

This woman says she was saved from an operation by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Lena V. Henry, of Norristown, Ga., writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"I suffered untold misery from female troubles. My doctor said an operation was the only chance I had, and I dreaded it almost as much as death.

"One day I read how other women had been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I decided to try it. Before I had taken the first bottle I was better, and now I am entirely cured.

"Every woman suffering with any female trouble should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness or nervous prostration. Why don't you try it?

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

Radium's Effect on Gems. A Vienna dispatch gives details of experiments by Professor Doelter, of the University of Vienna, with a view of determining the effects of radium on precious stones.

Rubies and diamonds were affected slightly. The emerald changed to a yellowish green, the hyacinth became a dark brown, light topaz grew to orange and blue sapphires turned pale, but did not go to yellow, as previous investigators had asserted.

Bark's Long Voyage. From the Boston Transcript. After what is believed to be the longest voyage with cargo ever made by a sailing ship the British steel bark Johanna arrived in the lower harbor this morning. It is nearly seven months since she sailed from Java. Since then she has been to St. Helena, Falmouth, England and Delaware Breakwater. Her 17,000 miles of sailing and knocking from port to port was due to the advance in the price of sugar.

IT SEEMED INCURABLE.

Body Raw with Eczema—Discharged from Hospitals as Hopeless—Cuticura Remedies Cured Him.

"From the age of three months until fifteen years old, my son Owen's life was made intolerable by eczema in its worst form. In spite of treatments the disease gradually spread until nearly every part of his body was quite raw. He used to tear himself dreadfully in his sleep and the agony he went through is quite beyond words. The regimental doctor pronounced the case hopeless. We had him in hospitals four times and he was pronounced one of the worst cases ever admitted. From each he was discharged as incurable. We kept trying remedy after remedy, but had gotten almost past hoping for a cure. Six months ago we purchased a set of Cuticura Remedies. The result was truly marvelous, and to-day he is perfectly cured. Mrs. Lily Hedge, Cambridge Green, England, Jan. 12, 1907."

And Now the Cooling Dove. Is nothing secure against science? Professor Wallace Craig, of the University of Chicago, has summoned to the bar the gentle dove. He has framed an indictment of four counts.

1. Doves are not coy. There is not an element of coyness in their makeup. 2. Doves are not domestic. They are to be desired. Desertions are frequent. 3. The female dove is inclined to shrewishness. 4. Sometimes the male dove is a domestic tyrant.

Gone are the poet's dreams. "The tender fierceness of the dove" as Byron puts it, has become a paradox. "Sweet is every sound," says Tennyson, and he includes "the moan of doves in immemorial elms." This is interpreted by Professor Craig probably as meaning that madam dove is strenuously objecting to her lord's late hours. "Coo dove to thy married mate," wrote Jean Ingelow. This must refer to a few well chosen and sarcastic remarks concerning the quality of the latest worm. Perhaps Shakespeare, the omniscient, looked a trifle ahead when in a "Midsummer Night's Dream" he put in the mouth of one of his characters, "I will roar you as gently as any suckling dove. Higher criticism will require here a 'stage direction' to roar most petulantly.

No longer will it be safe to paint Venus with her doves. White-winged peace will refuse to roign such a permanent as her symbol. The voice of the turtle is not to be heard in the land of art. Another crime marks the career of the ruthless iconoclast.

They strolled along the broad roadways, Amid the fields of corn; Into her eyes he'd deeply gaze With looks sad and forlorn. He wanted her to be his own, To his dark life lend cheer; But bashful, could not make it known, He feared the ears of corn would hear.

PARASOLS FOR MEN.

New Fashion Observed at Recent Race Meeting in England. From the London Daily Graphic.

Rumor has it that mere man is about to take a leaf out of woman's book, and at the risk of ridicule protect his head from the rays of the summer sun with the parasol.

The rumor is confirmed by some West End shopkeepers, who profess to have done a good business in the last few weeks in umbrellas specially designed for man's use. The shades are, of course, not the elaborate article used by the lady of fashion, but the plain, unadorned specimen often used by man in tropical countries.

At some of the recent race meetings a few well dressed men have been bold enough to start the fashion, and at Ascot a gentleman having borrowed a pretty shade from a fair companion was not ashamed to take advantage of it.

Making the Sultan's Cigarettes.

From P. T. O. "The Turkish sultan," said a tobaccoist, "has for generations smoked the finest cigarettes in the world. Cigarettes like his bought here would cost over one shilling apiece. In the royal palace there has been from time immemorial a small cigarette factory—a light, airy room, a bale of exquisite tobacco, one or two simple hand cutting machines, half a dozen workmen of marvellous skill. Here the cigarettes of the sultan are turned out. The best cigarette tobacco comes from Turkey and the best of that goes to the sultan. A hundredweight of leaves is rejected before a pound of sufficiently fine and flawless is found for royal use."

