OLD LONDON LEGEND.

The Church That Stands in the Field of Forty Footsteps.

The church in Woburn square, London, is said to occupy the site of the "Field of Forty Footsteps," to which a tragic legend attaches. The story dates from the days of Monmouth's rebellion. According to the version given in Mr. J. S. Ogilvy's "Relics and Memorials of London Town," two brothers fell in love with a woman who, either from callous vanity or fearing reprisals from the unsuccessful suitor, would not say which was to be the favored swain, suggesting that they should fight a duel and to the victor she would give her charms. They came from the town to this suburban field. The woman calmly sat down to await events. She had not long to wait, judging from the number of footprints, when one of the brothers fell dead, and as the victor approached she held out her arms to greet him, when, with a sudden revulsion of feeling for his brother's death, he slew her as she stood, and, turning the weapon, he drove it through his own heart. So they were found stiff in death with the footprints stamped in the wet clay, where they remained indelible through summer heat and winter frost; no green thing would grow, nor any man build himself a dwelling there. Streets were erected all round, but it was not until the nineteenth century that men took heart of grace and built a church there, when the consecration of the ground rolled back the curse and the memory of the legend grew faint and faded away.

DOWN THE BACK OF HIS HEAD

A Parting of the Hair From Which We've Partly Parted.

What has become of our well known fellow townsman that used to brush his hair two ways from a line extending from crown to collar and swing the ends over his ears? He was a leading citizen. He sat in the next pew in front at church and always attended the shows. He worked in a bank in St. Louis and was mate on one of the Mississippi river steamboats. He was a floorwalker in a New York dry goods store and kept a saloon just off the main street. Usually he wore a cluster of diamonds with a little chain attached in his shirt front. He was a conductor on the day express, a Mason and an Odd Fellow. He practiced medicine and worked in the boot and shoe store. He had been to California and played cards for money.

Well, he's still in town, although greatly changed. It was all the barber's fault. When he was in his prime and known to everybody the barber used to trim hair. Later he began to cut it. It wasn't long before our well known fellow citizen was nipped by the shears, his locks curled on the calico pinned around his neck and rolled to the floor, and there wasn't anything to part. When the barber's ruthless shears cut their way to the very scalp they killed a famous pomade customer, for the man that parted his hair behind always stood (or sat) for the things in the bottles which cost 10 cents extra.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

A Compliment For Him.

She was eighteen and very shy, and she never had been in the city before. There was no one at Broad street station to meet her, and she looked about timidly for a cab. Her mother had told her to take a hansom. She did not see any hansom, nor did she know that the "cabbies" wore a livery all their own. She did not see a policeman either, so she approached a youth who was standing on the corner of Fifteenth street with her bashful question.

"Please," she began, "are you a hansom man?"

The youth raised his hand and twirled his mustache ingratiatingly, smiling with deprecating assumption of modesty.

"I am so considered," he replied.—Philadelphia Times.

Hunger From the Liver.

Hunger, appetite, does not start from the stomach, as all believe and as you all feel when hungered, but the call for food really comes from the flesh of the whole body, mostly from the liver. It seems, for people who have had to have their stomachs taken entirely from their body still have the absent old stomach growl and yell three times a day for meals, something like people having finger pains and pleasures in a hand that has been cut off for years.—New York Press.

A Stone's Throw.

"The ancient Romans had a catapult that could hurl rocks more than a mile."

"Now I understand it."

"What?"

"My landlord told me this house was a stone's throw from the depot. He must have had it on his hands since the time of the Caesars."—Cleveland Leader.

Cleverness and Cunning.

Cleverness and cunning are incompatible. I never saw them united. The latter is the resource of the weak and is only natural to them. Children and fools are always cunning, but clever people never.—Byron.

Some Balm.

"Duke, I'm sorry," said the millionaire, "but my daughter can't marry you."

"Then I have loved in vain?"

"Not wholly, duke. Here's $50 for you."

The first years of man must make provision for the last.—Johnson.

This is the trademark which is found on every bottle of the genuine Scott's Emulsion the standard Cod Liver Oil preparation of the world. Nothing equals it to build up the weak and wasted bodies of young and old.

The evening session was a lecture by Chan C. A. Fulmer of the Nebraska Wesleyan University on "The Progress of the Teacher." This was a rare treat, the talk being full of good ideas for the use of the progressive teacher.

The association wishes to thank kind people of Ewing for their hospitality and especially the musicians who furnished such excellent music. We were royally entertained.

Methodist Church Items

At the Methodist church next Sunday morning and evening we expect to have with us one or more Missionaries from abroad who will conduct the services of the day. This will be a very unusual opportunity of hearing some of the best workers and most able speakers of Methodism. We are pleased to extend a most hearty invitation to everybody to come and meet and listen to those heroes of the mission field.

Immediately following our morning service, we always have an interesting and profitable session of the Sunday school. The attendance last Sunday was very encouraging and we hope to see a steady advancement along that line. Everybody invited.

Prayer meeting every Thursday evening at 7.30. To this interesting and helpful service we cordially invite all of our neighbors and friends.

The Ladies Aid Society will meet in the class room Tuesday afternoon at 8 o'clock. All ladies of the church and congregation are invited to meet with them.
