A Pledge.

New York Sun: "I, John Smith, citizen, by birth or by solemn oath of allegiance, of the United States of America, do resolve from henceforth to avoid the pessimistic negligence, unmanly surrender of prerogative, and unjust default of civic duty that give opportunity to the demagogue, the disloyal propagandist, the organized strength of "pacifist" weakness; to oppose so far as in my power lies the civic heresies of hypocritical or blind idealism and the treachery that would send Uncle Sam, armed with a broken-bladed jackknife, into international ways where highwaymen lurk; to support my party so far as it promises to uphold the American flag, to defend American rights, and protect American citizens; to endeavor to purify it of factionalism and error, and in every way, by restraint of selfish impulse and cultivation of sanity with courage, to contribute so far as I may to the spread of true Americanism in this time of test. I shall earnestly and unceasingly endeavor to keep my head straight on my shoulders and not twist the other fellow's neck because he is not looking in the direction I do.

Guilty Consciences.

The editor of a newspaper in a nearby town borrowed a gun from a friend the other day to go hunting. When he appeared with it on the street, he noticed a peculiar agitation among the denizens of his town. People rushed from store to store and little crowds gathered in the doorway and windows to watch him pass along. The editor was thinking about the vacation ahead of him, but his face, from habit, was set and stern. Suddenly a man, braver than the rest, rushed up with a dollar bill in his outstretched hand. "Bill," he said, "old boy, I've been intending to hand you this dollar for six months. It's for the subscription I owe you." The editor gasped, almost fainted, caught himself and manfully accepted the proffered dollar with a look which said "Go on! Damthetorpedoes!" The man rushed away, and several others braved the editor's gun and paid up back bills. Altogether, when the editor arrived at the office he had a nice roll, enough to pay for his vacation and some left over. But a surprise awaited at the office. He found six bushels of potatoes, ten dozen eggs, a load of hay, two fine hogs, a firkin of butter, two bushels of corn and a gallon of hard cider. In the center of his desk was a large placard, and somebody had written on it: "Dear Bill: All the boys have paid up in full. Put up your gun and be friends again."

Don't Be Radical.

Life: The sooner young folks learn not to be radical the sooner will they find themselves floating serenely down the stream of life without friction. To be radical takes lots of trouble: You have to be continually ripping off veneers, scratching surfaces, engaging in original reasearch, applying acid tests, lifting lids, making analyses, tearing off masks, demanding proof, and so on illimitably. But it is all pernicious activity. The leaders and makers and sellers of earth fix things up so that they will seem to be so-and-so; their leadership and their fame and their profits depend upon our being perfectly credulous and accepting things for what they seem. Why, then, ask embarrassing questions and thus incur the everlasting ill-will of those who are trying to hoodwink us? It is much better to take things as they come (paying cash, of course) and be humbly grateful.

None Equal to Chamberlain's.

"I have tried most all of the cough cures and find that there is none that equal Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It has never failed to give me prompt relief," writes W. V. Harner, Montpelier, Ind. When you have a cold give this remedy a trial and see for yourself what a splendid medicine it is. Obtainable everywhere.

All Records Broken.

It was no exaggeration when the slogan "Biggest and Best" was adopted for the 1915 Nebraska state fair. Without taking into consideration the Saturday attendance the people admitted in the six days of the fair numbered 172,376, 6,000 more than in 1912, Nebraska's biggest state fair year. Better yet, the displays in all lines were record breakers. This was especially true in live stock, poultry, agriculture, horticulture, automobiles, bees and honey and in the display of Nebraska made products.

Inman Items.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Burch and Mr. Naylor of O'Neill, were Inman visitors Friday.

Walter French of Page, was in Inman Monday enroute to Lincoln to attend Wesleyan.

Henry Nelson of Wakefield, was here visiting his sister, Mrs. Ed. Larson. He returned home Wednesday accompanied by his sisters, Miss Hilda, who had been visiting here for some time.

Miss Edith Killinger went to Grand Island last Monday to attend school.

Miss Blanche Baker went to Ewing Sunday to attend school at that place. Miss Carrie Coventy commenced teaching in the Woodward district last Monday.

Miss Jessie Sprecher of Blair, commenced school at the Willow Lake district last Monday.

Mick Coleman and Hank Fowler came up from Meadow Grove last Saturday to visit over Sunday.

A surprise party was given in honor of Miss Hilda Nelson at the home of her sister, Mrs. Ed. Larson, last Saturday evening. The young folks report a fine time.

To the one giving me the best Holt county Farm Loan, not the largest, but the best farm loan on my fifteen year and six months amortization plan, before September 21st, I will give a family ticket, including team and automobile, for the entire four days of the Holt County Fair.

Everyone placing a farm loan with me, large or small, I will give a family ticket, good for one day to the Holt County Fair
