Not Worth Shingling.

The late Thomas Bone, "the sailor's missionary," was the soul of kindness, but he was seldom worsted in repartee. One of the many instances of this given in his just published life is the following:

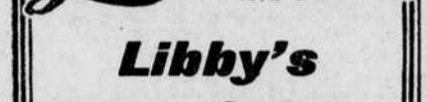

"His work was not without its humorous side. Among the new men there were always some who sought a little amusement at his expense, but they reckoned without their host. His kindly manner never changed. The smile never left his face. There was no venom in the retort, but it seldom failed to silence the interrupter. The laugh raised at his expense made it quite certain that no second attempt would be made.

"Seeing him approaching one day, one of a group of sailors announced his intention of having some fun. He stepped forward and removed his hat, revealing a perfectly smooth crown, and asked:

"Can you tell me why my head is so bald, while all my companions have plenty of hair?"

"I don't know," was the smiling reply, "unless the reason given me the other day by a farmer would apply, that an empty barn is not worth shingling."

A SURE SIGN.

When It Appears At Once.

Trouble with the kidney secretions is a certain sign that your kidneys are deranged—that you should use Doan's Kidney Pills.

They cure all irregularities and annoyances, remove backache and side pains and restore the kidneys to health. Mrs. John B. Whitaker, 303 Jefferson St., Madison, Ind., says:

"Kidney trouble caused me to suffer from headaches, backaches and extreme weakness. I had days of depression and languor and at times my ankles swelled. I was nervous and worn out. Doctors and kidney remedies failed to help until I used Doan's Kidney Pills. I am in better health now than I have been for years, thanks to them."

A Servant of the Lord.
From the Boston Herald.

Judge George F. Lawton of the Middlesex probate court, told me a story the other day of an American minister who was spending his sabbatical year traveling abroad. Arriving in London, he made every effort to get an intimate view of the two branches of parliament in session. Of course no stranger is allowed on the floor of the house of lords, but the minister got to know this, and with the usual amount of American push, tried to make his way in. There is a rule, however, that servants of the various lords may be admitted to speak to their masters. Seeing the minister walking boldly in, the doorkeeper asked:

"What lord do you serve?"

"What lord?" repeated the astonished American. "The Lord Jehovah!"

For a moment the doorkeeper hesitated and then admitted him. Turning to an assistant standing near, he said:

"He must mean one of those poor Scotch lairds."

Teaching Thrift in Japan.
From the Philadelphia Item.

Not only is Japan encouraging agriculture through the engineering of model farm experimental stations, lectures and what not, but likewise it is attempting to prove the lot of the agriculturist. There is going on in Japan today a big work of uplifting, to employ our sorely tried American phrase.

Foremost in this movement is a society known as the Hotokukwai, which may be translated as the society for moral and economic advancement. Its main strength is being put forth in improving rural conditions and in making life more comfortable for the farmer living through the extension of amusements, charities, education, social features of one kind and another and by the development of agricultural enterprises.

It has organized the young people of Nagano and started branches in everywhere. The smaller branches include 210,000 of the smaller hamlets and villages of Japan. The Hotokukwai is assisted in its laudable efforts by the government of Japan, which gives its money from time to time; by the heads of the various prefectures and by the villages themselves. It has built up an agricultural society in every prefectural district, separate ones in the larger towns, and put over all of these a central agricultural agency in Tokio to aid and direct them. If any of the members of the numerous branches in the society choose to visit one of the big cities they are conducted by a representative of the organization through its schools, factories and workshops, and shown its most interesting sights.

The society likewise issues a number of periodicals and papers for the instruction and intellectual awakening of its members. The Agricultural association of Motosu district recognized the advantage of using the influence of Buddhist priests for improvement in agriculture. So in August, 1906, 70 Buddhist priests of various sects were called together and instructed how to cultivate rice, barley and vegetables and how to hunt the injurious insects. The attempts proved successful and the results were remarkably good.

To foster the spirit of industry and economy and to encourage an auxiliary work among farmers the manufacture of wicker lunch baskets was started among common school students of the village. The wages were to be either used for expenses or deposited as postal savings. The material being waste pieces discarded in the making of wicker trunks, this work is proving very profitable and hopeful.

Shima, Nudakajima village abounds in deep, muddy rice fields, which are suitable for the growth of leeches. Taking advantage of this students of the common school were made to gather leeches for the purpose of encouraging the spirit of industry and economy among them. The work was started in June, 1904, and in that year almost 3,000 leeches were caught and sold, about 15 yen ($7.50) being made. In 1905 about 5,000 were caught and more than 20 yen ($15) was made. Each time the money was deposited as a joint saving. In 1906 more than 10,000 leeches were gathered. The children expect a greater income as well as a larger demand, and are much interested.

From the Lyceumette.

After the show was over and the Senagambian servant and good old Hale were meandering back to the drummer's home, the entertainer said to Snowball:

"Did you enjoy the show?"

"Yes, most of it."

"You did not enjoy it all, then?"

"No, sah; I joyed it all but de very las' piece what you spoke."

"Why, what was the matter with that?"

"Well, sah, all dem white folks jaffed so loud dey kep' me 'wake during the las' piece."

Color Blind.
From Success Magazine.

Three Irishmen were stopping at a second rate hotel and one of them imbibed so freely at the bar that he had to be carried to his room, in which also slept a negro in a separate bed.

His comrades, as a practical joke on him, proceeded to paint the Irishman's face black. In the morning, when awakened by the proprietor, he got up, and happened to catch sight of himself in the mirror. "Oh, bejabbers," he exclaimed, "if the blamed idots haven't gone and woke the nigger by mistake!"

And he crawled back into bed.

JAY-EYE-SEE DEAD

AT GRAND OLD AGE

Once Noted Trotter Victim of Bad Teeth After Western Retirement.

Racine, Wis., Special.—After 14 years retirement, in which he was tenderly cared for on a stock farm near this city, Jay-Eye-See, the first 2:10 trotter the country produced, died on the Pleasant View farm, managed by Charles Bull.

For the last 14 years, Jay-Eye-See had been having trouble with his teeth. They were in such poor condition he was unable to get the proper nourishment. Repeated efforts were made by well known veterinarians to give the "old fellow" treatment, but he steadfastly refused to allow them. The spot on the farm where his remains lie will be marked by a granite shaft.

Owned by Case.
The famous trotter got his name from James I. Case, the late millionaire vehicle manufacturer of Racine, Wis., who secured him in Kentucky. The horse was thrown in on a horse bargain and later was developed into a country-wide racing sensation by his trainer, Charles Bither.

Jay-Eye-See was 31 years old, having been foaled in 1878 on the farm of Colonel Richard West, near Lexington, Ky. He was by Dictator, a full brother to Dexter (2:17 3/4); first dam Midnight by Pilot, Jr.; second dam, Darkness by Wagner.

The story of how the late James I. Case came to buy him is interesting. He went down to Kentucky to get a string of horses from Colonel West. He was not exactly satisfied with the price named, and to satisfy him Colonel West brought out the gelding and said:

"Here, Case, I'll throw this animal in with the lot."

Had Odd Gait.
Case, with hardly a look at the horse, said, "All right." He came home and finally the string of Kentucky horses arrived at his farm.

When the string was tried out Jay-Eye-See, which was thus named from the initials on his new owner, was looked upon as a freak. He would rack, pace indiscriminately, and no amount of scientific training could get him down to a respectable and steady gait.

Whenever a party of visiting horsemen would come to the Case stables the trotting stock would be shown with considerable pride by Edwin Bither, the driver of Case's horses, but he always hitched up Jay-Eye-See last in order to amuse them.

Just as soon as the gelding was on the track he would begin a fantastic combination of racking, trotting and pacing, and his habit of rambling from side to side of the course created much amusement. In fact, Jay-Eye-See was considered the "joker" of the Case string.

Would Have Brought $50,000.
One day a party of visitors was looking over the stock, and just prior to its departure Bither brought out the little fellow for his customary exhibition.

To the utter astonishment of Bither and the attaches, Jay-Eye-See worked off in a straight trot. Bither then took him in hand and developed him into the wonder the horse afterward came to be.

When four years old, Jay-Eye-See made a record of 2:19; at five years old, 2:10; at six years old, 2:10; and it was at this time that he electrified the trotting world, and his name was a household word.

He beat St. Julian and it was in Providence that he made his world record of 2:10 in 1884. After that he was in demand at all tracks of the country.

Soon after the tendons of one leg weakened and his gait was changed to a pace. He went a mile in 2:06 1/2, a record at that time. He was in demand at all tracks of the country.

"You haven't wound the clock, Mollie," said she. "I watched you closely, and you gave it only a wind or two. Why didn't you complete the job?"

ITCHED TWELVE YEARS.
Eczema Made Hands and Feet Swell, Peel and Get Raw—Arms Affected, Too—Gave Up All Hope of Cure—Quickly Cured by Cuticura.

