Cincinnati man tells how to dry up a co n or callus so it lifts c with fingers.

OFF WITHOUT PAIN!

YES! LIFT A CORN

You corn-pestered men and women need suffer no longer. Wear the shoes that nearly killer you before, says this Cincinnati autho, ity, because a few drops of freezone applied directly on a tender, aching corn or callus, stops soreness at once and soon the corn or hardened callus loosens so it can be

A small bottle of free · cests very little at any drug store, but will positively take off every hard or soft corn or callus. This should be triad, as it is inexpensive and is said not to irritate the surreunding skin.

If your druggist hasn't any freezone tell him to get a small bottle for you from his wholesale drug house .-- adv.

A Seed Waster.

"There's a man planting potatoes," said Farmer Corntossel, "when the ought to be playin' golf."

"You don't approve of gardening?" "Yes, I do. But if he'd go ahead an' play golf he wouldn't be spoilin' good potatoes that somebody could use.

GREEN'S AUGUST FLOWER

has been the most successful family remedy for the last fifty-one years for billiousness and stomach troubles, to which the American people are addicted, causing sick beadache, nervous indigestion, sour stomach, coming up of food and a general physical depression. 25 and 75c.-Adv.

An Unlooked-for Present.

Among little Willie's numerous birthday presents were a toy tomahawk, an airgun, and a lasso-these being sent by a sport-loving uncle who knew the youth's proclivities.

Shortly after breakfast Willie's mother heard a crash in the greenhouse at the foot of the garden, and went to investigate. On the way she passed a few uprooted bushes and a flower-bed trampled out of recognition, and in the greenhouse itself many lassoed flower-pots. Following the trail. she found Willie hiding behind a tree stump.

"What are you, doing, Willie?" she cried in horrified tones.

"Looking for Redskins," replied the youngster.

With a grim look she took Willie by the ear and led him indoors.

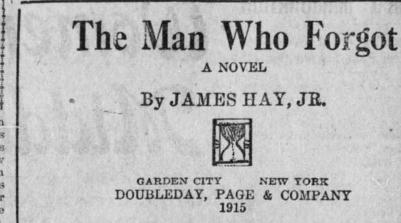

ed ominously, as she took up a cane "Well, I'll give you one."

Back to the Soil.

The young k-nut, unfit for general , volunteered for work on the land. He went down to his father's and began "farming." friend passing that way spied him in leggins and Norfolk jacket striding across a wide stretch of moorland. He hailed him.

"Hallo, Smutty !" he cried as he "What are you doing in came up. this forsaken land?" "Farming. I've gone back to the land.' "Any good at It?" grinned the friend.

CHAPTER XXV.

cane of sensation, blame, acclamation, criticism and question that would sweep the country that evetried to start his story, but could one after the other. The news had swept through the newspaper and political part of the city as if by magic. Correspondents were altins announcing that they were about to put on the wire the "big Men talked eagerly about story." it in the hotel lobbjes, at the capitol, in the office buildings, on the street corners. Waller, sitting in his office, had a mental picture of of what the thing meant, so accurthe excitement, the perturbation ate their prevision of the danger among the prohibitionists, the ex- threatening him, that for a few doubts of some of the Smith.supporters, the quick rallying to his side of his most carnest followers.

person was asking another: "What will people think of it? What will people say?"

He thought, a little grimly, that few people have any opinions of ly reflect the thoughts of others, that nearly all are too much like all wrong.

fragmentary articles slapped on the wire by men who had not time enough to reread their copy in had my head against that same search of mistakes. Finally, he stone wall for exactly five years. Smith bowed, making no com- to the untimely grave, but I could

There was nothing unusual in When Waller reached his office his demeanor. His smile was the the storm had broken in the news. same. He did not even look tired. paper world, presaging the hurri. As always before, he impressed them as a man vibrant with energy. He held in his left hand a paper which, some of them obning and the following day. He served, was a map of the city of Washington. Evidently he had not. Telephone cells came to him just left his desk to meet them. Every man facing him sensed to a nicety how near John Smith stood to tragedy and ruin. They were trained to "get" and estiready sending their papers bulle- mate the force of events, the probable consequences of national affairs, the results of clashing personalities. And all of them, watching him intently, thought that he must be a brave man. So keen was their appreciation ultation of the whisky people, the seconds nobody put the question , they all wanted to ask.

