A PHYSICAL WRECK

Laid Up In Bed, Barely Holding Onto Life. Doan's Effected Marvelous Recovery.

"Without warning I was dragged to the brink of the grave by malignant kidney trouble," says Robert Wengatz, 114 Cypress Ave., Bronx, N. Y. "My kidneys seemed to stop acting and the pains in my back were terrible. Big, bloaty puffs came under my eyes and attacks of dizziness often blinded me. My limbs swelled twice normal size and I could press big dents into the flesh."

"I was confined to bed and had convulsions several times a day. Despite the best of treatment, I grew worse and was taken to the hospital. I didn't improve, however, and was brought home again, barely holding onto life."

"Toward the last of 1913, a friend persuaded me to try Doan's Kidney Pills and I cannot put into words what they did for me. The first box helped more than all the other medicines and treatments I had taken. I continued and from an emaciated wreck of a man I have taken on good, solid flesh until I now weigh 225 pounds and am in the best of health. Doan's alone deserve the credit."

LIFT YOUR CORNS OFF WITH FINGERS

How to loosen a tender corn or callus so it lifts out without pain.

Let folks step on your feet hereafter; wear shoes a size smaller if you like, for corns will never again send electric sparks of pain through you, according to this Cincinnati authority.

He says that a few drops of a drug called freezeone, applied directly upon a tender, aching corn, instantly relieves soreness, and soon the entire corn, root and all, lifts right out.

This drug dries at once and simply shrivels up the corn or callus without even irritating the surrounding skin.

A small bottle of freezeone obtained at any drug store will cost very little but will positively remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet.

If your druggist hasn't stocked this new drug yet, tell him to get a small bottle of freezeone for you from his wholesale drug house.—adv.

A Maniac in the Trench.

An officer writes about an incident which is probably one of the most gruesome that has been recorded of life in trenches:

One night as a working party under Lieutenant Rathbone was proceeding down a communication trench, they were fired upon from close quarters. On inquiry Lieutenant Rathbone ascertained that the shots came from a soldier who had run amuck, and had posted himself with loaded rifle and fixed bayonet further down the trench. Lieutenant Rathbone borrowed a rifle, and, accompanied by Corporal Feldwick, advanced along the trench until in view of the mentally deranged man. They then advanced with rifles at the ready, the officer calling upon the man to surrender. Receiving no reply, they then dropped their rifles and rushed him, and after disarming him took him to the nearest dressing station. Corporal Feldwick, who is a prisoner of war, has also been awarded the Albert medal of the second class.

Suffering and Germany's Dark Outlook.

From the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

While it is true, no doubt, that the unrest in Germany today is due in a large measure to the privations and sufferings that the people of the empire have undergone since July, 1914, it is in reality the contemplation of the near future which is filling the country with mutterings from Emden to Memel. It is a bleak prospect that Germany is facing, and the meanest peasant knows it despite the best efforts of the government's paid optimists. Here are a few of the things that are tending to make the peace without victory idea extremely palatable in the central powers these dog days:

The Russian army is on the offensive with a great force hanging on the brows of the Carpathians, ready to break into Hungary, the flour barrel of the Teutonic bund.

A reorganized Rumanian army, 400,000 strong is on the eve of plunging forward to retake its occupied wheat fields and oil lands.

In the rear is an allied force of 500,000 or more with a Greek army of 200,000 being put into shape for a smash at the Berlin-Constantinople life artery.

The United States, with unlimited money, men and food supplies will soon make its great weight felt.

Neutral countries who have been feeding Germany with the crumbs from their ample tables will soon have no crumbs to give away.

The British-Franco armies on the western front are hammering successfully on the western front.

The submarine war, of which so much was expected, has been a bitter disappointment to the people. It is steadily decreasing in effectiveness.

Copper, steel, rubber and other essentials of war are growing scarcer and the United States is taking action to see that no new supplies reach Germany.

China and other quasi-neutrals are getting ready to lend effective assistance to the allies.

The burden of financing Turkey and Bulgaria is becoming oppressive.

