ANNOUNCEMENT.

A special cut-price mail rate of only $3.50 a year is made for the Daily and Sunday State Journal with colored comic section and magazine. Without the Sunday paper the mail rate will be only $2 a year. The State Journal price heretofore has been $5 a year for Daily and Sunday and $4 without the Sunday.

The publishers believe it is possible to give its patrons the benefit of cutting out traveling solicitors' salaries, hotel bills, railroad fares and other expenses. Therefore these new rates. A sufficient increase in the business should make these special rates permanent.

There will be the same expenditure of money and brains in producing The Journal in the future that has given it the reputation of being the most ably edited and most carefully prepared newspaper in Nebraska. The Journal receives the full Associated Press reports, has its special Washington representative, and hundreds of local correspondents throughout the state. It has a corps of special writers who produce articles upon subjects of which they have real knowledge. The Journal is Lincoln's only morning paper.

It has always been the endeavor of The State Journal to serve the people of Nebraska and its efforts have now the approval of thousands, its circulation being at its highest point at this time. It is especially fitting now to reach out and include thousands of others in our list of readers. The character and cleanliness of a paper is much to be considered in its admission to the home.

These new prices are but little more than usually charged for a good weekly newspaper and hundreds of families which are not now subscribers to a daily will feel able to have one since they can have the best for $2 a year, or $3.50 including Sunday.

There are many in the state who, while preferring The Journal, have felt compelled to take cheaper dailies. These can now have their favorite paper, because now the "best" is also the "cheapest." News dealers throughout the state will deliver The Journal, week days and Sundays, with the special Sunday features, for only ten cents a week. Address

Poison Prairie Dogs.

The most effective method of exterminating prairie dogs is by poisoning, according to the Agricultural Experiment Station. For the beginning of operations, late fall or early winter is usually the best time.

The most practical formula suggested by the Experiment Station is one composed of one ounce of powdered strychnia sulfate or strychnine alkaloid, one-half teacup of laundry or gloss starch, one teaspoonful of saccharine, in one quart of boiling water. Dissolve the strychnine, starch, and saccharine in the boiling water. Pour the solution over 12 quarts of grain (preferably wheat) which is held in a tight vessel, such as a galvanized-iron tub, which should be subsequently scrubbed clean. Stir the mixture very thoroughly every grain receives a thorough coating, then spread the grain out to dry. Sprinkle a teaspoonful near the mouth of each occupied burrow.

The cost of such treatment is approximately five to eight cents an acre.

Moisture The Controlling Factor.

Moisture conditions are so all-powerful in controlling yields that tillage methods, rotation, crop sequences, and soil fertility are all thrown into the background. The changes in weather conditions from season to season and from day to day of each season are so radical and so various that one system of tillage may succeed one year and another system succeed the next year. However, there are a few rather broad principles that apply to a wide range of conditions covering the medium and also many of the extreme conditions. All of these principles are subject to modifications, as there are no set and fast rules. It has been rather clearly established that moisture is the chief factor controlling crop production in this region. There seems to be an excess of fertility over available moisture at the present time. Therefore, any expense incurred for the purpose of maintaining or increasing the fertility is largely a loss so far as the yields of the succeeding crops indicate. —Bulletin of the Agricultural Experiment Station.

Proposed Personal Licenses For All Saloon Patrons.

Spurred on by the fact that more than half of the arrests made by the Lincoln police are for intoxication, City Commissioner Wright proposes to issue individual licenses for all saloon patrons. The commissioner will bring the matter before the city council at its next session.

Commissioner Wright declares that this system would have the effect of checking over consumption of alcohol. Licenses would be printed on tiny cards that could be carried conveniently in the pocket. A nominal fee would be charged for a license, not to exceed 50 cents or $1, and the revenue used to help support the expense of running the city. The commissioner would confine the license only to whiskey drinking, because of the "kick" in the liquor.

Commissioner Wright says that the chief value of the license system would be its ability to weed out the drunks or inebriates. Intoxication would mean that the holder of an individual license would at once lose his permit to imbibe strong liquor, and the license would only be renewed by application to the city commission after making a showing that the offense would not be repeated. Commissioner Wright says that if the plan has been proposed anywhere yet he has never heard of it. Lincoln saloon men are much interested in the proposed plan, but they are not talking.

Farm Owners.

According to tabulations made by the Nebraska State Board of Agriculture, there are more owners of farms occupying the land this year than at any time in the history of the state. More than 73,600 farm owners are residing on their farms, according to the Nebraska assessors. Last year the number reported was 65,221. In 1912 the number of farm owners aggregated 72,448. This stood as a record until 1915.
