Reaping As He Sowed.

New York World: Mr. Bryan has discovered by painful experience that destructive criticism is a much easier task than constructive administration. In practice it is not such a simple matter to conduct a department of the national government so that other people will not find fault.

The secretary of state has now become the universal target of all the administration's opponents, and the situation is plainly getting on his nerves. He quarrels with the reporters. He resents requests for information. The more he is criticised the more secretive he seems. According to all reports from Washington, he is careworn, anxious, and irritable.

Mr. Bryan is probably astonished and indignant at the character of the criticism directed against him. He is not only held responsible for his own department, but he is blamed for everything that happens outside of it. He is the administration scapegoat. Scurrilous refugees who have been got out of Mexico at great trouble and expense sail into southern ports shrieking "To hell with Bryan." Jingoism accuses him of lacking patriotism. The war element insist that he is sacrificing his country in the hope of securing the Noble peace prize. Senators picture him as the ally of Villa. Standpat republicans are ready to prove that he is ruining the country, and nothing can save it but a return to Cannonism.

Criticizing Mr. Bryan is generally regarded as a much safer amusement than criticizing President Wilson, and doubtless it is.

In spite of adversity, however, we hope he will recover his philosophy. For sixteen years Mr. Bryan was very free in his criticism of other administrations in Washington. He is now taking a dose of his own medicine. It may taste bad, but will do him no real harm.

If the Holt County Agricultural Society is to have a fair this fall isn't it about time some move was made in that direction.

The Mexican trouble is still a long way from settlement and some of the best posted men in public affairs are under the impression that this country will have to kill a few hundred more Mexicans before peace is restored to that unhappy country.

Ross Hammond of the Fremont Tribune and revenue collector for Nebraska is mentioned as a probable candidate for the republican nomination for governor. Ross took a too active part in the unpleasantness of the last national campaign to make a good candidate at this time, although he possesses the qualifications to make an ideal governor.

Democrats over the state are beginning to realize that John Maher's candidacy for governor will be something more than a joke. From present indications the only typewriter hero of the Spanish-American war will be the only wet democrat to try for the nomination and the ardent Bryanites are fearful lest he might copy the nomination, which would be a direct slap in the face to the secretary of state. Before primary day rolls around the Nebraska democrats will probably be in such a scrap that a Donnybrook fair would be a Sunday school picnic as compared to it.

H. E. Sackett of Beatrice has filed as a candidate for the Progressive nomination for governor. Mr. Sackett is an able man and one well qualified for the position, but we believe that his entrance in the race as a progressive candidate is a mistake. He cannot hope to be elected and his nomination will only assist some standpat democrat to win the election for governor. Nebraska republicans are progressive and the republican nominee for governor will be a progressive republican. Why then divide the votes of the progressives in the state and allow the standpatters to step in between them and carry off the offices?

Chris Anderson of Bristow, Boyd county, has filed as a candidate for reelection as representative from the Fifty-fourth district, subject to the approval of the democratic electors at the primaries next August. Chris represented this district in the last session and made a good representative. During the last session he averaged well up with the balance of his colleagues and if a democrat is to represent this district during the coming session we do not think the bourbonites can select a better man. But this district is republican and should select a good republican, of progressive tendencies to represent this district the coming session. From present indications the next legislature will be overwhelmingly republican and if the people of Holt and Boyd want to be represented by a member of the party in power they will see that a good republican is nominated for this position.

Johnnie Wrote The Essay.

The language class were given for their lesson the task of writing a description of a ball game. One little fellow, a great fan, but not much on writing, declared that he could not write the story of a ball game. The teacher insisted, but still he could not put it on paper. He was kept after school until finally the exasperated teacher gave him ten minutes in which to write his composition or take a whipping. As the time was about to expire he handed in his paper and was excused. When the teacher read the compositions and came to his it contained these words: "Rain. No game."

Martin Wintermote Satisfied.

