, and yet that is what happened to Mrs. R. Simmons of Alliance Sunday. She was dressing a chicken for dinner, and while cleaning the gizzard discovered shining particles among the waste. Upon examination it was found to be gold. A test was made, and the quality is of the best. There were several pieces, and it is thought that the chickens had made a meal at some time upon some little nuggets. Who knows but that on some farm near Alliance lies a field of gold that could be made to pay a vastly richer dividend than the raising of chickens, which, when dead, tell the secret and yet leave no clue? It might be that some Sherlock Holmes could look at the gold, the feathers of the dead chicken, etc., and then go into a trance and discover the place where the chickens found the gold. It would certainly pay well.
