Frank Gotch, former champion wrestler of the world, again has retired. It is much easier to retire voluntarily than by meeting Joe Stecher.

President Wilson should promptly call a special session of congress to settle that New York strike the strikers way. A majority of the strikers are voters.

A certain manufacturer of optical goods advertised that President Wilson wears bi-focal glasses, giving him two points or ranges of vision at all times. This explains many things.

A story, on election betting this fall in Nebraska, either indicates that the World-Herald practically concedes a republican victory, or else that some reporter, copy reader or city editor is about to be fired.

Prosperity has struck the Ewing Advocate to such an extent that it has increased its size from a five column to a six column quarto. We are glad to see the Advocate "grow with growing Ewing," as the slogan goes.

Chris Gruenther of Columbus, democratic politician and Hitchcock, lieutenant, had his trousers and spending money stolen at the Paxton hotel in Omaha Monday night. We didn't think the feud between the Bryanites and the followers of the senator had reached that stage.

The Hitchcock democratic wisecracker now admit that Hughes, Sutton and the republican state ticket are more than likely to win in Nebraska this fall, and are devoting their time to a supreme effort to re-elect the present senator. Everything else is to be sacrificed to accomplish this end.

Now comes the word that President Wilson is going to abandon his policy of "watchful waiting," in the shade of Shadow Lawn, and hike out to Omaha to attend the Ak-Sar-Ben. While at Omaha, it is understood, the President will be prevailed upon to deliver one of his non-partisan addresses. Somebody must be "skereed."

John Prindle Scott of Philadelphia, who won the prize for writing the music for the official Nebraska ode, didn't begin writing music until after he became deaf. We haven't heard this tune yet, but we have heard others which we firmly believe were written by composers not only deaf, but also blind and crippled with rheumatism.

The straight-from-the-shoulder address of John L. Kennedy, son of the common people, and republican candidate for United States senator, at O'Neill Saturday evening, was thrilling and convincing to his audience. Will that of Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock, the aristocrat, be as much so next Saturday evening.

A Bacchanalian visitor to the county fair, one day last week, was up before the dispenser of justice the next morning. "What is the charge?" inquired hizzoner. "The Wilson three-step," curtly replied the minion who had the visitor in custody. "Ah, I see," quoth justice, "one step forward, one step backward and then one sideways." Then he hung one on the visitor.

The Nebraska supreme court is in the limelight this week. A present associate justice, the first of the week, in a deposition testified to his former interest in a combination which seems to have made a practice of freezing out its small competitors any old way. A former chief justice was fined $10 and costs down in Hall county for shooting two Chinese pheasants. Let the good work go on.

President Wilson and his advisers, likewise the Democratic national committee which doesn't always advise with him are declaring heatedly and at length that the President isn't frightened and may not make a tour of the country to bolster up his cause. The President has announced that he has no "intention" of making a tour, but that he will carry out the "plans tentatively made for several speeches on public questions." When asked whether Mr. Wilson would go as far west as the Pacific coast in making these speeches, Vance McCormick, democratic national chairman, replied: "Hardly that far." Aside from a ten or fifteen thousand mile trip, the President probably will confine himself to a few remarks from his "po'ch" at Shadow Lawn.

Mr. Taft Aroused.
St. Louis Globe-Democrat: When Secretary of War Baker unfairly sought to place responsibility upon Mr. Taft for President Wilson's blundering in Mexico, the Globe-Democrat said that even the patience and good humor of Mr. Taft has its limitations, and that they had probably been reached by such tactics. In the current number of the Yale Review the former president, dealing with our Mexican and other foreign relations, comes very near a use of the short and ugly word in this polite sentence: "I am surprised that Secretary Baker seeks to recognize Huerta by saying that I refused to do so. This is very far from the fact." He then reaches and flips out the kernel of truth in the nut by saying: "Ambassador Wilson advised recognition of Huerta, after securing from him action upon the rightful claims of the United States in matters of dispute, and of her citizens for injuries sustained by them. Had the Republican administration continued it would have recognized Huerta."

In this close following of the logic of events, and of his own argument, the former president renders a distinued public service. Huerta, having taken action desired by the United States, and being "the only official, de facto or de jure, exercising real power in Mexico for law and order," Mr. Taft says that nothing but courtesy due to his successor, about to take office, withheld him from recognizing Huerta before his own retirement. "It was amateur diplomacy and statesmanship," he declares, "which led Wilson and Bryan to assume the right to convict Huerta and declare him ineligible."

"It was not for us," he continues, "to prescribe who should become the head of that independent state." He charges, and the record proves, "many breaches of international law." These might be forgiven had contempt for all our own precedents and violations of our established continental policy resulted in speedy pacification of Mexico. Resulting, as they have, in increasing and prolonging the miseries of an unfortunate people, what can be said in their defense?

Exposing a Huge Deception.
Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph: In his second swing around the circle Mr. Hughes is fully sustaining his record as a 100 per cent campaigner. His methods during his first tour surprised and disconcerted the Democrats, who had counted confidently on a dignified, unimpassioned discussion of the issues, quite in the manner of a Supreme Court justice delivering an opinion. But Mr. Hughes put punch into his campaigning and he is keeping it there. In his denunciation of the way in which the Adamson wage-fixing bill was made a law, in his Illinois speeches, Mr. Hughes did not spare the administration, and there is no reason why he should. Democratic newspapers rise to the height of impudence with their assertion that this matter should not be made a political issue, when the fact is that Democratic stump speakers, by their misrepresentation of the object of the law, their claim that it established hours of labor instead of merely fixing wages, themselves have made it an issue and a most important one for the consideration of thoughtful voters.

The manner in which President Wilson, repudiating the principle of arbitration in practice, through professing admiration for the theory, demanded "legislation without investigation," personally supervising the jamming of the measure through Congress, itself deserved to be vigorously condemned. It provides abundant justification for criticism by right-minded persons. But the subsequent course of Democratic partisan writers and speakers in attempting to give the people an entirely false impression of this law and what it comprehends calls for public censure in unsparring measure. It is clearly to be seen, therefore, as has been said, that the action of President Wilson, which he must now be repenting in secret, is not merely a legitimate but a leading issue of the campaign. This issue presents two distinct phases: first, Mr. Wilson's surrender to what he considered political expediency at the expense of the public welfare and his assault on the principles that should govern all legislation, and second, his defenders' shameless misrepresentations of the object of this wage-fixing law. On both points Mr. Hughes is performing a public service by enlightening the people, and more power to him! There is every indication that the issue which the Democrats themselves have made is going to prove a powerful boomerang in November.

KEEP THE KIDNEYS WELL
Health is Worth Saving, and Some O'Neill People Know How to Save It.

Many O'Neill people take their lives in their hands by neglecting the kidneys when they know these organs need help. Weak kidneys are responsible for a vast amount of suffering and ill health—the slightest delay is dangerous. Use Doan's Kidney Pills—a remedy that has helped thousands of kidney sufferers. Here is an O'Neill citizen's recommendation:
R. H. Mill, proprietor of confectionery store, O'Neill, says: "I have had no further need of Doan's Kidney Pills since recommending them some time ago. I still praise them because of the very satisfactory relief they gave me from backache and lameness I had when my kidneys were disordered."
Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Mills had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.
