

A Fight for Life
It has been fight or die for many of us in the past and the lucky people are those who have suffered, but who are now well because they heeded nature's warning signal in time to correct their trouble with that wonderful new discovery of Dr. Pierce's, called "An-uric." You should promptly heed these warnings, some of which are dizzy spells, backache, irregularity of the urine or the painful twinges of rheumatism, sciatica, or lumbago. To delay may make possible the dangerous forms of kidney disease, such as Bright's disease, diabetes or stone in the bladder.

To overcome these distressing conditions take plenty of exercise in the open air, avoid a heavy meat diet, drink freely of water and at each meal, take Doctor Pierce's Anuric Tablets (double strength). You will, in a short time, find that you are one of the firm endorsers of Anuric. The tablets sell for 60c.

Personality of Your Hall.

The aspect of the hall should afford a cheerful yet reserved introduction to the rest of the house.

A hall has many definite functions to perform. It should not only serve as an attractive waiting room but should also give ready access to the main room of the house. Homes should never be so badly planned that some rooms are accessible only through others.

Halls should always be somewhat formal, for they are intended for the use of strangers and acquaintances as well as friends and relatives. Just how formal one's home entrance should be depends largely upon whether the structure is in the city or country. The interests and manner of living of the occupants also have much to do with this.

PISO'S

THE TEETH OF THE TIGER
BY MAURICE LEBLANC
TRANSLATED BY ALEXANDER TEIXEIRA DE MATTOS

"What's this little parcel addressed to me? Monsieur le Prefet de Police—to be opened in case of accident."
"Oh, yes," said the secretary, "I was forgetting! That's from Inspector Verot, too; something of importance, he said, and serving to explain the contents of the letter."
"Well," said M. Desmalions, who could not help laughing, "the letter certainly needs explaining; and, though there's no question of 'accident,' I may as well open the parcel."

As he spoke, he cut the string and discovered, under the paper, a box, a little cardboard box, which might have come from a druggist, but which was soiled and spoiled by the use to which it had been put.
He raised the lid. Inside the box were a few layers of cotton wool, which were also rather dirty, and in between these layers was half a cake of chocolate.
"What the devil does this mean?" growled the prefect in surprise.

He took the chocolate, looked at it, and at once perceived what was peculiar about this cake of chocolate, which was also undoubtedly the reason why Inspector Verot had kept it. Above and below, it bore the prints of teeth, very plainly marked, very plainly separated one from the other, penetrating to a depth of a tenth of an inch or so into the chocolate. Each possessed its individual shape and width, and each was divided from its neighbors by a different interval. The jaws which had started eating the cake of chocolate had dug into it the mark of four upper and five lower teeth.

M. Desmalions remained wrapped in thought and, with his head sunk on his chest, for some minutes resumed his walk up and down the room, muttering:
"This is queer. . . . There's a riddle here to which I should like to know the answer. That sheet of paper, the marks of those teeth: what does it all mean?"
But he was not the man to waste much time over a mystery which was bound to be cleared up presently, as Inspector Verot must be either at the police office or somewhere just outside; and he said to his secretary:
"I can't keep those five gentlemen waiting any longer. Please have them shown in now. If Inspector Verot arrives while they are here, as he is sure to do, let me know at once. I want to see him as soon as he comes. Except for that, see that I'm not disturbed on any pretext, won't you?"

Two minutes later the messenger showed in Maitre Lepertuis, a stout, red faced man, with whiskers and spectacles, followed by Archibald Bright, the secretary of embassy, and Caeceres, the Peruvian attaché. M. Desmalions, who knew all three of them, chatted to them until he stepped forward to receive Major Conte d'Astrignac, the hero of La Chouia, who had been forced into premature retirement by his glorious wounds. The prefect was complimenting him warmly on his gallant conduct in Morocco when the door opened once more.
"Don Luis Perenna, I believe?" said the prefect, offering his hand to a man of middle height and rather slender build, wearing the military medal and the red ribbon of the Legion of Honor.

through the papers, Maitre Lepertuis added:
"I may be allowed to say that I saw my client only once before I was summoned to his death bed; and that was on the day when he sent for me to come to his room in the hotel to hand me the will which he had just made. This was at the beginning of his influenza. In the course of conversation he told me that he had been making some inquiries with a view to tracing his mother's family, and that he intended to pursue these inquiries seriously after his recovery. Circumstances, as it turned out, prevented his fulfilling his purpose."

