Joseph Scardio, the Italian who was arrested last week charged with having made an attack upon Julius Felix a Mexican employed upon the convent, was before Judge Malone for preliminary hearing last Tuesday. After hearing the evidence the defendant was bound over to the district court and bond fixed at $200 in default of which the representative of sunny Italy is now a resident of the Hotel Grady. Felix, the man who was stabbed, is recovering rapidly and has resumed his position as a laborer upon the convent.

Stephen McGinnis returned last Sunday morning from Cody, Wyoming, where he spent the past three months visiting at the home of his son, R. J. Steve says he spent an enjoyable summer and spent a couple of weeks in Yellowstone park which contains the most beautiful scenery he had ever seen. He says that all former Holt county people who are residents of that portion of Wyoming are prosperous.

Dean Selah has filed a petition in the district court praying for a divorce from Marie Selah, to whom he was married in Philadelphia on March 31, 1909. They lived together until August, 1909, when she deserted him at Duluth, Minn. At the time of her desertion he was sick in bed and she refused to care for him. He alleges numerous acts of cruelty, among them being an attack on him with a butcher knife when she cut him upon the wrist, the scar of which remains as a reminder of her kindness. He asks for an absolute divorce.

A lady who understands advertising says "No lady wishes to be looked upon as a shopping fiend; she does not care to go into a store and have a merchant show all his stock in order to find out whether he keeps what she wishes to purchase and whether the article is sold at a price she can afford. It is much easier and pleasanter to look through the advertisements of a paper than it is to bore the clerks and waste her own time. Next to the local news items, the advertisements in a paper stating articles for sale with prices, will keep much of the money that goes to the large cities at home."

P. J. Fritchhoff of Cella was an O'Neill visitor last Tuesday. Mr. and Mrs. Fritchhoff returned two weeks ago from Sweden where they had spent the past eight months visiting relatives and friends in the land of their birth. It had been fifty-six years since Mr. Fritchhoff had left the old country and he said things were not at all as he expected to find them and he was homesick for home before he had been there two weeks. He says he seen lots of country during his absence but that none of it looked better than old Holt and that he was glad to get back again.

The Nebraska State League closed a very successful season last Saturday. Fremont won the pennant and will play a serious game with the champions of the Mink League, Falls City, for the championship of Nebraska. The scrap for the leadership of the Western League is still between Sioux City and Denver, with the chances strongly in favor of the Iowa city landing the pennant. It is reported that the Denver team will clear over $25,000.00 this season, so it appears that John Gunthorpe was wise when he passed up publishing the weekly paper at Plainview and went into the base ball business. His share of the profits of the Denver team, $12,000.00 is more than he could clean up in Plainview in a century.

J. C. Ecker of Winside, Nebr., was in the city Tuesday visiting old time friends and looking after business for the Mutual Insurance Company, for which he is agent in this territory. Mr. Ecker was a resident of this city twenty-one years ago and was local editor of the O'Neill Item then owned by the late Clarence Selah. Prior to that time he was engaged in the newspaper business at Minneola and made a reputation as a writer of entertaining democratic editorials. Mr. Ecker is now located at Winside where he has a newspaper but does not have much to do with the management thereof; the paper being conducted by Mrs. Ecker and son, Clyde. While a life long democrat J. C. says he will probably have to vote for Aldrich this year as he has no use for Dahlianism or his followers.

Nancy Sanders has filed a petition in the district court praying for a divorce from Charles Sanders, alleging extreme cruelty. They were married on November 5, 1885, in Knox county, Nebraska, and have for more than ten years been residents of this county. She alleges that defendant is the owner of 400 acres of land worth $8,000.00 and has personal property worth $3,000.00. She alleges that he has frequently threatened her life and that she has been compelled to leave home, on account of his abuse. Seven children are the result of the marriage, all but three of whom are doing for themselves and she asks for the custody of the three minors, an absolute divorce and such alimony as the court deems proper. She also asks a restraining order to prevent defendant from disposing of his personal property, and a temporary injunction has been granted and the case will come up for hearing upon September 24.

A thing too frequently overlooked in our public schools is the literary feature. "speakin, essay writin' and sich." The attainment of happily expressing one's thoughts and vividly portraying with pen the occurrences that meet us is rare—almost the exception—yet but few things are more advantageous; and a lack of this, though wise and learned in many things, places one at a great disadvantage in life, while a lack in many many things, yet proficient in this one particular, will carry the possessor further on the way to success than aught. The time for acquiring this "neglected feature" is often begun too late in life, when embarrassments become too great to be overcome. It should begin with the child. When he is mastering his monosyllables let him acquire the faculty of telling what he knows and sees in monosyllables, and let this be his daily, not weekly or monthly task, and as he advances in years he will advance in this, and his graduating effort, while it will be his best, it will not be a sort of spasmodic, unnatural effort for the occasion, never again to be attempted in life.