Hatching Ostrich Eggs. From the Tampa Times. Ostrich eggs are being hatched in an incubator in this city. A novel egg hatching is being carried on at the store of Crenshaw Bros. on upper Franklin street. Thirteen fine ostrich eggs from the recently established Tampa ostrich farm have been placed in the incubator and they will hatch off some in the early of May.

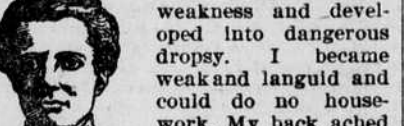

It takes an average heat of 107 degrees and 45 days of constant exposure to such heat to develop the germ in an ostrich egg and hatch a young ostrich. The eggs are worth $20 each, and it takes a conservative estimate to say that the young bird will be worth more than twice that money after it has passed the first month of its existence.

Some idea of the size of the eggs may be gathered from the fact that the "Mandy Lee" incubator, which is being used for the hatch, would hold 140 average hen eggs. Fourteen of the ostrich eggs would fill it completely. An empty ostrich egg holds just one quart of liquid. This is the first attempt at ostrich hatching in Tampa.

SAVED AT THE CRISIS.

Delay Meant Death from Kidney Trouble.

Mrs. Herman Smith, 901 Broad street, Athens, Ga., says: "Kidney disease started with slight irregularity and weakness and developed into dangerous dropsy. I became weak and languid and could do no household work. My back ached terribly. I had bearing down pains and my limbs bloated to twice their normal size. Doctors did not help and I was fast drifting into the hopeless stages. I used Doan's Kidney Pills at the critical moment and they really saved my life."

THE HAPPY WARRIOR.

Three Persons Suggested Reading of Poem at Cleveland's Funeral.

Princeton Letter in Brooklyn Eagle. They said Grover Cleveland would be buried without sermon, eulogy or song, but they were wrong. The funeral was turned into a poem that was itself a poem. A eulogy and a sermon. The most beautiful eulogy ever written by William Wordsworth was read over the coffin of the former president and applied to him and to his life.

By a remarkable coincidence, or concurrence in the minds of the three persons nearest to Mr. Cleveland, the great poem of Wordsworth was chosen separately and individually by the three as the one human expression most fitting to portray the life and character of the dead man.

No greater tribute could be paid to the character of Mr. Cleveland than this fact that his life and deeds were such that when those who loved him best sought independently of each other to find a suitable expression of his character, they turned spontaneously to the Wordsworth poem that pictures a happy warrior with greatness almost sublime.

The selection of the Wordsworth poem at a remarkable incident in the funeral arrangements. The incident was suggestive almost of the supernatural in the coincidence and agreement of the mental processes that led to the selection. Without any suggestion or hint, the poem was read at the funeral, the Wordsworth poem was selected separately by Mrs. Cleveland, the widow; by Rose Elizabeth Cleveland, the sister of the dead man, and by Dr. Henry van Dyke, who was chosen by Mr. Cleveland as his confidant in the last few weeks of the fatal illness.

After the death of Mr. Cleveland, Dr. van Dyke, who lives across Bayard lane from the Cleveland home, was sitting in Westland with Mrs. Cleveland and Rose Cleveland. After a long pause in the conversation, Mrs. Cleveland said: "I have been thinking of a poem about the happy warrior. The poem appeals to me almost as a prophetic description of my husband. It was written more than a hundred years ago, and it may be that it is not so fitting as I think."

"Nothing could be more appropriate and no poet could have been more prophetic," said Dr. van Dyke, drawing from his pocket a copy of Wordsworth's poems. "That is the very poem I have thought of as being apposite and well adapted to the character of Mr. Cleveland."

Rose Cleveland, in amazement, held out a memorandum in writing. In thinking of some fitting tribute to her brother, she had written down the name of Wordsworth's poem, "Character of the Happy Warrior."

So impressed were they by this singular agreement upon the poem that they determined to have the poem read at the funeral. It was chosen to take the place of all eulogy and song.

AS TO A CAREER IN THE FIELD OF SCIENCE

Excellent Opportunities for the Young Men, but No Great Money Reward.

The Members of the Illinois State Academy of Science recently discussed the opportunities for young men to earn a living in various branches of science. On the whole they thought the opportunities are excellent, though they offer nothing very great in the way of financial compensation.

John G. Coulter, the well known professor of botany, said that the demand for trained botanists exceeds the supply. The most extensive employer of young botanists in this country is the United States government. The bureau of the department of agriculture are not yet able to obtain all the men they need adequately trained in the various branches of botany.

The market for teachers of botany is brisk and good teachers who are doctors of philosophy in botany command beginning salaries which average about 50 per cent. more than those offered eight years ago.