"I suffered from eczema on my hands, arms and feet for about twelve years, my hands and feet would swell, sweat and itch, then would become callous and get very dry, then peel off and get raw. I tried most every kind of salve and ointment without success. I tried several doctors, but at last gave up thinking there was a cure for eczema. A friend of mine insisted on my trying the Cuticura Remedies, but I did not give them a trial until I got so bad that I had to do something. I secured a set and by the time they were used I could see a vast improvement and my hands and feet were healed up in no time. I have had no trouble since. Charles T. Bauer, R. F. What is a Cord of Wood?
From the Forester.

A cord of wood is 128 cubic feet, or the contents of a pile eight feet long, four feet high and four feet wide. Wood is marketed on this basis. A pile, whose length, breadth and height multiplied together gives this number of cubic feet fills this requirement, no matter whether the sticks are long or short, straight or crooked, round or split, unless there is an understanding to the contrary. Nevertheless a cord, though it comes up to legal measurements, is an uncertain quantity, even when the seller is honest and the buyer satisfied.

A lumberman may have a tract of pulp wood which he sells to a paper mill at $5 a cord, for as many cords as it will make. It is in the contract that he shall cut and stack it. He cuts it in 12 foot lengths, and when the job is complete, it measures 200 cords, and he receives $1,000 for it. Would he have made or lost by cutting four-foot lengths instead of 12? He would have lost in the first place from the additional labor required to cut four-foot wood, but his principal loss would have resulted from a greatly diminished number of cubic feet, due to the fact that short sticks lie closer together than large. Had the 200 cords of 12-foot wood been cut in four-foot lengths, there would have been only 175 cords, and the owner would have received for it $875 instead of $1,000. It was, therefore, clearly to his advantage to cut 12-foot lengths, but it would have been to the buyer's advantage to have it cut in four-foot lengths. He would have received the same actual quantity of wood for $120 less.

It also makes considerable difference to the seller whether wood is chopped or sawed. If chopped the chips are lost. Where the logs are large this loss amounts to no small total. In a cord of four-foot wood, with sticks six inches in diameter, the chip loss is from 6 to 8 per cent, and, of course, the shorter the sticks are cut, the greater the loss. If the wood is sawed, the sawdust loss is scarcely the half of 1 per cent.

Cords of split wood contain less than cords of round sticks. The finer the wood is split, the more it makes. Hence wood dealers are often willing to sell kindlings, all sawed and split, for the same price a cord of unsplit wood. They get back the cost of labor in the increased bulk.

A cord (128 cubic feet) of four-foot hardwood usually contains about 83 cubic feet of solid wood; a cord of three-foot wood averages 83 1/2 cubic feet; of two-foot wood, 84 feet, and of one-foot wood, 85 feet. The conifers, softwoods, contain 90 to 96 cubic feet. Thus the purchaser receives on an average about two-thirds of a cord of real wood and one-third of a cord of spaces.

In some countries wood is bought by weight and the buyer comes more nearly getting what he bargains for, but even then he may miss it if he receives green wood when he wants dry. Accounting in timber testing engineers of the United States forest service, may lose half or more its green weight in seasoning.

PILES

Lionizing Mr. Locke.
From the New York Herald.

William J. Locke, the great English novelist, who recently visited this country, is very tall in appearance and has a very sandy complexion. His work table is usually littered with papers and uncorrected proofs. He is one of the few famous men that success has not spoiled, and to this day he considers it a high honor to be asked for a photograph—a request to which up to the present he has always willingly acceded. In manner Mr. Locke is diffident and almost shy, and to the Lion of the Evening is to him a distinction which is almost akin to pain.

A very distinguished American artist tells the following story of him. "Locke," he said, "was the guest at a reception one evening and was due at the Lambs club at 10 o'clock on the same night, when a dinner was to be given him by the members. Poor Mr. Locke, lionized by everybody, shy and almost embarrassed, felt that the time for the Lambs club dinner must be arriving, but was far too polite to look at his watch."

"I went to him on several occasions and suggested that time was flying and that it was essential that he should make a move, as he would be expected at the Lambs. After much hesitation he finally approached his hostess, timidly and with outstretched hand. 'I think I must really go,' he began. 'What!' exclaimed the hostess. 'You mustn't think of going yet,' and immediately commenced a brilliant fusillade of conversation directed at the lionized but embarrassed Locke."

"Poor Locke stood there, the picture of the poltrest trepidation. Finally the lady left him, her duties calling her elsewhere. I then maneuvered him to near the door, when, coming behind him, I fairly pushed him from the room. Mr. Locke, rather shocked but intensely relieved, reached the Lambs club only 30 minutes late."