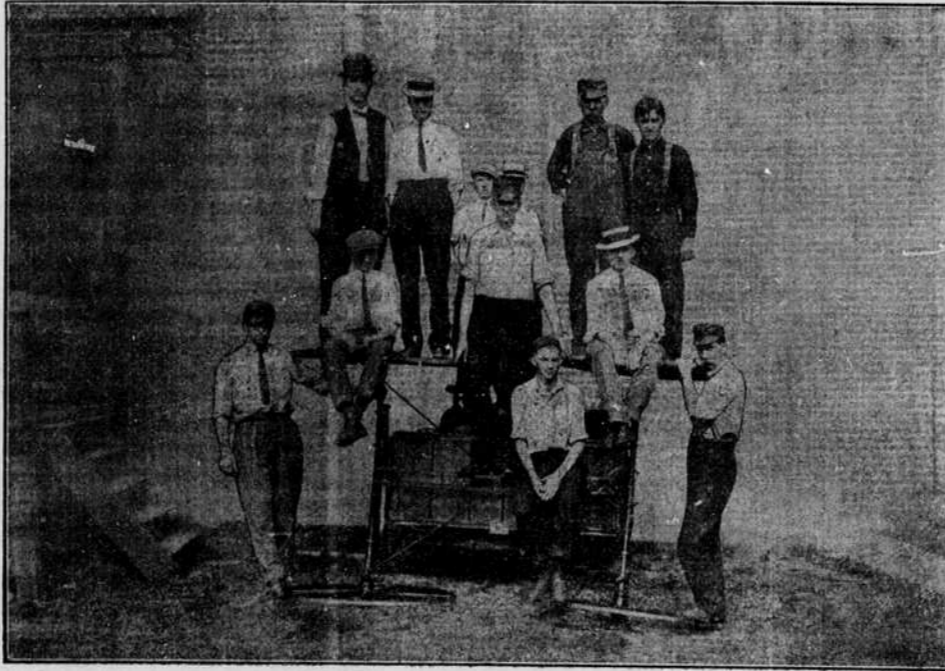

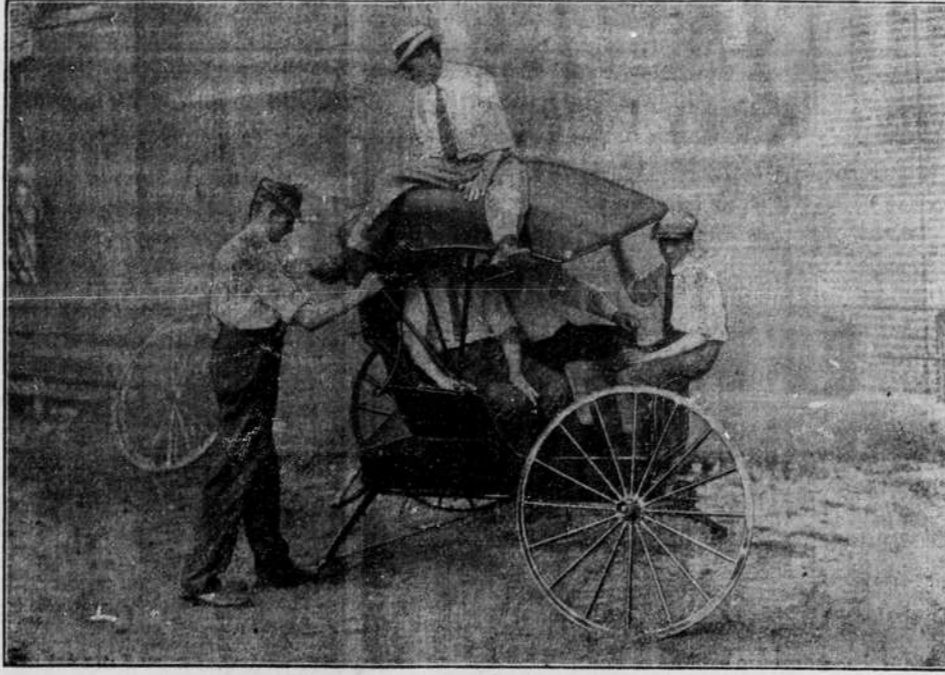

M. L. Wintermote of Chambers was in the city yesterday and made this office a short call, extending his subscription to the "old reliable." For four or five years Mr. Wintermote had the idea that he wanted to move from this county and a couple of times had deals on hand for the transfer of his ranch for Missouri land and later for Iowa land. Both of these deals fell through and Martin says that he is glad of it. Last summer, accompanied by Mrs. Wintermote, he went west and spent three months visiting relatives and looking over the country in Washington, Oregon and Montana and when he returned home he was better satisfied with old Holt than ever and immediately commenced the erection of new buildings upon his ranch and announced the fact that he was in old Holt to remain the balance of his days. Mr. Wintermote has a splendid place near Chambers and says that it looks better to him every day, than it did the day before.

Prevention Of Sore Shoulders.

Most farm horses have shrunk considerably since spring work began. Consequently, collars which were snug at that time are now too large. As a means of preventing sore shoulders on work horses, the Nebraska College of Agriculture offers the following suggestions. Looseness along the sides of the neck is what causes trouble rather than extra length of collar. If possible, work the hames rather long and thus squeeze the collar in against the sides of the neck. Lift the collar up occasionally on a hot day. A little air is of great benefit to the horse by cooling the shoulder. Lifting the collar gives the driver an opportunity to keep the knotted mane out from under it and affords an opportunity to discover foreign objects that may be galling the shoulders. The use of the sweat pad is to be discouraged, as it unquestionably makes the shoulder tender and more swollen. Sweet pads have the same effect on a horse's shoulder as a wool sock on a man's foot in hot weather. Unharness at noon. The benefits repay the trouble. Bathing the shoulder with cool water each night will help to keep it in prime condition.

Educational Notes.

(May 12, 1914.)

This office is in receipt of a very neat commencement card from the Ewing schools, Class 1914. Supt. James E. Delzell will give the Commencement address the evening of May 23rd.

School in District No. 210, Mae Griffin teacher, closed May 1st. This district planted ninety trees on the school grounds Arbor Day. H. S. Helme is director. We wish we might have a tree report from every school that is without trees.

The O'Neill Junior Normal opens June 8th and lasts eight weeks. Supt. C. A. Mohrman of Neligh has resigned and Supt. C. N. Walton of Wahoo was appointed principal. Supt. E. D. Lundak of Wakefield was recently appointed as a new member of the faculty.

Some time ago a list of schools was published in the Omaha papers that were accredited by the North Western Association of Colleges. Some mistake took this for schools accredited to the State University. It had nothing to do with Holt County's present standing at the University of Nebraska.

The first week of the Normal is institute week. Work of a special nature will be offered by each member of the faculty for those attending only during this week. Special classes will be organized, entirely separate from the regular Junior Normal classes, for those enrolled during institute. The county superintendent of Holt county has designated this week