There is a fine field for botanists in the Philippines, where a trained man is wanted in every province to take charge of the educational side of botany, especially from the standpoint of agricultural science.

Prof. A. Noyes, of the University of Illinois, said that twenty-five years ago very few chemists were employed in the manufacture of iron and steel. Today chemists are required not only in the large establishments where steel is produced, but also in iron foundries and factories of all kinds. About 8,000 chemists are now employed in the United States. Not long ago nearly all chemists here were engaged in teaching, while the majority of them today are working in industrial plants.

Dr. Balm, who is at the head of the Illinois geological survey, said that many railroads and mining and development companies now employ one or more geologists. Their employment is private enterprises is crippling the survey work of the government because private companies offer higher salaries and draw away many of the best men. The larger number of professional geologists are still connected with the official surveys. The greatest of these is the United States geological survey, which in the last season kept ninety-three geological parties in the field, each including from one to three geologists.

According to Prof. H. V. Neal, it is much easier now for zoologists to get good places than it was a decade ago. It is difficult to find competent men needed for zoological posts in schools, museums and the bureau of general and agricultural surveys, which require entomologists and other zoological workers. It is believed that the brisk demand for trained zoologists will continue in the next decade.

The prospect is good that competent men of science will have better opportunities in the future than ever before to earn a comfortable living. Capable and industrious workers make a good living, but are rarely able to accumulate wealth. Frivolous men of science will always have to be content with relatively poor financial returns for their work.

TO BEAT COLD STORAGE MAN This Man Says He Learned in China a Way to Keep Eggs Fresh.

There is a way to beat the storage commission merchant and the old hen herself; to have fresh eggs all the year round, says Marshall Raymond, a lawyer of Paducah, Ky., at the Arlington.

"This method may be as old as the Chinese—at least, I learned it in China when I made a trip through the east more than a year ago. It happened to me in fact," said Marshall Raymond, a lawyer of Paducah, Ky., at the Arlington.

"Although they didn't look like eggs at all—looked, indeed, more like stone, they were with a stone stuffed in them—I faithfully brought them home, and at last opened one.

"Sure enough, there was an egg inside, and when it was broken it proved to be entirely fresh, although it may have been in that manner for a year or with that knowledge of how the Chinamen keep eggs fresh, I saw the whole barrel of them in my place to see how they would do under American mud.

"I bought them at the time of year when prices are cheap, not caring much whether they kept or not, but willing to try the experiment. I buried them under more than a foot and a half of earth, and left them in their glory for several months.

"When winter came along and eggs were dug down into the earth and pulled out that barrel. Opened to the light of day the eggs looked as if they had just been laid. They tasted, too, as if they had never been put away in the earth for many weeks.

"That is one way to get ahead of the commission man; also, it shows that the agricultural department hasn't found the only way in which man can get ahead of nature."

License Reform in England.

From the London Times. Mr. Asquith's closing speech in the second reading of the licensing bill was chiefly composed of the dexterities of advocacy which serve the immediate purpose of swaying men's minds in view of the division about to be taken. The bill not only has no popular enthusiasm, but it is popularly regarded with the greatest coolness and suspicion. To say that it is detested by the classes who have invested money which they do not like to sacrifice for a liberal triumph, would only be to incur the scorn of the chancellor of the exchequer. But it affects to a more serious extent than is yet realized the convenience, the comfort and the social arrangements generally of the classes who do not invest money in brewery debentures. It impoverishes a certain considerable section of the well-to-do, but it does not interfere with their habits and customs. They do not patronize public houses, but get the drink they need in other ways.

Black Forest Customs.

From the Antiquary. The peasant farms of the Black Forest are handed down from father to son in a direct line, often dating back 400 years. There is no division as in France; all falls to the heir, only here it is not the eldest, but the youngest son who inherits. It is rare that a Bur (peasant) dies as reigning head. When he gets on in years he abdicates, in order to end his days in the leibgedinghaus (dower house), which stands beside each Hof (steading).

That he does so in favor of his youngest son is very sensible; were it the elder he would have no peace, for as soon as he married he would try to induce his parents to retire just at an age when power is sweetest and best exercised. For this reason the practical farmers of bygone generations decided to hand over the succession to the youngest, since when Benjamin is a full grown man father Jacob is old and glad to rest.

This law of inheritance goes by the name of vortel. Should the heir of his own free will desire to resign in favor of his elder brother the latter must buy the property from him. In such case the younger may be termed a kind of Esau.

Progress.

From Harper's Weekly. "Yes," said Mrs. Malaprop, "my boy is doing first rate at school. I sent him to one of them almighty schools, and his teacher says he's doing fine. He's a first class sculler; they say all men, and is head of his class in astronomy, knows his letters by sight, and can spell like one of these deformed spellers down to Washington."

