Those Who Go Down to the Sea in Ships.

When the young leaves on the willows are green and the wind is fresh from the south, It is then I feel again your kisses warm on my mouth! But the stormy day You sailed away Brought sorrow to my door, And it seemed to me that the hand of hope can be lifted never more!

When I hear the ocean murmur, and the wind is hoarse with pain, When this long, lone stretch of land is gray with mist and rain, Then I look and long For your boat among To bring sweet peace to me, As I wait with heart as restless as the restless waves of the sea!

Ah! those who go down to the sea in ships, to the cruel, treacherous sea! They take all the sunshine with them who hide the waves' decree! The star that you steer by Is never seen by the eye. That shone when you looked at me With love's own fond reflection! (Oh, the desolate days to be!)

Oh! for a dream of the golden past, to drop this ceaseless pain, To wander again with you by the hedge-rows down the lane, To feel again the spring, With the birds upon the wing: The sea as blue as your eye, And never a sign of cloud-rack above in the cloudless sky!

It seems I am wedded to my grief! But the lonely curlew's call, The seaweed and the eel that with the surges rise and fall, Tell of the passing day, And a boat to sail away, Beyond this sad sea wall, To a far-off haven secure with a blue sky over all!

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

The Vacation of Griggs.

From Harper's Weekly.

Griggs had been in the office all summer. He had seen his fellows leave for their awful two weeks, and had heard, with some exactness, the cheerful words used to greet them when they came back. When, therefore, the day came to greet Griggs, this is what was written and hung by him as a sign upon his desk: Yes, I've been away on my vacation. Yes, I had a good time. Yes, the weather was fine. Yes, I'm glad to get back. Yes, the first day is always the hardest. Our sympathy is with Griggs.

And Just as Good as Ever.

From the Philadelphia Ledger.

An old physician of the last generation was noted for his brusque manner and old-fashioned methods. One time a lady called him in to treat her baby, who was slightly ill. The doctor prescribed castor oil.

"But, doctor," protested the young mother, "castor oil is such an old-fashioned remedy."

"Madame," replied the doctor, "babies are old-fashioned."

A member of the dentists' congress recently held in Berlin writes: "Our plans as to St. Petersburg for the gathering in 1914 failed. Not because there was any objection to the city, but because some of the men who might be delegates would either not be admitted or if allowed to enter the city would be uncomfortable while there. Russia is queer about according rights of residence to former citizens and to people of certain religious views, and having this in mind London was agreed upon as the next meeting place."

New News of Yesterday

This daily series of anecdotes and incidents that throw new, interesting and frequently dramatic light on famous events and personalities of the past have been collected by Mr. Edwards ("Holland") during nearly 40 years of more or less intimate acquaintance with many of the country's leaders since the civil war. Each anecdote or incident is fresh from Mr. Edwards' note book—hitherto unpublished. "New News of Yesterday" garnered from the men who made the news—the history—our from equally authoritative sources. As important contributions of the "human interest" sort to American history, these articles have a distinctive value all their own.

The Ten-Year-Long Dream That Made Ingersoll Famous

Any standard American encyclopedia or biographical dictionary will tell you that Colonel "Bob" Ingersoll was one of America's most famous orators. Certain it is that in many respects Ingersoll stands out as the greatest orator America has yet produced. Emotionally, this "and as a Shakespearean orator, so called, it is generally conceded that none has equaled him. He, too, possessed the rare gift of putting that elusive something into his periods that make them and thrill along their backbone when they are read, as they did when their creator delivered them with all the power of his magnificent eloquence and personality. Few, very few, of the world's famous orators so arouse the blood when they are scanned on the printed page.

As everybody familiar with Ingersoll's career knows, he gained national fame through his "Plumed Knight" speech. The day before he delivered it he was unknown; the day after his name was on the lips of the country. But not until now has it been told how Ingersoll came to conceive his masterpiece, how he built it up sentence by sentence through a period of years, and then, to please his brother, clinched his bold and famous writing it down in a few minutes.

One Memorial day, two or three years after he had begun the practice of law in New York city, Colonel Ingersoll stood on a corner watching the veterans of the civil war as they marched in review. In his mind's eye there were tears in his eyes as he looked upon the old soldiers, and turning to me he repeated the opening sentence of his justly celebrated Memorial Day address, which you can see engraved in bronze in the National Cemetery at Arlington: "The past rises before me like a dream." He saw, almost as vividly as he had seen in the days of the war itself, the soldiers on their march, rallying to the attack, charging, falling, and the "plumed knight" as he walked away in my company after the procession had passed I asked him if it were true that he wrote his famous "Plumed Knight" speech at about midnight one night, as had been incidentally reported in the papers.

