The Enemies.

Apropos of the enmity, now happily buried, that used to exist between Minneapolis and St. Paul, Senator Clapp said at a dinner in the former city:

"I remember an address on careless building that I once heard in Minneapolis.

'Why,' said the speaker in the sourse of this address, 'one inhabitant of St. Paul is killed by accident in the streets every 48 hours.'

Centennial of the "Lady of the Lake"

From the New York World.

This year, 1910, is the centennial of Sir Walter Scott's third great poem, "The Lady of the Lake," which is still widely read. Today all Scotland rises up and calls its author blessed, for the canny Scot calculated that during each season tourists spend at least $1,000,000 in seeing the spots made historical by the great master of the English lan guage.

The bard of Abbotsford didn't lose by the poem, either; he wouldn't sell his rights for a mess of pottage, as did John Milton with his "Paradise Lost," or Goldsmith for some of his classics. Scott got $10,000 for the copyright, and received more in after life. None of Scott's former works was ever looked for with half the anxiety as was the case with "The Lady of the Lake." The cantos, as they were sent to the press, were read to select circles by tames failurations and nearling with by James Ballantyne, and popular opin-ion greatly favored them. Everywhere it was anticipated that a great poem would appear, and when it was pub-lished it excited an extraordinary sensation. The first edition of 2,050 was soon sold out, and then followed in sation. quick succession four editions, so that in a few months 20,000 copies were sold. All the criticisms of the poem were in its favor.

In his introduction to the 1830 edi-tion Scott tells how the poem came to be written. The Highlanders, with their ancient manners, habits and cus-toms second to him to be particular. toms, seemed to him to be particularly adapted to poetry. He was also fa-miliar with the country, where he was in the habit of spending the autumn, while the custom of James IV—and more especially James V—of walking in disguise through Scotland afin disguise through Scotland af-forded him a hint of which he made the most.

Scott took great pains to verify the accuracy of the local circumstances of the poem, one day going into Perth-shire to ascertain if King James could actually have ridden from Loch Vennachar to Stirling castle within the time supposed in the poem, and found that it was quite practicable. And, notwithstanding the great success of the poem, Scott never grew conceited over it.

"Never was he a partisan of his own poetry," Ballantyne relates, reciting an anecdote. Being one day in Scott's Ibrary shortly after the poem was published, he asked Miss Sophia Scott how she liked it. She replied with per-fect simplicity: "Oh, I have not read it! Papa says there's nothing so bad for young people as reading bad panionship.

Seven Million Dollar Joy Ride.

From the Philadelphia Public Ledger. Seven million dollars on a joy ride through the streets of Washington is a sight to be seen every week day at the national capital.

And this money stands less chance of getting hurt through the careless-ness of the driver of the wagon it rides ness of the driver of the huger that any joy in or from outside forces than any joy rider animate or inanimate, in the country.

For the treasury has a new money wagon, a brand new vehicle, made of hard wood, iron and steel, with heavy locks and bars, to bring money from the bureau of engraving and printing where it is made, to the vaults of the treasury, where it is stored for safe And not only is the new wagon nearly bomb proof in itself, but just to make sure that some foolish person with visions of a Jesse James holdup lv scheme, will never succeed in accom-plishing anything of the sort, eight heavily armed guards ride to and fro with the $70,000,000.

All this extra precaution is due to the change in the system of making money. Until recently the money was printed at the bureau of engraving and printing, but sent to the treasury minus the seal and the number, so that it was not real money until handled in the treasury.

WESTERNERS KNOW HOW. That Is Why Farms Are Worth Five Times as Much as Those in East.

From New York Times. If the Times really wants to know why it is that western land-in Iowa or

Illinois-sells for $100 to $200 an acre, while plenty of farms can be bought in New York for $10 to $20 an acre, let it pay attention. The secret is about to be released. And let me say at the outset that with considerable familiarity with both west and east I'd much prefer to buy eastern to western lands. One point in favor of the western farm is that, whereas, a western farm, properly handled, will raise crops which pay a good interest on the investment without fertilizer, a great many acres of land in the $10 and $20 belt are of land in the $10 and $20 beit are merely something to put productive soil on top of. The French method of car-rying the land away when one moves wouldn't go bad in connection with several cheap New York farms.