Mary W. Templen, aged sixty-one years, wife of E. Templen, who resides upon the old Burns farm about six miles northwest of this city committed suicide Tuesday morning about ten o'clock at her home northwest of town, by hanging. Mrs. Templen had been suffering from mental derangement for a little over a year and had threatened to do away with herself and she was closely guarded by her family. Last Tuesday morning her husband left the house for a few moments and when he returned found her hanging to the bedstead, having made a noose out of some straps taken from a telescope, tied them around her neck and then to the bedstead, then knelt down upon the floor and was choked to death. She was not dead when her husband cut her down but expired a few moments afterward. Deceased was the mother of thirteen children, nine boys and four girls, four of whom, two sons and two daughters, live here. The family moved here last spring from Jefferson county and built a splendid new home upon the farm they purchased and the tragic ending of the wife and mother is a severe blow to the family and many friends. The funeral will be held Friday, upon the arrival of the children who live in Washington. The many Holt county friends of the family sympathize with them in their affliction.

Presbyterian Church Notes.

The Presbyterian Brotherhood of the Niobrara Presbytery will hold a meeting in connection with the above presbytery at Atkinson from September 20 to 22nd. We are glad to welcome this successful evangelist to Holt county. Tuesday September 20th Mr. Camp will address the brotherhood during the afternoon and evening.

LETTER FROM D. L. POND.

The following letter from D. L. Pond, for many years a resident of Inman, to a friend there was handed to The Frontier for publication so that his many friends might be able to get his views on the "sunny south."

Dear Friend:—It is now just a month since we left Nebraska and I am getting so much better I think we struck it fine. After leaving Inman we visited our children at Plainview and Craig two weeks and had a good time. We made good connections all the way, kept on the Burlington to Kansas City, then Santa Fe. Left Kansas City about 11 a. m., coming through Kansas, I must say it did not look as good as Nebraska and we did not see western Kansas for we came through there in the night. We struck the Colorado line about daylight, from there all the way the general appearance is brown, much of the way dry and barren, hills, mountains and valleys so dry and barren the timber does not grow to any size and presents a scattered appearance, varying every mile you go, scrub pine, scrub oak, sage brush, soap weed, navaho and a number more. In Colorado we saw them make irrigation ditches, Arkansas river is in sight and used for irrigation. La Junta is a good town; here we turn south. Trinidad is the metropolis of southern Colorado, 15,000 inhabitants; altitude 6,056 feet. Picket wire river, or Las Animas river, the Indians call it Purgatory, because it rises so quick and floods the country, runs through the town, is dry now. As you cross the line into New Mexico you go through a tunnel a mile long, said to be the highest point. My memoranda reads like this, dry hills, alfalfa, brush, dry, corn, swampy, dry, fruit, red soil, alfalfa, dry, black rock, mountains, valley, dry, white rock, dry, alfalfa and etc. All the way from western Kansas to the Mexican line at El Paso, is one continuous changeable brown scenery, enlivened where water can be had and crops look good or bad according to the amount of water utilized. The Mexicans do the most of the farming. Of course their knowledge of water levels, dams and etc, are rude and the use of water is limited. Many of the streams go dry in the summer and only furnish water when heavy rains in the mountains send a flood and fill the ditches with a thick sediment of dirty water, very rich. The farmers get busy night and day as long as the water lasts, 24 to 48 hours, turning water on their crops. The Rio Grande runs the whole length, about the center of New Mexico, has a river bed to 1/2 mile wide but the stream is very small, not more than a rod wide in some places. We got to Albuquerque just at night, stopped off, looked up some cousins, found them doing well, had a good nights rest and a good visit, 18,000 or 20,000 inhabitants, probably the best city in the state. The Rio Grande touches the railroad here and we follow it to El Paso, Texas. The scenery is the same as described above, all the way down. Many of the stations are small, sometimes made up of adobe houses, mostly Mexican settlers, other towns show thrift and mark of the palatine. It takes a stretch of imagination to populate this vast territory but Uncle Sam is spending millions to develop the arid west, New Mexico and Arizona are liberal benefactors, the Roosevelt dam in Arizona and the Elephant Butte dam to be built on the Rio Grande river 100 to 200 miles above El Paso are among the largest, the latter to cost eight to ten thousand dollars; this dam will be 75 or 80 miles from here and built by the government. Deming is in the Membras Valley, 10 to 20 miles wide, surrounded with 15 or 20 mountain peaks, all more or less have mines. The river sinks in the ground 20 miles above, heavy rains caused it to overflow, Geo Graves and others have a dam 5 miles up and direct the water into a ditch with laterals. Bob is working 320 acres of Graves' land and has 160