He bowed slightly again and asked pleasanily:

"What is it you want to ask, And he knew that nearly every gentlemen?"

"They've got all the essential facts, Mr. Smith," Waller spoke up. "They've seen my story, and that covered everything that haptheir own, that most of them mere- pened at Senator Mallon's house. "Perhaps," Smith suggested, 'it might be easier for all of us, sheep. The great thing was to give might cover everything more the sensation the right twist, the promptly, if I told you in my own proper slant, to make them say, words all there is to tell. In fact, "He's all right," instead of, "He's tor Mallon's house is all I could

I The telephone calls multiplied say now. It is all-that is, it is all "Looking for red skins!" she repeat- and piled up. To all of them he I know. Naturally, a man with a answered that at 4 o'clock he memory five years old cannot would have his story ready. When speak, either accurately or by the representatives of the after- guess, of things said to have hapnoon papers said they could not pened six years ago. That seems wait, he answered that he was quite logical, doesn't it? I realize sorry but that they would have to the things you would ask, the satisfy themselves with what ev- things you would like to know. Beerybody was saying about the in- lieve me, gentlemen, your desire to erybody was saying about the in-cident. In his own mind, he knew know them cannot be one-half so mow, Mr. Smith—that she must were swine. That went on for 10 have some facts to go on. And the years. For 10 years I was the Man that the verdict would come from great as mine. Here you are, bethe morning papers, from the fin- fore me, thrusting your heads ished and complete stories, not against the stone wall of my igfrom the sketchy and necessarily norance of my own past. Well" a regular third degree, and she me it would get me some day. I and he married me a week after he touched him on the arm. He -opium. He had been hitting it stopped. His thoughts had been met me. before he married me.

You know, without my telling you, body he had never seen before. that meant. Things went to body he had never seen before. He got me into the habit. We There was in his mind for an inpieces. He got me into the habit, we used to go to a place on the Foochow road. I guess it's still there. It was known as the House with the Red-lacquered Balcony, and it was run by a Portuguese we called Charlie. As I said, things got worse. My hus-band's money gave out. He didn't have much, after all. Then I waked up one morning in Charlie's place to find that I had been deserted. I never saw the man again until today when I went to see Miss Edith Mallon. I went to see her because I view down and out. I've been down and cut a good many times. When Gardner left me in Shany Portuguese we called Charlie. s. When Gardner left me in Shangai, I had to work as a servant. I got e are the facts. Avery stopped reading and ooked at Smith.

'That's her story, sir," the corespondent said.

The agitator addressed himself to Avery:

It recalls nothing, absolutely nothing, to my mind," he said.

Those who heard him recognized the regret, the sadness, in his voice. There could be no doubt of the fact that he was sorry he could get nothing from the story. It was evident that his great desire was to get light on the matter from somewhere.

as Mary Leslie if she is really Mrs. John Gardner?"

"Oh, of course, she explains it," Avery said carelessly. "It's the obvious explanation: She pre-"That is, I used to be the name.

Smith put one brief question : "And the proof of this marriage?"

dence," Avery replied, "but she was impervious to all ills and claims it was in Shanghai. Several pains. I could work and attend to news associations have cabled to business all the time-could do it Shanghai to get all that end of the just a little better with a few story.

Waller explained to Smith :

we ought to get something from bright ideas, and it made me so-Shanghai in six or seven hours. eiable and popular." It's 6 o'clock here now. It's 9 He stopped a moment, full in the o'clock in the morning there. We moonlight. ought to hear something tonight."

the men there find anything. 'Look here, Avery," Waller asked; "how did she strike you? falling into step again.