Another thing, one can take an 80-acre farm in the middle west and plow every foot of it, while there are very few cheap farms in this section which can be cut up into fields large enough to pay for using large machinery. The result is that the eastern farmer, if ha to pay for using large machinery. The result is that the eastern farmer, if he is to make use of the cheap lands, must "putter." Now the right sort of puttering is profitable—fruit, berry and truck raising will make moderately iurge fortunes for diligent and capable men-but most men don't like that sort of business. The middle westerner is a whole lot happier with a four-horse gang plow and a harrow that wouldn't go between stumps in the east than he would be on a $10-an-acre New York farm. And he doesn't strike as many stones in the course of a season as the New York farmer will in a day. The New York farmer will in a day. The American farmer hasn't lost his sense of "bigness" of the country yet, and until he does lose it he will prefer to work the large farm rather than the small one, even if he gets no more for his labor. Furthermore-and this is not to be ignored—around that high priced land in the west will be found a more intel-ligent, better educated body of men, taking them "by and large," than in a given number of eastern farmers, be-cause the factories and the other city joys seem to lure a much larger pro-portion of the ambitious youth of the east. The city is so close to the farm that the transition is but a step. Of course there are many of the most in-telligent farmers of the country here, but the former with a desire for intelbut the farmer with a desire for intel-lectual associations—and some have it —will find loss of this opportuinty in the $10 and $20 localities than in the west. Intelligent farmers, like men in

WHY FISHES CHANGE COLOR.

Director Townsend Gives Result of

Some Curious Observations. From "Chameleons of the Sea," by Chas. Haskins Townsend in the Century.

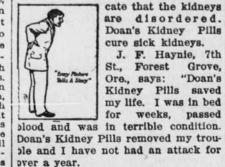

The colors shown on many well known colored plates of West Indian fishes published in standard works on ichthyology are, we find, not those of normal conditions, but rather those of dying, dead, and rapidly fading fishes. Experiments in the New York fishes. Experiments in the New York aquarium have shown that such col-ors are merely the vestiges of the iast convulsive color excitements of the specimens used. This is the ex-planation of the rapid changes for which the dying dolphin is celebrat-ed. Even if painted from newly caught wild fishes, held in a portable aquarium, as some of them were, they show hiding or alarm colors only, and in every case represent merely one of several possible phases of colora-tion.

In fact, it has been possible to show In fact, it has been possible to show by experiments with living fishes in the aquarium just which paintings and photographs reproduced in standard works were made from dead specimens and which were not. It is well known that Northern sea fishes habitually frequenting green or hands habitually requesting green or yellow seaweed acquire to some ex-tent the general color tone of their habitat, and that trout from dark water are dark colored, while those inhabiting waters where there is sandy or gravelly bottom are light colored. Such conditions have long Shrewd Scheme Stopped Run.

Many years ago, in consequence of a commercial panic, there was a severe run on a bank in South Wales, and the small farmers jostled each other in crowds to draw out their money. Things were rapidly going from bad to worse, when the bank manager, in a fit of desperation, suddenly bethought him of an expedient. By his directions a clerk, having heated some sovereigns in a frying-pan, paid them over the counter to an anxious applicant. "Why, they're quite hot!" said the latter as he took them up. "Of course," was the reply; "what else could you expect? They are only just out of the mold. We are coining them by hundreds as fast as we can." "Coining them!" thought the simple agriculturists; "then there is no fear of the money running short!" With this their confidence revived, the panto abated, and the bank was enabled to weather the storm.

High Value of Lands in France. rom Daily Consular and Trade Reports. Intensively cultivated alluvial lands in southern France are worth $650 to $800 an acre, especially in the Valley of Basse-Durance, where fruit and vegetable growing is carried on.
