Wish to All,
Both Great and Small

We desire to call your attention to the fact that ---as of yore---we are headquarters for Holiday goods, for the old as well as the young. We purchased of the traveling representative of Pitkins & Brooks of Chicago its entire sample line of China and Cut Glass, which he had on exhibition in Omaha during the Aksarben week. This places us in a position to put a price upon these goods at least 20 per cent lower than others can sell them for.

TEDDYBEARS & TOYS—We have Teddy Bears and an exceptionally large and assorted line of toys. The latest inventions in toyland shown in our stock.

FOR LADIES—Splendid line of Manicure Cases, Toilet Sets, Comb and Brush Traps, also the famous Palmer's New York Perfumes.

FOR MEN—Smoking sets, cigars and cigar cases, purses, card cases and many other things. Books to suit all—from infancy to old age.

If the congress gets it all done the president suggests there will be a busy bunch around the national capital this winter.

Now that Mrs. Bradley has been acquitted of the murder of Ex-Senator Brown of Utah, the stage of sensationalism has been cleared for the Thaw trial which will start some time next month.

If holiday shoppers can't find what they want advertised in The Frontier there is no use looking anywhere else. O'Neill merchants have the goods and they know how to tell the people about it.

For the third successive time Joe Cannon has been elected speaker of the national house of representatives. He may never be president but he can probably be boss of the house as long as he wants to.

A Nebraska congressman, Judge Boyd of the Norfolk district, is out with a proposition for the protection of depositors in national banks. Congressman Boyd has introduced a bill in congress providing for a federal tax on national banks similar to the plan outlined in these columns last week. Western bankers are inclined to approve the plan and many of them think that is all the "currency legislation" needed. With assurance of absolute safety people will have no hesitancy about putting money into banks, and such legislation would therefore greatly strengthen the resources of the banks.

The "unwritten law" is still doing good service. The jury in the Bradley case at Washington evidently concluded that the erstwhile senator from Utah invited a severe retribution for a more or less checkered career and let it go at that.

Perhaps if the county board would refuse to let any more contracts for bridges and in fact shut down business altogether maybe some people would discover that if the necessary improvements, additions and repairs on public works are to be kept up to the demand it costs something to do it.

Our democratic friends regard the issue of the Panama bonds and treasury certificates as something of a joke on republicans and endeavor to draw something of a comparison with the Cleveland bond issue. The comparison is entirely out of order. The Cleveland bonds were issued to replenish an impoverished public treasury made so by an excess of expenditures over receipts. There is no such condition in the present instance. The bonds are issued not because Uncle Sam needs the money as he did under the last democratic administration, but to encourage people with money to put the same in circulation at a time when it is most needed to carry on the business of the country during the big money demand period of crop moving.

Our amiable contemporary in the cellar thinks it has scored a hit by a news item published in The Frontier relative to the taxes of Holt county. The Independent can rely upon the information it gets out of this paper as trustworthy, but in view of its oft repeated assertion that "it is absolutely impossible for The Frontier to tell the truth" it would appear that that great apostle of truth and accuracy should go direct to the records instead of jumping at conclusions. Perhaps if the Independent will take the time to investigate that it will discover that the grand total of the tax roll in Holt county is larger today than it was ten, twenty or thirty years ago. It will also discover that the railroad taxes have doubled in Holt county since the enactment of the "infamous revenue law" by a republican legislature.
