Spring Indications.

The indications of spring are now

fast developing. The air will soon be laden with sweet perfume of apple, plum and cherry blossoms and spring onions; the horn of the fish peddler floats upon the balmy breeze and is mingled with the seductive notes emanating from the interior conscience of the festive tree agent and the persuasive lightning-rod man. The lilac bush will soon burst out in its showers of blue and white simultaneous with the dude whose exterior measures the shallowness of the interior of his cranium; the ladies, heaven bless 'em, way of doing so than by subscribing are arrayed in light and airy raiment, summer silks, charming head gear, just too sweet for anything. The great American institution, the tramp, starts out from his winter quarters and hies off to the rural districts, beating sap out of railroad ties, and the farmer out of a square meal, giving a wide berth to wood piles, bull dogs and city marshals; the kids, with an eye to business, are gathering up the empty beer bottles in the highways and byways, and disposing of them for base balls and bats; the young men gather themselves together into parties of three and four, dig bait, cut poles, and then "cut sticks" for the happy fishing grounds, with a couple of sandwiches in their pockets and a case of b-r under the seat; the spring poet, the same one we killed last year, comes to life again, and springs more of the same kind upon the impecunious pencil pusher, putting the latter into a helpless state of lassitude, and a "tired" feeling generally; the old man puts new hinges on the iron gate, whitewashes the chicken coop, digs in the garden about five minutes, and then goes down to the drug store and swears for "back ache;" his better half has a wild look in her eye as she sits down and tells the hired girl that they'd better commence on "the best room" first; Charlie, arrayed in ice cream pants and a 75 cent straw hat calls on Mary Ann, and wipes all the paint off the front step; in the night; wagons loaded down with feather beds, stove pipe and etcetras, start on their erratic career from one end of the city to the other, closely followed by the old man with the clock under one arm and a mirror under the other, and "God bless our home" strung around his neck. Omaha papers report that the contract has been let by the Nebraska Transportation company to the Baker Construction company of Omaha for an inturban railroad to run from Omaha to Sioux City and from Omaha to Norfolk with a branch at Madison. Altogether 284 miles of track will be built with a power house near Elk City on the Platte river, capable of generating twenty-one thousand horse power. Two and a half years will be required to complete the road, and the cost will approximate eight millions. Arrangements for financing it have been completed with Europe an capitilists. Sixty miles of right-of way have been secured and the construction will start at once. The plan is to build a double track to Elk City from Omaha and from there run one line to Sioux City and the other to Norfolk. It is said there will be through service from Norfolk to Omaha every two hours. Possibly the south part of this county could induce this company to bring their line through that territory, say by building up from Albion or Elgin across to O'Neill. Several residents of southern Holt have expressed their willingness to make subtantial financial contributions to an enterprise of this kind and this newly organized company might be induced to build.

The Live Stock Market

South Omaha, Nebr., April 25th, -Special weekly market letter from Nye, Schneider Fowler Co.

Contrary to the general expectations the receipts are coming very liberal again this week with a continuation of the decline in values. It had been expected that receipts would be quite moderate this week and that there would be some improvement in prices, but it looks as if feeders were discouraged in holding out and were bound to let them come. There is little change in good quality stockers and feeders and strange to say, farmers are willing to take them out at these high prices in the face of the low price on killers.