Selling my arms and moving slowly through Madison Square, Colonel Ingersoll said:

"That story is partly correct. But the real truth is that I was 10 years writing that speech. I had been a great admirer of James G. Blaine from the time he was first a member of congress. I thought he was a typical American and would make a great president. I pictured to myself Blaine in political action. He often fascinated me when I saw him sitting in the chair of the speaker of the House of Representatives. Every now and then a thought would come to me in which I expressed to myself my ideas and my ideal of Blaine.

"I went to the republican national convention of 1874, at Cincinnati, in the company of my brother. We shared a parlor and had two bedrooms at the hotel. My brother knew that I had been asked to place Blaine in nomination. He became very nervous because I did not sit down and write out my speech. He was continually prodding me to do this, but I put him off. But I was really writing that speech all the time, mentally. I composed part of it on the railway train on the way to Cincinnati. At the time that had come to me from time to time respecting Blaine I mentally gathered and sifted, and decided upon the expression of my thought.

"On the evening of the day before the nominating speeches were to be made my brother said to me: 'Bob, you have got to write that speech before you go to bed.'

"All right," I said, "I'll write it this evening." So, a little before midnight I took my pen and ink and two or three sheets of paper and wrote out the speech. I was simply copying what was in my mind, what I had been years writing. You know, that is the way Webster prepared his famous reply to Hayne. After I had done that I went to bed and my brother wrote out simply did it to please my brother, and that is the way that they call the "Plumed Knight" speech was put down on paper at midnight in 10 minutes." ## A Mystery of Von Moltke.

From the Cleveland Leader.

Two brothers were once at Count von Moltke's house at an evening party; both were captives of the general's staff. The general came up to a group of gentlemen, one of whom was one of the brothers. After joining in the conversation, he asked the latter, "Just tell me who is that tall officer, near the fire place on the other side—I forget his name."

"That's my brother, your excellency," was the answer.

A smile stealing over the general's face suggested the idea that he had not obtained the information he wished. Some time after the general went to another group of people, and there joined the officer whose name he had inquired. Suddenly the others saw him turning away, with the same smile on his face.

Afterward, when they inquired from the young officer what the general had asked him, he replied "He asked me who that officer was over there."

"And that did you say?"

"I said that he was my brother." The general gave up inquiring the name of the two brothers for that evening.

Don't you remember when the trees, The oak trees and the beech, Were lost in clouds on days like these, And eyes could hardly reach Their waving tops? When noonday skies Were, oh, such deeper blue? When Jack's great beanstalk in our eyes Just grew and grew and grew?

And there were bells, so more than five, Of blue and white and red, Upon the morning glory vine That climbed up on the shed, To be a wonder and delight, So fresh and full of dew, To bud and open in a night— I see them now—don't you?

Don't you remember when the caves Were thick and full of gloom, Where captive maidens, once, like slaves Were chained in some damp room? When twilight rustling in the brush Was some fierce beast? A cow It was, but cows at dusk are—Hush! I think I hear one now.

Come, take a little trip with me, Forget the things that fret, For you may close your eyes and see Some things worth musing on. Why, I've seen Bluebeard's hidden room And Cinderella's shoe! And I have seen where violets bloom— So blue! So blue! So blue!

Awful, Crusted, Weeping Eczema on Little Sufferer—A Score of Treatments Prove Dismal Failures—Cure Achieved by Cuticura.

"My little boy had an awful rash all over his body and the doctor said it was eczema. It was terrible and used to water awfully. Any place the water went it would form another sore and it would become crusted. A score or more physicians failed utterly and dismally in their efforts to remove the trouble. Then I was told to use the Cuticura Remedies. I got a cake of Cuticura Soap, a box of Cuticura Ointment and a bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, and before we had used half the Resolvent I could see a change in him. ## HELPLESS WITH RHEUMATISM.

The Experience of Many Who Do Not Know the Kidneys Are Weak.

Jacob C. Bahr, 18 Broadway, Lebanon, Ohio, says: "For three months I was helpless in bed with muscular rheumatism and had to be fed. ## A Clean Man Outside cleanliness is less than half the battle. A man may scrub himself a dozen times a day, and still be unclean. Good health means cleanliness not only outside, but inside. It means a clean stomach, clean bowels, clean blood, a clean liver, and a new, clean, healthy tissues. The man who is clean in this way will look it and act it. He will work with energy and think clean, clear, healthy thoughts.

He will never be troubled with liver, lung, stomach or blood disorders. Dyspepsia and indigestion originate in unclean stomachs. Blood diseases are found where there is unclean blood. Consumption and bronchitis mean unclean lungs.