There is a growing bitterness in the dual monarchy against German control that may at any time break out in open revolt.

These are some of the things that the future holds forth for the German people. The situation is calculated to upset even the stolid, government owned mind of a Prussian professor.

Bank Loans on Potatoes.

From the Brooklyn Eagle.

At the request of the food administration department, the federal reserve board has classified potatoes as "nonperishable" and permitted the rediscounting of paper with warehouse receipts as collateral by national reserve banks. The member banks will have to determine on the margin of security, and on the sort of warehousing done. The view of the food administrators, accepted by the bankers, is this:

Potatoes, properly graded and packed and stored in weather proof and responsible warehouses would undoubtedly constitute a readily marketable nonperishable staple, within the meaning of the regulation.

Now it is clear enough to any man who comes from a potato raising country that the potato is not "nonperishable" in the sense in which the term is applied to wheat or to cotton, but within time limits, determined by atmospheric conditions, a bushel of potatoes is of fixed value in the maintenance of human life.

The effect of the new regulation should be to stimulate the raising of potatoes. Some economists may doubt whether easy storing with a cash advance on what is stored will tend to bring down prices to the consumer. But the facility of holding visible supply may be balanced by the ease with which government can lay its hands on hoarders, if, or when, congress enacts the food law. The experiment is interesting. It goes a bit further than the old Farmers' alliance, or the people's party ever sought to have the government go. Actually, though not technically, it is the government that does what is ordered by the federal reserve board, because the whole banking system is upheld by the United States credit, and is trusted fully as the depository of government funds.

SOME LESSONS FROM THE WAR.

The American Journal of Public Health publishes an article on sanitation and hygiene in the war zone written by Mr. Saville from English and French publications. The following methods and other facts are taken from this article:

For dry antiseptics the French use chloride of lime (as a deodorant), ferric sulphate (to prevent fermentation), and quicklime (to destroy organic matter). Formalin solutions are used as body disinfectants. For field use the only disinfectants used are as follows:

Chloride of lime. Put 3 ounces in a quart of water, then dilute to 10 quarts.

Corrosive sublimate. One quart to 1000 grains of sea salt to the quart of solution adds to the efficiency.

Heavy coal oils in emulsion with water 50 to 100 to the 1,000 are deodorants especially valuable in urinals.

Bedding and linen are sterilized by steam.

To sterilize feces and urine use 5 per cent copper sulphate, 2 to 3 per cent resol, or 4 per cent chloride of lime.

Lice are removed from the hair by rubbing in equal parts of kerosene and olive oil. This is left on 24 hours and then washed off. Benzine, kerosene, and 10 per cent acetic acid used singly are also effective.

Lice in the clothing are removed by a powder composed of 2 per cent iodorm, 2 per cent creosote, and 96 per cent naphthalene. The seams are smeared by mineral oil, nine parts; soft soap, five parts; water, one part.

The care of the feet is of first importance. Each regiment has at least one expert chiropodist. For corns and painting with a solution of 50 grains of salicylic acid, eight grains of cannabis indica extract, and one ounce of flexible colodion is done. After a few days of this the corn is ready to be removed.

All blisters on the feet are pricked at the end of the day and painted with tincture or iodine.

Boots large enough to permit the wearing of two pair of socks are worn. The pair of socks next the skin are woolen.

Feet are oiled twice a day inside and out with castor oil or olive oil.

Socks must be clean each morning. If fresh socks cannot be had each day the used pair must be turned inside out and aired.

The British allow one quart of water for each 7 1/2 miles marched when the infantry is on the road. Men on the march are allowed one gallon of water a day for drinking purposes; in camp at least three pints. The water allowances for all purposes when men are in barracks is 20 gallons.

The simplest method of sterilizing water is by cooking it into a weak tea. Sterilization of water by chemicals has been very satisfactory.

Monopoly on Mission Boxes.

From Answers, London.

It is curious how certain trades and occupations remain peculiar to certain families.

There is one curious occupation, which employs a large number of men today, which is in the hands of the same family that has been associated with it for many generations. It is the making of missionary boxes.