"What's he going to be when he grows up?" "He wants to be an undertaker, and I'm declined to humor him, so I've told the confessor to pay special attention to the dead languages," said the proud mother.

How a Girl Defied Sheridan's Army.

From the Metropolitan Magazine. It is related that the army, headed by Sheridan and his staff, left Winchester by the valley pike early in the morning, the column moving toward Stephens City. Just as day was breaking the staff reached the toll gate and was much discomfited to find the toll pole down and guarded by a young and beautiful girl, Charlotte Hillman, famed locally for her girlish charms. Even the war-hardened Sheridan seems not to have been proof against the persuasion of a pair of black eyes and a pretty face, and when toll was demanded, straightway produced the title, setting an example that was followed by his staff.

"But," said Sheridan as he passed through the gate, "I cannot vouch for my army."

When the common soldiery came, the girl again lowered the toll bar and demanded toll. This was met by jeers from the soldiers, whereupon she wisely raised the guard. All day the dusty troopers passed through, and all day Charlotte Hillman stood at her post. For every 10 soldiers who passed the gate she cut a notch in the toll pole. Early filed beyond the Blue Ridge with the remnants of his disorganized army; in the Valley of Virginia, Lee, beaten back by Grant's overwhelming numbers, gave up the fight; in the southeast Joe Johnston fired the last burlesque shot and peace came over the North and South. Then, when relations with Washington had been re-established and the administration's policy was one of magnanimity, Charlotte Hillman counted the notches in the toll pole and sent her bill to Washington. And the bill was paid.

Men and Women as Friends.

Vanoc in the Referee. Men prefer men to women for friends because between them there is a sense of equality that is absent from all their relations with the opposite sex. Men moreover, talking the way women treat women, confide in each other with knowledge that their confidence is more likely to be respected than when they intrust their secrets to a woman.

The sense of honor among men, their antipathy to flattery and agitation about trifles, provide a larger stock of the raw material for friendship between men than that with which nature has provided the opposite sex.

WONDERED WHY.

Found the Answer Was "Coffee." Many pale, sickly persons wonder for years why they have to suffer so, and eventually discover that the drug—caffeine—in coffee is the main cause of the trouble.

"I was always very fond of coffee and drank it every day. I never had much flesh and often wondered why I was always so pale, thin and weak.

"About five years ago my health completely broke down and I was confined to my bed. My stomach was in such condition that I could hardly take sufficient nourishment to sustain life.

"During this time I was drinking coffee, didn't think I could do without it. "After a while I came to the conclusion that coffee was hurting me, and decided to give it up and try Postum. I didn't like the taste of it at first, but when it was made right—boiled until dark and rich—I soon became very fond of it.

"In one week I began to feel better. I could eat more and sleep better. My sick headaches were less frequent, and within five months I looked and felt like a new being, headache spells entirely gone.

ALL RUN DOWN.

Miss Della Stroebe, who had Completely Lost Her Health, Found Relief from Peruna at Once.

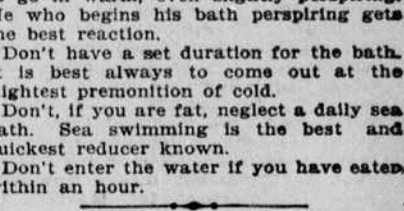

Read What She Says:

MISS DELLA STROEBE, 710 Richmond St., Appleton, Wis., writes: "For several years I was in a run-down condition, and I could find no relief from doctors and medicine. I could not enjoy my meals, and could not sleep at night. I had heavy, dark circles about the eyes.

"My friends were much alarmed, I was advised to give Peruna a trial, and to my joy I began to improve with the first bottle. After taking six bottles I felt completely cured. I cannot say too much for Peruna as a medicine for women in a run-down condition."

Peruna Did Wonders.

Mrs. Judge J. F. Boyer, 1421 Sherman Ave., Evanston, Ill., says that she became run down, could neither eat nor sleep well, and lost flesh and spirit. Peruna did wonders for her, and she thanks Peruna for new life and strength.

Bathing Don'ts. Don't plug the ears with cotton. Cotton does not keep out the water, since it at once becomes saturated. Furthermore no water can find it way to the drum of a normal ear.

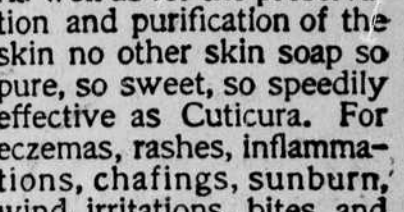

Don't go in the water cold. It is best to go in warm, even slightly perspiring. He who begins his bath perspiring gets the best reaction. Don't have a set duration for the bath. It is best always to come out at the slightest presentation of cold.

Don't, if you are fat, neglect a daily sea bath. Sea swimming is the best and quickest reducer known. Don't enter the water if you have eaten within an hour.
