Gloomy and sad and sour,
Or glad of the rest that was given you
And brave for the battle hour?
Do you rise from your couch at daybreak
With a smile for your loved ones true?
Come, tell me, now, is a churlish frown
The best that they get from you?

Do you rise in the morning merry,
Or gloomy and cross and sad?
Do you growl and snarl at your morning

Because the coffee is bad?

THE INDIAN WAR DANCE

The Chippewas, of White Earth Reservation Preserve Tradition.

Keith Clark, in St. Paul Dispatch. The dance is held on a high hill, overlooking the trading post of White Earth to the east, and overlooking the far-stretching, down-dropping hills of far-stretching, down-dropping hills of the reservation to the west. A flag pole stands in the middle of the ring, carrying aloft the American flag, where once it was like a totem pole that carried the Chippewa flag, a long pennant made of eagle feathers, like a war bonnet. About the foot of the flagstaff are squatted the drummers, four, six, or eight, as the energy of the dance demands, each with his drumdance demands, each with his drum-stick, the drum itself, a large six-foot expanse, rich and low in note. Each drummer has but one stick, for he is expected not only to beat the tom-tom, but to sing, high or low as emotion demands, this hi-yi-hi-yi of the dance name translates into The-one-who-does-things. And indeed he does things, for while the Ojibways are a worthy people and their dance full of grace and meaning, it is the Sloux who dance the best, the Sioux who are the original dancers.

And that squaw dance! It is the Christmas of the Indian. For no one phrase.

The dance begins at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, lasting tiil sundown. The chiefs and the warriors gather slowly, coming by ones and twos and threes, from the tepees that dot the hills for a mile and more about, bright splashes in their gay array of buckskin and bead work, with many a modern color worked into the caparison. As they come across the hills they are wrapped in bright blankets, or more often, in the very patchwork quilts which the squaws are making as deftly as the white grandmothers did; indeed, the patchwork quilt fits into the picture perfectly. And the braves are close

Must I confess that I saw but one beaded buckskin shirt? For "bucks" cannot wear buckskin when bucks grow scarce. There were gay calico shirts, and one of royal purple, which I might venture to call taffeta silk. There were a few pairs of painted legs on the very young boys, and there were several suits of pajamas serving as "glad rags" in this ceremony. But generally the warrior wears the white man's shirt and trousers, putting his gorgeous beaded double bags, his beaded clout and belt, his beaded knee garters and leggings over these, but wearing still the grand headdress of eagle's feathers—if he is entitled to eagle's—painting his face in ancient, honorable fashlon, and carrying tomahawk or club live the river with his pair to the river with him and are come back to that state which was theirs long ago, even if only so short a time as 30 or 40