Don't you know she was lying?" Avery hesitated.

the newspaper man asked him.

cheered him. "You do the work-and you'll get by." "At any rate," he concluded, quered balcony on the Foochow road.'

"How do you mean?"

know just how you feel."

such as to make him welcome any-unkempt as to his linen and cravat. In spite of the onslaughts back to the states by coming over as a ady's maid. I came to Washington to ry for a position as an army nurse. of a bygone decency, the ghost of a real intellect. He was pudgy and short of stature.

'May I walk a little way with you?" he requested, his voice a little thick. "I can tell you some interesting things." "By all means," the agitator agreed.

They fell into step together. It was a crisp, clear evening. Overhead the moon, dimming the street light, hung in a silver sash of fleecy clouds.

"I know who you are," the stranger began, "the prohibition leader. You can take a look at me "Does she explain," Waller asked Avery, "why she is known hat noble army of sports who drink on a system and have whisky under perfect control."

He spoke in a vein of broad sar-

"That is, I used to be the Man ferred to resume her maiden Who Could Handle It. I now deeorate the ranks of those who have gone down and out. As the Man Who Could Handle It, I was a star performer. My will power was "She has no documentary evi- beautiful to behold. My physique drinks under my belt. The alcohol was what my system needed. The "Under favorable conditions, drinks gave me a whole lot of

"You've heard that talk before That is," Avery modified, "if haven't you?" he inquired solemnly.

"Many times," Smith assented,

"I felt a real scorn for the fellows who got drunk. I studied "You know," he said, "it's some of them quite closely. They hard to tell when a woman like were curiosities to me. The stuff that is lying-or how much. And was meant to be enjoyed, not it struck me-I'm talking frankly abused. I thought the drunkards way she sticks to her story is im- Who Could Handle It. Other men mense. Five of us put her through admired me for it. One or two told

 FACTS ABOUT RUSSIA.  the sleeping giant has been awaked. The scales have fallen from his Bonds that have held a metion abject for centuries have been broken. Czar-ridden Russia is freed and henceforth the people upstanding will ge about their duties as men free-born and not as

The glory of Russia is in her future, he great tasks are yet to be performed, towever, the most difficult one, that of taking a beginning, has been success-tily ack-eved. This great empire and is people who have played too inconspicu-is and too silent a part in the affairs of the world will now be seen and heard. The Russian empire stretches over a wast territory

Its people who have played too inconspicu-ous and too scient a part in the affairs of the world will now be seen and heard. The Russian empire stretches over a wast territory in eastern Europe and morthern Asia, with an area exceeding $50,000 souars miles, one-sixth of the land striace of a searth and nearly three times the art of the United States. The tetal length of the frontier line by land is $500 miles in Europe and 10,000 miles in Asia, and by sea 11,000 miles in Europe and between 10,000 and 20,000 in Asia. Within these vast boundaries there is a population of over 10,000,000, about 75 per zent of which, according to the Encyclo-pedia Britann.ca, are peasants. The rich off of Russia is very capable of produc-ng the grain supply for the entire world. Eghty-five per cent of the population are magaged in agriculture, yet the methods imployed have been so primitive that only a bare living has been realized. The off is also rich in ores of all kinds, but the to the tardy introduction of machin-try and science these have merely begun to be developed. In European Russia ireat forests cover 39 per cent of the area, and in Asiatic Russia two-thirds of the trea is covered by forests. These vast esources, in magnitude and variety qualed by no other nation, are scarcely gueded, nor are they fully conceived of by the mass of the Russian people. The percentage of Hilteracy in Russia is rery ince, ianging above S5 per cent at and in Asiatic Russian people. The percentage of Hilteracy in Russia is rery ince, ianging above S5 per cent and one provinces. In Petrograd, the capi-al inself, half the population cannot read ar write. The urban population is gen-rally better educated. Including the whole empire considerably more than half he people are ill therate, though educa-ional movements haze made remarkable eadway in Russka during the past few atters.

