A certain make of car, which other manufacturers deny is an automobile, at last has been officially classified. It is a necessary farm implement. Frank Geis in his closing out sale advertises his jitney for sale among his farm machinery.

President Wilson has spoken another "final" word to the Mexicans. Among the many definitions given by Webster for "final" is "last", and for last, "being after all the others." This is probably what the president means. As the late Peter Mortensen used to say, when as state treasurer he was a member of the state board of assessment, "tentatively final."

Thousands will suffer in Chicago this winter who have not suffered heretofore because of a new kink in the increased cost of living. The cost of producing beer has increased and as a result the Chicago bars have decreased the size of the five-cent glass of beer one-third. It is such trampling upon the already down-trodden people that eventually brings about revolution, anarchy and bloodshed.

Do you know that Holt county furnishes sustenance to practically all countries of the civilized world, and perhaps to some that are not civilized. Well, it does. Holt county furnishes the hay that is fed at the stockyards of South Omaha and Sioux City. It is supplied to these yards by Ryan & Froelich, hay dealers of O'Neill. This hay is fed to the live stock constantly pouring into these great markets, the packers convert the live stock into food and other products, which are shipped all over the world, and there you are.

The Adamson eight-hour law, passed by congress during the late campaign at the behest of the president, was held unconstitutional by Judge William C. Hook of the United States district court, at Kansas City, Mo., Wednesday. The decision was expedited at the request of both the attorneys for the government and the Missouri, Oklahoma and Gulf railroad, which was seeking an injunction to prevent enforcement of the act. The action in reality is to test its constitutionality, and the expedited lower court decision is to bring it to the soon as possible. Judge Hook's decision, that the act is unconstitutional, places the expense and burden of the appeal on the government.

Six hundred packages containing the ashes of Joseph Hillstrom have been distributed by the Industrial Workers of the World to the local chapters of the order over the country to be scattered by them. Hillstrom, who was prominent in the organization, was convicted of murder in Utah, and choose shooting instead of hanging as the method of receiving the death penalty, which is permissible under the laws of that state. His body was cremated and his ashes are being distributed according to his expressed wish, he evidently desiring to pose as a martyr. Joe probably will have a little trouble getting himself together judgment day.

Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria-Hungary died Tuesday night in Vienna of ailments from which he has been a sufferer for some time and which were aggravated by the worries incident to the great war. The present conflict was precipitated by the assassination of Archduke Francis Ferdinand, heir to his throne. Archduke Charles Francis, his grand nephew, will succeed to the throne of the dual empire. Emperor Francis Joseph was 86 years of age at the time of his death and had reigned almost 63 years, the longest reign of which there is any authentic record in the history of civilization. His reign was one of sadness and romance, outclassing in these respects the best fiction of the most talented authors. The map of Europe changed several times while he sat upon the throne, and some of the most noted rulers and characters of history blazed forth and were extinguished during that time. He was a truly great man.

Now that Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria-Hungary is dead, John Orth will be discovered to be alive and a resident of Denver, Wichita, Gary, Ind., and perhaps O'Neill, by the enterprising newspaper correspondents. He in times past has been discovered in all of the places, with the exception of the last named, by the Sunday newspapers. John Orth was the name assumed by Archduke John, nephew of the Emperor, who became heir to the throne when the emperor's only son, Crown Prince Rudolph, died a mysterious and violent death near Vienna in 1889. The archduke fell in love with one beneath his station and rather than give her up renounced his claims to the throne and as a member of the royal family and with his bride sailed away to the west as captain of a merchant vessel. He never again was heard from, but is supposed to have come to the United States and begun life anew as John Orth, mechanic or farmer. He may be alive today and perhaps your neighbor. During several crisis of the empire and severe illnesses of the emperor he sought, and yellow journals claimed to have discovered him at the several towns named. The most important and perhaps authentic of these "discoveries" occurred ten or twelve years ago, when the emperor was supposed to be upon his death bed. At that time a correspondent discovered in a steel manufacturing suburb near Chicago a John Orth, mechanic, who answered to the physical description of the missing archduke. He was working in the steel mills and with his wife and several children occupied a small cottage in the little manufacturing town. The story attracted the attention of the Austrian diplomats and secret service agents and they investigated and tried to interview the man. He was uncommunicative and reticent, and the seekers for the archduke were baffled, although declaring their belief that he was the long lost one. Afterward the mechanic quit the steel mills and disappeared.

ed Ben Lefler to the scene.

Mrs. Heresel, who had been cooking at the grading camp of Hy. Nightengale near O'Neill, and at which her husband was employed, went to Atkinson Thursday evening on the early evening passenger. Steger and Lefler were lounging around the Atkinson station when she alighted from the train. Mrs. Heresel started west, up the railroad track, toward her residence, and Stege followed her. Several hundred yards from the depot he attacked her and attempted to stifle her screams by placing his hand over her mouth. Lefler, however, heard the woman scream and ran to her assistance. Stege fled. Friday Lefler was questioned by the authorities, having been seen around the depot with Stege, and identified Stege as Mrs. Heresel's assailant. Stege, who is married and has a family, was arrested and brought to O'Neill by Sheriff Grady Friday evening.

Double Wedding.

A very pretty double wedding was solemnized at the Catholic church in this city last Tuesday morning when Rev. Father Giblin pronounced the words that united in the bonds of matrimony Walter Stein and Miss Zeffa Ziemer of this city and Oscar Gifford Marcotte, of Marshall, Minn., and Miss Zella Ziemer of this city, in the presence of a large number of the immediate relatives and friends of the contracting parties.

After the wedding ceremony the bridal couples, accompanied by a few friends, partook of a splendid wedding breakfast at the Golden hotel, after which they left in an auto for a short wedding trip and a visit with friends in the eastern part of the state.

Walter Stein is one of O'Neill's prominent young business men and has a host of friends in this city and county. Mr. Marcotte is not very well known in this city, but is young business man of the Minnesota town and is very highly spoken of by those who know him.

The brides, who have been known for years as the Ziemer twins, are two of O'Neill's most charming young ladies, having grown to womanhood in this city and are known and admired by a large circle of friends and acquaintances. They are sweet and winsome young ladies and will make splendid helpmates for the young men whom they have honored with their hand.

The Frontier joins the many friends of these happy young people in wishing them many years of happiness and bliss.

CASH OR CREDIT

One of the tendencies of the age is the desire of people to live beyond their means—to make credit take the place of cash—to have debts rather than a balance in bank. Credit has ruined thousands. A Bank Account has never ruined any one. You can always get credit when you have a Bank Account. You cannot always get credit without one. Why not begin your account here? Debts or Dollars—you can accumulate either. Which in the years to come will give you the most satisfaction?

I have no credit anywhere. How should I? I have never stooped to the means of acquiring it.—Horace Walpole.
