

Easter Sale of Ready-to-Wear Garments

Twenty years at the game and I have never failed to excell which is very evident in this season's showing. It pleases me indeed to see the number of satisfied customers that supplied their wishes with Coats, Suits and Dresses last week. And as new numbers are arriving daily, there will be a strong selection for Easter week.

Styles for Spring and Summer are so different from the garments of previous seasons that the old coat or suit is quite passe.

There is a certain snap--a variety of vivid brilliant colorings--in the new garments that gives them a certain chic which we usually associate with Parisian Garments.

But the Palmer garment provides a better fit, represents the acme of good value and always renders satisfactory service.

My suit and coat parlor is now full of chic garments of the latest cloths and colorings--gaberdine poplins, velours, French serges in all the popular shades: Gold, mustard, gray, magenta, and navy with a varied line of checks.

She is now much improved, with chances very favorable for her ultimate recovery.

The Norfolk Press wants to know why it is that the big creameries are paying more for butter fat at O'Neill than they are at Norfolk, when the distance and freight rates are less from Norfolk to Omaha and Sioux City than from O'Neill. The Press notes a difference of at least two cents. In reality it is from three to four cents and it is a fact that Norfolk producers could ship to O'Neill, pay the transportation rate themselves and still get more money for their product than by selling locally or shipping direct to Omaha or Sioux City, even though the same cream might be hauled back through their town. The reason is that O'Neill is located on the old site of the Garden of Eden and has a thriving creamery and as a result there is competition for the cream. Cream buyers pay more for cream in O'Neill than they do in