It might be supposed that any carpenter could knock together a suitable receptacle for contributions to missionary and other charitable funds, but the fact remains that every missionary society, every church organization, that requires a collecting box goes, as a matter of course, to this old established firm whose specialty it is to make such boxes.

It is a thriving business, and one which has profited rather than suffered through the war, for the institution of flag days and other means of collecting funds has led to an enormous increase in the demand for boxes.

The Turning Hour of Life. Phillips Brooks.

There are no times in which opportunity, which is in the hands of the same family, is so abundant as when it has to suffer. Then everything depends upon whether the man looks to the lower or the higher help.

If he looks to God, the hour of suffering is the turning hour of life.

A Call for the Pinch Hitter. From the Birmingham Age-Herald.

Jibway is such a confirmed fan that he applies baseball slang to every conceivable situation. For instance, the other day he attended what was expected to be a wedding ceremony. The bridegroom failed to show up. There was much excitement and confusion. The bride was so angry she vowed she would marry any man who would take the missing bridegroom's place. That was when Jibway sang out: "Is there a pinch hitter present?"

For Safety's Sake. Two brothers who live in an East Lancashire manufacturing town were noted for being exceptionally well-served with nasal organs.

One of the ring spinners at the mill where they worked invited them to a wedding, and promised to send a cab for them, says London Tit-Bits.

The cab duly arrived, and the two brothers entered and planted themselves down, one at each window.

In order to create an impression during the drive to the wedding, the two brothers were looking out of the cab, one on either side, so that the people could see them.

All went well until the cab came to a rather narrow railway arch, which our travelers had to pass through. The cabman looked back to take his bearings, and seeing the two brothers' noses sticking out of the windows on either side, shouted:

"Put them elbows in, please!"

WANY GIRLS ARE SENSIBLE

Those Who Think and Act With Discretion Are Playing Important Part in World's Work.

Cynics have had so much to say in their caustic way about frivolous girls that a visitor from Mars, unaccustomed to our mode of life, might suspect there are no sensible girls on this planet. But those who go in and out of the homes of the people a great deal know there are girls who think, who reason and who act with wise discrimination, says a writer in the Salt Lake Herald-Republican.

Suppose there are those of languid or coquettish temperaments who spend idle hours in conjuring up romantic day dreams and who engage in flirtatious follies when they go abroad in public. They create more comment because they do most to lure the eye of admiration that is easily attracted by physical charms.

The domestic girl may not be less favored in the endowment of feminine graces, but being not so vain and having a profound regard for the more enduring attributes of human affection, her faculty of ratiocination schools her indifference to infatuation that is only shallow and transitory.

We have evidences everywhere of the girls who think and are doing a great part of the world's work. They have taken upon themselves an ever increasing share of the professions where thinking is essential to doing.

They take an active interest in the educational, industrial and economic problems of the community, state and nation in which many of the most practical suggestions are made by girls and women who think. They are nobly assuming serious responsibilities imposed by war, as they will also in the mighty tasks that will come after the war.

And the greatest blessing of all which sends a ray of hope through the mists of the present is that girls who think will become the dependable mothers of the future.

Would Give Him Exercise.

Former Congressman George R. Smith of Minneapolis is fond of hunting and takes great pride in the ownership of a costly setter dog of noble birth. One day an old man, who was acting as a guide for the hunt, came near making a lifelong enemy of Smith by criticizing the dog's technique in the field.

"The dog's perfectly all right," declared Smith, indignantly. "I wouldn't trade him for any dog I ever saw, only he doesn't get quite enough exercise. I'm busy and have to keep him penned up a good deal. He ought to have more exercise and that would improve his hunting."

"Has he got any fleas?" inquired the old man.

"Should say not," replied Smith, insulted. "That dog has his bath every week the same as I hope you do."

"Why don't you give him a few fleas?"

"What do you mean, give him fleas? Why should I want a fine dog like him to have fleas?"

"Well," opined the guide, thoughtfully, "they'd give him exercise."—St. Louis Republic.