ars. There are no trustworthy figures as to the number of adherents of the different ceds. However, according to the census-tarus published in 1965 the eight leading reds are given as follows: trubodox Greek and 'Pritted

hurch 21417
hammedans	2.34
man Catholic 11.46
vs 5.21	5,80
theran sidents 2,20
menian Gregorians 1,17 2,86
there are numerous other creeds

There adherents. As this data indicates there are many nationalities in Russia. This diversity of nationalities is due to the amalgamation or absorption by the Slav of a variety of Ural-Altaic stock. In European Russia the Slavs are in a ratio to the other races combined of about three to one. However, in the other parts of the empire the Slavs are often outnumbered. This heterogen-eity of the Russian people, coupled with the great amount of illiteracy has been one of the plausthe excuses for justily-ing the heavy-handed rule of the Russian crars.

one of the plausible excuses for justify-ing the heavy-handed rule of the Russian czars. The Russian people have been clow, none the less surely, discovering them-selves. The increased liberalism of Nich-olas II toward the people, the modern improvement in education, the Russo-Japanese war, and Russia's experience in the present war-all these have been rere-lations for the Russians; they have felt their strength, which is the first condi-tion of real/zing it. The Almanach de Gotha for 1910 de-scribes the Russian government as "a constitutional monarchy under an auto-cratic czar." But the Encyclopedia Brit-annica, article Russia, says that "this obvious contradiction in terms well illus-trates the difficulty of defining in a single formula the system essentially transition-al and meanwhile sui generis, established in Russia since 1906. Before this date, the fundamental laws of Russia described the power of the emperor as "autocratic and unlimited." In the fundamental laws, as remodelled between the imperial man-ifesto of October 30 and the opening of the first duma on the 27th of April. 1906, the name and principle of autocracy was jealously preserved, though the word "un-limited" vanished. And now the people have arisen to-break the principle of autocracy itself, limited" vanished. And now the people have arisen to-break the principle of autocracy itself, which from age could not easily bendi Again a government based upon the con-sent of the governed is to rise from the people themselves and for themselves.

Not That Kind of War. From the Milwaukee Journa

a should think so! See this piece of moorland? Before I came it was going to waste-no use at all; but with a lot of work I've turned it into a rippin' golf links."-New York Globe.

Be Adaptable. "Don't be obstinute."

"Huh?"

"Some men spend their lives trying to make silk purses from sows' ears.' "Well?"

"They might take the same material and get rich manufacturing leather specialties."

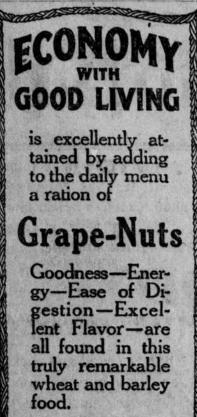

Nature of the Place.

"The British forces are fighting now an Champagne. "Then I don't wonder they are put ting so much spirit in it."

'You can't distinguish saints from sinners by their shiny hats.

locked his door, took the receiver off the hook, and sat down at his evening may give you some idea of typewriter to get out the story tide in favor of the agitator. At the end of an hour and a half, a few minutes before 4 o'clock, he arose from the machine, stretched his tired arms and shoulders, and began to put together the pages of a story which would cover two columns and a half. He had made six carbon copies of it. It was a good story.

He "felt" that. It had in it some of Smith's fire and eloquence-and a great deal of Smith's anguish. Afterward, when other members of his profession had time to comment, they said it was a great ness; "that is not true."

piece of dramatic writing. He called an office boy, gave him one of the copies, and instructed him to take it to a public copies run off at once. He kept the glare, they resented his being few minutes. other copies he had made and wounded unnecessarily. called up the Press club and the offices of several correspondents. "Now." he thought. "let them come! I'm ready for them!'

They did come. In 15 minutes the room was crowded with little told it to me.' groups of men, their heads bent over the various copies, heads which, as the reading progressed, were shaping up the opening paragraphs and the structur: of the

which, in a few hours, would do plained.

newsdispatches. were still coming in. He had instructed the office boy to deliver copies to every newspaper and corhe led the crowd to the cars on their way to Smith's offices.

The agitator, stepping from the inner office, confronted the semicircle of eager faces and bowed his customary Good afternoon, gentlemen."

Your concern about the facts this ment. what-how shall I say it-of what men?" he inquired.

night. You see, that is all. I told wanted to know, but, realizing his handle it." my story this morning. helplessness, they filed out of the

The sallow faced young man room. Each one of them was in a powers, put the first querry :

you his house?'

"Yes," Smith said quietly; 'that is true.'

married to Miss Mallon?" the interrogator went further.

"No," the answer came with the same quietness, the same direct-

There was a stir among the men facing him, as if, in spite of their to describe the agitator's suffering handling is rough."

stenographer's office and have 100 private life out of the publicity sympathy and support. Waller lingered with him for a way possible.

Avery, tall, snappy, on the alert, how you feel about this thing,' gave the conversation a new turn. "Perhaps, Mr. Smith," he sugested, "you might like to hear the Les — the woman's story as she

"Yes," he agreed quickly, "I should like to, very much." Avery produced a copy of his story

"I'll read you merely what she stories they would get out, stories said, her own words," he ex-more than any other one thing to While Avery read, every man in determine whether John Smith the room watched the agitator. was to survive or go down in oblo- Apparently unconscious of their yet to consider what it may mean to Smith's office building, where quy and blame. Cholliewollie had scrutiny, he was listening, not so been right when he had said to much with eagerness as with a con-Smith that he would do much to centrated, calculating interest, as the country will say tomorrow.'

give the agitator the best of the if he strove to remember, tried to drive his brain to do a work of

At a quarter to 6 the writers which it was incapable. It was plain that he was groping in the dark, beating aimlessly about in the sea of ideas brought forward the world to walk this minutes inrespondent's office in town. Now by what Mary Leslie had said.

Avery read her words:

I am his wife. My maiden name was Mary Leslie. I was born and brought up in Des Moines, Ia. His name is Jack Gardner. I don't know where he south, in Virginia, I think. We met in Shanghai. I had gone out there as a trained nurse. He had some money, not see how I would ever take "Is there anything else, gentle- either route. I watched the army of wrecks and knew I had somewhich, he hoped, would turn the I have suffered each day and each There was much else they thing on them. You see, I could

His self-contempt grew.

"Then one night I got drunk. A who, by this time, had built up a hurry. All of them knew that they year after that I waked up one reputation for his questioning were about to write the strangest, morning and had to have a drink most fascinating story that had before I could eat breakfast. Right "It is true that Mallon forbade ever come to light in Washington, there occurred the full extinction They were intent on the story as a of the Man Who Could Handle It: story, and did not think much then and there was born the Man of the probable effect of what they Whom It Handled. That's a grand "And are you engaged to be would write. It was their business metamorphosis, my friend. You to tell the news to the country, and see I call you 'my friend.' Dissithey wanted to tell it in the best pation makes us familiar. A grand metamorphosis, I say, from Thanks to Waller and to the Man Who Could Handle It to Smith's own personality, the "best the Man Whom It Handled. And way possible," in their eyes, was you can take it from me that its realization that a public man un-der fire cannot hope to keep his a way that would create for him He was keenly interested in what the man had to say.

"I'm a type," the other continned. "You can find me in any of "I wish you'd tell me exactly the cheap, dirty saloons or in any of the swell clubs. I belonged to a swell club once. However, we'll let that pass. Yes, you can find "I don't like to rush off and me in any of those places. There's leave you here with all this work a big army of me-an inspiring, and the great burden of what the lovely line of men with their effiday has brought forth. I'd like to ciency gone, their livers hardened, their kidneys ruined, their brains "I don't think I feel at all yet," foggy, their waistline too big, Smith answered him, putting a their reputations too little. They hand on his shoulder. "I've been are the boys who could handle it. making a great effort to dissociate They're the fellows who despised myself, personally, from it, to keep the drunkards and the spreers."

at the work. I can't trust myself They had reached the entrance to my personal happiness. And they paused.

I'm afraid-a little afraid of what (Continued Next Week.)

A Cheaper and Better Way.

"Let us attend to that," Waller A cheaper and Better Way. Girard, in the Philadelphia Public Ledger. Assuming that figures of the ailles are correct, 5,000,000 men have died during the war. It has cost $14,400 tc kill each man. Properly invested, the money already spent on war would have yielded suffi-cient income to keep 6,000,000 boys and girls of the world in school and colleges for all time. It would much more than support all the churches of the world until kingdom come. 'I would give almost anything in to the house with the red-lac-road." He dined alone that evening in a quiet little restaurant, where he he was he was a such a cost wouldn't is be much cheaper for the rest of the forsic to banish those half glozen monarchs?

the curious. As he left the place, a man stepped up to him and in the United States it is to the right.

The ingenuous proposal to establish a special joint committee of congress on the conduct of the war is a gem which bears witness to the pork barrel intellect. "This country is going to spend a lot of money. It will be strange if there isn't something in it for the politicians." So must the reasoning

This country is going to spend a lot of money. It will be strange if there isn't something in it for the politicians." So runs the reasoning. The citizen's duty is to let his congressman know that he doesn't want that kind of war that kind of war. We don't want the kind of war that we breeding places of typhoid, because some state governor or other politician was allowed to say what site he would like to have chosen, and have the boys the to have chosen, and have the boys the same state governor or other politician was allowed to say what site he would like to have chosen, and have the boys the same state governor or other politician was allowed to say what site he would like to have chosen, and have the boys the same state governor or other politician was allowed to say what site he would like to have chosen, and have the boys the same some on it using a political pull to have some on it want the wind of war that would share on in the game of polities. We want a war for America, and have the boys are sent into battle to be sacrificed by untrained officers, to fail while some makes a grandstand play to help later on in the game of polities. We want a war for America, and now the congress succeeds in overtuning the congress succeeds in overtuning the congress succeeds in overtuning the the the the man who of them, as Wisconsin knows, if there defy their constituents or are poor guessers. But remember that the man who wants something, whether it's a political war or a service to Germany, is plical war or a service to Germany. Support the sould be no time in letting his congressmen know it. Write your on that you have the breadent.

Feeding the World.

It's up to you, oh, Mr. Farmer, although you pack no sword or armor, to win this crucial fight, for you must feed the allied nations, provide the millions with their rations, so hustle, day and night. Now, keep the husky hired men jumping, and that all your mules are humpin, do things with ordered haste; let every foot of soil be growing some harvest for your future mowing, let no land go to waste. For every time you raise a pumpkin you swat some kultured Prussian bumpkin who lacks enough to eat; you push a harwho lacks enough to eat, you push a har-poon in the kaiser, and make his noblets sadder, wiser, whene'er you raise a beet. Our Uncle Samuel indorses the man who leaves a swath of corses behind him as he scraps; but he who raises wheat and barley will soak those kaisers. Bill and Charley and charge a let of many Net Charley, and change a lot of maps. Not all of us can seek the battle, for some of us must feed the cattle, and slop the shrieking swine; and it is good to know our labors will help the men who wield the sabers, and form the battle line. So het us not be heavy hearted if younger fel-lows have departed for great and thrilling scenes; for we can aid our country's legions who face the foe in distant rerions, by raising spuds and beans.

> That Settled It. From Judge.

From Judge. "Just let me tell you this." he said when his wife had chided him for being out, after 12 o'clock at night. "I'm no longer a child. I'm old enough to take care of myself, and I'm not going to be tied to anybody's apron strings." "Don't worry about that," she replied. "If you can afford to pay what it costs to stay out this late I'll quit wearing an apron."