C. W. MOSS
Republican Candidate for State Senator, Twenty-fourth District.

C. W. Moss, the republican candidate for state senator, is one of the pioneer residents of this county. Mr. Moss came to Holt county twenty-seven years ago and took up a homestead in Wyoming township where he resided until about six years ago when he moved to Atkinson. While living in the south country he engaged extensively in the stock business and now owns one of the best stocked and equipped ranches in the county, consisting of 2,300 acres.

He was a firm believer in Holt county as a great dairy country and for five years was manager of the Amelia Creamery during the early days of the dairy business in this county. The years that he was the head of the creamery were the most successful in the history of that institution, which is a tribute to his ability as a shrewd and capable business man.

While manager of the creamery his ability as a business man was recognized by his neighbors of Wyoming township as he was elected as a member of the county board from that township, serving the people of Holt county faithfully and well for six years continuously.

Since moving from the ranch Mr. Moss has had general supervision of the affairs there, the active management being in charge of his son, Theodore.

Mr. Moss' success of his own business and his standing as a citizen and a man is such that the republicans of this senatorial district are to be congratulated in having such a sound, progressive business man as their candidate for state senator and we believe that his election in November is assured, the only question being the size of his majority.

Unless the war lets up politics will receive but little attention in the daily press this fall.

Republicans of Nebraska enter the campaign this fall with the firm conviction that victory will be theirs at the general election next November.

W. A. George, present state treasurer, was elected chairman of the republican state committee at the meeting of the committee at Lincoln last Tuesday.

The Belgian reports indicate a loss of 40,000 men killed in battle. During the civil war in this country but 67,000 men were actually killed in battle. This gives an idea of the magnitude of the struggle now going on in Europe.

Party lines promise to be broken this fall as never before in Nebraska. Thousands of progressive democrats will rally to the standard of the republican candidate for governor. A large portion of the republicans who voted for Morehead two years ago will vote for the republican candidate this fall and some of Morehead's friends are already predicting his defeat.

The republicans of Nebraska are especially fortunate this year in having one of the ablest men in the state as their candidate for governor, R. B. Howell, of Omaha. While Mr. Howell was not our first choice for this office at the primaries we recognize in him one of the brainy men of the state, thoroughly progressive and a fearless fighter for a cause he believes to be just. He will be bitterly opposed by all the corporate interests in the state but the common people will rally to his standard in such numbers that there will be no question of his victory at the polls next November.

Why Pick On Belgium?

From the New York Evening World: As the "far flung battle lines" surge back and forth across Belgium one is more and more appalled by the hideous injustice of the fate which has overtaken this brave little country.

What in heaven's name was Serbia to Belgium or Belgium to Serbia that this peaceful and prosperous land of fine cattle, rich fields and teeming mines, supporting more people to the square mile than any other area in Europe, must be torn and trampled under the feet of a ruthless invader? The Belgians had no quarrel with anybody. Nobody hated them. Belgium was literally a land of milk and honey. Its fertile farms, beautiful valleys and thrifty cities were the delight of travelers who passed over its railway lines. Yet now its farmers must desert their fields to fight for them, while the soil grows rank with blood and battle!

Future generations will thrill when they read of the defense of Liege. They will weep over the injustice which made an innocent and inoffensive country the stamping ground of war.

Paris When Besieged.

Sioux City Tribune: The prospect of Paris being besieged adds another hard task to the already long row of those that confront the American ambassador at Paris. Even were he so disposed, it is not likely the ambassador could escape remaining in Paris during a siege, because of his duties. As representative of the German and Austrian interests, as well as of America, his work would be increased by a siege.

During the siege of Paris in 1870, Elihu Washburn, of Illinois, was the ambassador from this country. Then, as now, the interests of the German states were committed to the American representative. When the cordon tightened nearly all other foreign representatives, taking advantage of the opportunities offered them as representatives of neutral governments, left Paris. Washburn refused to go, saying that the interests committed to his care needed his protection more during such a time than at any other.

He was right. As the siege proceeded French fury vented itself on Germans remaining in Paris, many of them women and children. First they were thrown in a dungeon. Washburn demanded their immediate release, and secured it. During the reign of the commune, which followed the overthrow of Napoleon III, Washburn stood between the Parisian mob and the wanton destruction of all kinds of property. He was the only person in all Paris to whom the leaders of the commune showed any respect.

During the siege Bismarck issued an order that no dispatches from embassies in Paris to foreign governments would be permitted to pass the German lines unless they were unsealed and subject to the inspection of Germans. European embassies immediately seemed willing to agree, but Ambassador Washburn notified Bismarck that he would not submit any communication he might wish to send to the United States to the inspection of "any government or authority on the face of the earth." No matter what Bismarck thought at the time, he respected Washburn's decision.

As the siege progressed food grew very scarce and suffering was intense. Washburn was placed at the head of a committee to perfect a system for feeding Paris so as to conserve what little food remained within the lines. As to what straight of starvation existed the following extract from Washburn's diary shows:

"The new quotations for the day are as follows: 'For cats, a common cat, 8 francs; a Thomas cat, 10 francs; for rats, a common rat, 2 francs; long tailed rat, 2 francs and a half; for dogs, a cur of low degree, 2 francs a pound; for a fat dog, 2 1/2 francs, and for a damn fat dog, 3 francs per pound."

After the siege was over and the terms of peace had been signed, Washburn was publicly thanked by practically every government on earth for the service he rendered during the siege, the impartial yet firm way in which he handled all affairs brought to his attention, while he received the personal thanks of the German emperor, Bismarck, President Thiers and Gambetta in the form of letters.

Fighting the Bubonic Plague.

The bubonic plague, one of the most deadly and dreaded of oriental diseases, has made its appearance in New Orleans. This disease is so dreaded by the medical profession of this country, on account of its deadliness and the rapidity with which it spreads, that the United States government sent its chief health officer to New Orleans to take charge of the work of exterminating the disease. It is a germ disease and is spread by rats and the government is endeavoring to exterminate the rats in the southern city and thus prevent the spread of the disease.

As president of the Nebraska State Medical Association Dr. J. P. Gilligan of this city receives weekly reports from the Surgeon General in command of the health department of New Orleans. These reports give an idea of the enormous amount of work being accomplished by this department in an attempt to prevent the spread of the disease and through the courtesy of Dr. Gilligan we are allowed to publish the report for the week ending August 22nd.

Sir: I have the honor to submit the following report of service transactions in New Orleans for the week ending August 22, 1914:
