Canada's Liberal Offer of Wheat Land to Settlers

is open to you—to every farmer or farmer's son who is anxious to establish for himself a happy home and prosperity. Canada's hearty invitation this year is more attractive than ever. Wheat is much higher but her fertile farm land just as cheap, and in the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta

150 Acre Homesteads Are Actually Free to Settlers and Other Land Sold at from $15 to $20 per Acre

The great demand for Canadian Wheat will keep up the price. Where a farmer can get near $2 for wheat and raise 20 to 45 bushels to the acre he is bound to make money—that's what you can expect in Western Canada. Wonderful yields also of Oats, Barley and Flax. Mixed Farming in Western Canada is fully as profitable an industry as grain raising.

The excellent grasses, full of nutrition, are the only food required either for beef or dairy purposes. Good schools, churches, markets, convenient climate excellent. Military service is not compulsory in Canada but there is an unusual demand for farm labor to replace the many young men who have volunteered for the war. PUT BUSINESS LESSON FIRST Youngster Had Excellent Defense When Hauled Before the Parental Tribunal for Fighting.

"My son—"
"Yes, pop—"
"Do you remember what your Sunday school teacher told you about fighting?"
"Yes, sir."
"Then why did you strike that Hem-mah-daw boy with your fist?"
"He struck me first."
"But what about your Sunday school lesson?"
"I thought about your lesson first."
"What lesson?"
"Your business lesson."
"I am afraid I do not know what you mean."
"You told me always to do everything in a strictly business way."
"Yes—"
"Well, when he delivered a wallop on my nose I just had to give him a receipt."—Youngstown Telegram.

THE PROFESSOR'S STATEMENT.
Prof. Aug. F. W. Schmitz, Thomas, Okla., writes: "I was troubled with Backache for about twenty-five years. When told I had Bright's Disease in its last stages, I tried Dodd's Kidney Pills. After using two boxes I was somewhat relieved and I stopped the treatment. In the spring of the next year I had another attack. I went for Dodd's Kidney Pills and they relieved me again. I used three boxes. That is now three years ago and my Backache has not returned in its severity, and by using another two boxes a little later on, the pain left altogether and I have had no trouble since. You may use my statement. I recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills when and wherever I can." Dodd's Kidney Pills, 50c. per box at your dealer or Dodd's Medicine Co., Buffalo, N. Y.—Adv.

Two Ways of "Cleaning Up."
Some years ago a young man from a small country town, on visiting Cincinnati, walked into one of the downtown barber shops to have his hair cut.

After the barber had clipped for some time on the young man's head, he asked him if he hadn't better have his hair cleaned up. The young man, after glancing at the hair on the floor and thinking the barber was trying to put one over on him, said he "guessed not."

After asking the same question several times to no avail the barber gave it up. The young man paid his bill and went from the shop, laughing to himself, thinking he wasn't so green after all.

Afterward it dawned on him that the barber wanted only to give him a shampoo.

charge for patients who, possessed of a particularly virulent demon—a deep-seated devil—have to come and stay in my hospital for a spell, and even then the bill covers little more than board and lodging."

"How do you do it?" I asked.

"Ah!" replied the old man. "My method is secret. But I can tell you this—I scent demons from afar. Some are sent to me; some come of their own accord. All are welcome! Happless sufferers, sick and wracked under the tormentings and the soul-twisting of their personal devils, must come and stay at the home for a certain period.

Feas Are Graduated.

"They pay according to the state of their worldly affairs. For instance, I charge a collier 10 shillings to 15 shillings a week, and a dustman even less. My smallest fee was 3 shillings and 6 pence, which I charged a poor woman for casting out her demon—at cost price, so to speak. My prescription—up to a certain point—is quite simple: Fresh air, fresh food, clear cold water, and—prayer. That, for a start, makes the demon begin to feel uncomfortable and anxious for a change of residence.

"While I feed up the patient, I fast myself, to prepare for the final tussle. Then the spirit descends suddenly upon me, and I go for the grim gray matter with both hands. I know that it's either him or me! Once or twice it's very nearly been him, but, thanks be, I come out on top in the end, and Mr. Devil has hopped out, screaming!"

As a guarantee of his good faith, the priest introduced me to his latest "cure," a little boy named Willie, whose demon of epilepsy had been cast out with great success only a few days previous. Willie was quiet happy and composed.

Then my entertaining host produced his "casebook" of outcastings, in which I read some very interesting entries. Here are two extracts:

"Pastor G—, of Leeds. Possessed when a youth of a most fearful demon. Came as paying guest to Beth-Rapha, where I wrestled with the spirit, and, after a terrific struggle, conquered. The demon, turbulent and terrible, eventually came hissing out of Pastor G—'s mouth like a fierce serpent. The room and everything shook; even the chairs and the ornaments danced about. So did I.

"Miss C—. Almost successful lady novelist, but possessed by an atrociously malicious demon, who inspired all her stories. The tales were moral and pretty, but the inspiration was bad, and whoever read them would take in some of the attributes of the wicked demon who inspired them. My wrestling with this evil spirit was so severe that the patient fell into a dead faint, lasting one and three quarters hours. She recovered, but she has never been able to write stories since, her literary powers having completely vanished."

When we finally said goodbye on the hospitable doorstep of Beth-Rapha, I thanked and congratulated the pastor, for I could not fail to recognize in him a man of the very best intentions—generous, considerate and kind to the poor. How far the demons may have been a figment of his imagination I cannot say.

But he meant well, and I envied his pluck. A man who can extract a full grown, furious demon out of a coal heaver for an inclusive fee of 7 and 6 is more than a credit to his country. The war office ought to give him a commission and turn him on the Kaiser and the crown prince with full powers to act!

Why the Chinese Woman's Feet Are Bound.

Jean Price in World Outlook.

And then we came to China, land of that greatest torture to womankind—foot binding. I've had so many people say to me, "That isn't done any more, is it?" Bishop Lewis says that if you will travel 100 miles in any part of the empire, you will get the idea that there are no unbound feet.

A famous scholar told the bishop his theory of foot binding. For centuries China's men have said: "Woman's place is the home and child bearing her business." Perhaps we have China to thank for originating that remark. So the men conceived this brilliant idea of breaking women's feet—a sort of padlock on the door of the home. It is a padlock indeed. No pleasure in moving—why not sit? And sit these women do, while the pigs wallow in and out of the door and the children die like flies of neglect and disease.

[Bishop Lewis returned from China last spring, and after spending most of the summer and fall in Sioux City, his former home, sailed for the Orient November 2 to resume his missionary work. He is a former president of Morningside college.]

DEMON-DOCTOR GIVES MOST UNIQUE TREATMENT

Herald Ashton, in Answers, London.

You would never think, to look at the place, that there was anything devilish about it.

It was a small, gabled, stone built house with a square bow window, discreetly curtained, fronting the main street in an unromantic little town in Derbyshire. There was a diminutive walled garden in front. On the wall an amiable looking black cat was sunning himself.

If he was the devil, I had encountered him at a very un-Satanic moment of his existence, for he blinked lazily at me with his yellow eyes as I entered, purred softly, and went to sleep again.

The place was called: BETH-RAPA. The Home for Divine Life. Rest, and Teaching, Where you can have quiet waiting upon God.

I knocked at the door. It was opened by a huge, stout old man, whose face, nesting in a comfortable fold of double chins, reminded me very much of Mr. Spurgeon. He gazed at me with mild blue eyes, stretched out a smooth, plump hand, and drew me inside.

"Enter, dear friend," he said, "and have no fear! Your case shall be dealt with immediately."

"Are you the gentleman who casts out devils?" I hazarded, hardly believing that this extremely mild mannered old person could be the individual I had traveled so far to see.

"I am he," was the reply.

And together we entered the surgery, or whatever you may choose to call it.

There was nothing frightening about it. It was a typical suburban "best room," brightly furnished, laden with knickknacks, photographs on the walls, and armchairs on the chairs, and an illuminated text over the mantelpiece. A slight aroma of sulphur in the air completed the ensemble.

"Pray be seated," said the plump old gentleman.

I obeyed, and he came and knelt down before me, his plump knee cracking slightly as he subsided. He again took me by the hand, and searched my face with his calm blue eyes.

"Have you brought your demon with you?" he asked, in a matter of fact manner, really might have been my umbrella he was inquiring about.

"Er—um—I don't think I have," I replied, feeling a trifle uncomfortable, but yet moved with an irresistible desire to laugh.

But the pastor, as he is called, was so serious and so solemn that I restrained my temptation to merriment. "I suppose you imagine, dear friend," he went on, "that you don't possess such a thing as a devil?"

"I wasn't particularly aware of it," I said.

"But you do, friend—you do! You have your devil, even as I, at certain times and in certain circumstances, have mine. Indeed, all of us have our—shall I say—pet demons? There is the demon of avarice, of hate, of lust, of despair, of desperation, of drink, of disquietude, of chicanery, or—of—Oh, dear friend, flocks and flocks of 'em—as multitudinous as the sands on the seashore, as devastating as locust swarms, as—"

He waved his fat, white hand despairingly. Then he changed his prayerful attitude to the other knee—which cracked ominously—and fixed me again with his pair of cerulean searchlights.

For some seconds we both crouched and glared at each other like a couple of mongrels before opening hostilities. Then the pastor sighed very profoundly, shook his leonine mane, and made a noise like a kettle ardently on the boil.

Presently he became suddenly excited, muttering and murmuring strange words, one of which was undoubtedly "Abracadabra," and another which sounded remarkably like "Sausages"—though I can't swear to it.

The Demon of Curiosity.

"I can classify your demon, sir," he said. "It's a plump, unmistakable devil, and the name of him is—"

He paused.

"Tell me the worst," I urged. "I can bear it! Your evidence of identification will be more satisfying than frightening."

"His name, sir," the pastor declared, "is Curiosity. But he's not quite ripe for extraction yet. If you can call again—Tuesdays and Fridays are my at home days—I'll do my best to get a grip on the gentleman and yank him out."

"My fee?" The demon dentist smiled a very pleasant smile. "Why, sir, nothing, except it be the lucre of your good will, your gratitude, and a trifle, if you can spare it, for the poor. I charge nothing for cases like yours. I only

MEAN TRICK HARD TO BEAT
According to Fat Plumber, He Witnessed Action That Would Seem to Be the Limit.

"I have spotted another 'meanest man.'"

It was the fat plumber who spoke. "Who is it this time?" the thin carpenter asked.

"Umson."

"What's Umson been doing?"

"He took me to dinner with him in a swell hotel the other evening."

"Do you call that mean?"

"No, but listen."

"I am listening."

"When we had finished he took a small piece of tinfol that had covered a little square of cheese—"

"Uh huh—"

"Placed it on a silver dollar to get a perfect impression—"

"Yes—"

"And then left the impression on his plate so the waiter would think he was getting a fine tip."—Youngstown Telegram.

Pretty Often, Too.

During a Bible lesson a teacher was trying to explain the parable of the tares.

"Can anyone tell me any person who is like the evil one who sowed the tares?"

A hand instantly shot up from the foot of the class.

"Well, David, what person do you say?"

"Please, ma'am, my mother."

"Why?" asked the teacher in astonishment.

"Because," answered he, eyeing his patched trousers, "she sews tears."

Gillis—One person runs the machine and the other is just an observer, but both of them fight.

Willis—I see, just like being married.

Bodily Housekeeping
(By V. M. PIERCE, M. D.)

The subject of drinking water with meals has been misunderstood.

In recent years investigation by means of X-rays, the observations of scientists such as Cannon, Grutzner, Pavlov, Fowler, Hawk, prove that an abundance of water taken during digestion is necessary in good bodily housekeeping.

If your kidneys are sick, or you suffer with lumbago or rheumatism at times, pain in the back or back of the neck, take a little Anuric before meals. This can be found at any good drug store. Therefore my advice to young or old is, always drink plenty of pure water. And for long life, occasionally take tablets of Anuric three or four times a day.

Anuric acts much more quickly than lithia. Many find that it dissolves uric acid as water does sugar.

"Say, young feller," said Bronco Bob, "have you got a gun on you?"
"No, sir," replied the man with the brand-new cowboy uniform. "I was told that it was better to be unarmed, so as to avoid any impression that I was seeking a quarrel."
"Well, that's a big disappointment. I needed a brand new gun 'n' thought you'd be bringin' along at least a pair of 'em. Don't you let anything like this occur again."—Washington Star.

Getting Old Too Fast?
Late in life the body shows signs of wear and often the kidneys weaken first. The back is lame, bent and achy, and the kidney action distressing. This makes people feel older than they are. Don't wait for dropsy, gravel, hardening of the arteries or Bright's disease. Use a mild kidney stimulant. Try Doan's Kidney Pills. Thousands of elderly folks recommend them.

A South Dakota Case
Mrs. Henry Hofort, Salem, S. Dak., says: "For a year I was tormented by backache. The trouble made me so weak that I could hardly turn in bed and awful pains shot into my head. The kidney secretions were unnatural and I knew my kidneys were disordered. Three boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills fixed me up in good shape after everything else failed. I am now able to work all right and seldom have any sign of kidney trouble."
