Political Announcement.

I hereby announce my candidacy for the republican nomination for sheriff, subject to the will of the party at the August primary.

Henry D. Grady.

Holt county farmers are too much engrossed with the mammoth crops this year to get very much excited over the tariff schedules.

Supervisor Jake Roll has been nominated as republican candidate for assessor for Ewing precinct. This year precinct assessors will be elected to serve next year.

A decline of nearly a quarter of a dollar in the price of wheat purports some relief from high priced bread in the near future. Within a few weeks the new wheat crop will be ready for market when a greater decline may be looked for.

Chicago is having a sensational shaking. It is the same old story of police protection for tribute money from the institutions of iniquity. There is probably a great deal of truth in the charges preferred although the outraged bluecoats enter the customary denial.

The west having to submit to duties less hides, it is some consolation to know that reductions will also be made on leather. Some leather will be reduced to 5 per cent instead of 10 per cent; boots and shoes will be reduced to 10 per cent instead of 20 per cent. Harness and saddlery are to be made 20 per cent instead of 40 per cent.

Politics are very quite in Sheridan county. The present county clerk, who has held the office sixteen years, the present county treasurer, county judge and county superintendent are all candidates for re-election and have no opposition, which leads the Rushville Standard to remark "that the people are not as office hungry as they are accused of being."

South Dakota has hardly got over the last rush of homestead seekers until it is announced that more Indian lands will be thrown open to settlement. The Cheyenne and Standing Rock reservations will be opened some time this summer. They are located in the extreme northern part of the state west of the Missouri river and comprise large tracts of land.

Nebraska newspaper men are glad to see Walt Mason back in print. Years ago Walt wrote some dandy "stuff" for Omaha, Lincoln and Fremont papers, but for several years was not heard from. A Kansas publisher now handles his lucid pen productions under copyright and several daily papers use the service. Walt's sense of humor has dulled none with the lapse of years and he writes in the same old interesting style.

It is said that Governor Shallenberger has enough of Bryan's brother-in-law as state chairman and will endeavor to have him replaced with the Columbus man, Gunther, who did effectual work last fall in behalf of the governor. There is a growing anti-Bryan feeling among Nebraska democrats and the proposed retirement of Allen may be part of the program to eventually eliminate Bryan influence in this state.

The eight o'clock closing law is about the only thing left from last winter's legislative work in Nebraska, and thirty days hasn't expired yet with it in force. It appeared a little peculiar that this law should operate nearly a month without some fellow asserting his "constitutional rights." Fact is, most of the liquor men are satisfied with the law, but one fellow down at Omaha thought he would test its security and lapped over the eight o'clock period dispensing liquids. He was taken into police court where he raised the constitutional question, but was overruled and fined $100 and his license revoked.

American engineers are now on the ground to superintend the boring of the tunnel which will join Asia with America. The tunnels will run under the Behring straits from Siberia to Alaska, a distance of sixty miles. When this great mechanical task is accomplished it will be possible to go from Paris, Berlin or Moscow to New York by rail, by taking the overland train across Russia to Vladivostok, crossing under the straits in the tunnel, passing Alaska by rail and thence into the United States.

Justice David J. Brewer of the supreme court, in a public address at Milwaukee, declared himself against the proposed income tax law. He stated as his belief that under a national income tax law the states would be "taxed not only out of their existence, but out of their vitality." He went on to say that our legal procedure is cumbersome and this is due in part to the attitude of the judges themselves, who reverse decisions on mere technicalities. He defended the acquisition of large fortunes through business combination, but said that dishonest wealth must be attacked. He felt that the social unrest over these conditions would disappear as the influence of the great middle class and the farmers made itself acquainted with the situation. Senator Brown of Nebraska, author of the resolution to refer the income tax to the states, characterized the statement of Justice Brewer as "utterly ridiculous, absurd and senile." He denied that the proposed federal law would interfere with the power of the states.

Investigating Wall Street, Governor Hughe's committee found plenty of difference of opinion about remedies, and even about facts, but some of the testimony to which they listened has a decided general interest for the country, says Collier's Weekly. A Stock Exchange member of 40 years' standing stated every one who enters Wall Street, except as a broker, loses. In a partnership contract to preclude a junior's speculating, this man made a bona fide offer of $5,000 for the name and address of every verified winning customer of any Wall Street house—provided only that the customer had so traded for two years as to make his account at active one. Another, for 12 years a member of a prominent brokerage house, stated that in all this time, after very broad operations not a single customer ever took out a dollar of net winnings. An ex-broker stated that a 10-year search, covering scores of trading friends and acquaintances, as well as the records of five brokerage houses and one bucket shop, failed to find a single net winner. Most brokers estimate that between 90 and 98 per cent of customers lose. As practically every marginal trader loses, every bucket shop and Wall Street house has a complete new list of customers in from three to five years.

"Give Me Neither Poverty Nor Riches" is the title of the latest editorial signed by Theodore Roosevelt in the Outlook. The writer says that the movement for the supervision and effective taxation of vast fortunes is a healthy one, as it aims to "replace sullen discontent, restless pessimism and evil preparation for revolution by an aggressive, healthy determination to get to the bottom of our troubles and remedy them." He believes that a halt in this movement would "work wide-reaching damage." If the fortune of a multimillionaire is the result of a great service rendered such a man deserves respect and reward, continues Mr. Roosevelt, although homage should be paid to the service and not to the fortune. But when the fortune "is passed on to some one else who has not rendered the service then the nation should impose a heavily graded, progressive inheritance tax, a singularly wise and unobjectionable kind of tax." He adds that it would be well if this tax "bore heaviest on absentees."

has actually been changed and cultivated by Uneeda Biscuit.

No longer are people satisfied with crackers taken from the grocer's box or barrel—exposed to dust, moisture, handling.

They have learned that the only crackers that are crisp, tender, always fresh and really good are those protected by a moisture proof package. These are the kind they get—as if just from the oven—when they ask for