Meanwhile, the prefect of police had taken from among the documents an open envelope containing two sheets of paper. He unfolded the larger of the two and said:
"This is the will. I will ask you to listen attentively while I read it and also the document attached to it."
The others settled themselves in their chairs; and the prefect read out:
The last will and testament of me, Cosmo Mornington, eldest son of Hubert Mornington and Ermeline Roussel, his wife, a naturalized citizen of the United States of America. I give and bequeath to my adopted country three-fourths of my estate, to be employed on works of charity in accordance with the instructions, written in my hand, which Maitre Lepertuis will be good enough to forward to the ambassador of the United States. The remainder of my property, to the value of about 100,000,000 francs, consisting of deposits in various Paris and London banks, a list of which is in the keeping of Maitre Lepertuis, I give and bequeath, in memory of my dear mother, to her favorite sister Elizabeth Roussel or her direct heirs; or, in default of Elizabeth and her heirs, to her second sister Armande Roussel or her direct heirs; or, in default of both sisters and their heirs, to their cousin Victor Roussel or his direct heirs.

In the event of my dying without discovering the surviving members of the Roussel family, or of the cousin of the three sisters, I request my friend Don Luis Perenna to make all the necessary investigations. With this object, I hereby appoint him the executor of my will in so far as concerns the European portion of my estate, and I beg him to undertake the conduct of the events that may arise after my death or in consequence of my death to consider himself my representative and to act in all things for the benefit of my memory and the accomplishment of my wishes. In gratitude for this service and in memory of the two occasions on which he saved my life, I give and bequeath to the said Don Luis Perenna the sum of 1,000,000 francs.

The prefect stopped for a few seconds. Don Luis murmured:
"Poor Cosmo! . . . I should not have needed that inducement to carry out his last wishes."
M. Desmalions continued his reading:
Furthermore, if, within three months of my death, the investigations made by Don Luis Perenna and by Maitre Lepertuis have led to no result; if no heir and no survivor of the Roussel family have come forward to receive the bequest, then the whole 100,000,000 francs shall definitely, all later claims notwithstanding, accrue to my friend Don Luis Perenna. I know him well enough to feel assured that he will employ this fortune in a manner which shall accord with the loftiness of his schemes and the greatness of the plans which he described to me so enthusiastically in our tent in Morocco.

Grocery Deliveries.

From the Milwaukee Journal.

Carry your grocery parcels home, or pay a nickel per delivery to have the grocer do it. This is the edict of the local food administration. If the grocers do not proportionately reduce prices, the new charge will be a hardship on consumers. Saving for the grocer money that is not returned to the consumer will be no genuine saving. The food administration must see that the terms of the agreement are carried out and that those who carry their own parcels derive a proportionate benefit.

The charge for delivery will concentrate the public mind on that problem. The consumer will hesitate to have the grocer deliver when delivery bills mount up at the end of each month. The charge for delivery brings the problem to a head. Those who really want the service badly enough to pay for it, will bear all the burden. Those who, in the spirit of war time economy, carry their parcels, will effect a saving which in the aggregate will amount to many thousands of dollars. The housewife who carries bundles must perform visit the grocer rather than order by telephone. When she looks over the grocer's stock she will be able to select quality goods. She may see something cheaper than the article she contemplated buying. The housewife doing her own marketing on the spot means a new and beneficial habit in many Milwaukee families.

Charging for deliveries of groceries is a sound policy. But the saving must be passed on to the consumer.

A Novice's Subterfuge.

From the Washington Star.

"What is that tune you were playing on the piano?"
"That isn't a tune. That is a sonata."
"What's the difference?"
"Well, with a sonata it's hard for the average listener to detect mistakes. With a tune you've got to know pretty well what you are about."

From the Lamb.

Mrs. Boretton—Mercy! The burglar's? Mrs. Moreton—No, my husband's—he had heard the noise, too.

TRIAL TRIP BY MOONLIGHT

Engineer Wanted Secrets of Locomotive Kept, and He Didn't Know How to Run It.

An interesting incident of the first Canadian railway, which ran from Laprarrie on the St. Lawrence river to St. Johns on the Richelieu, under the name of the Champlain & St. Lawrence railway, is related in Prout's Railways of Canada.

The first locomotive used on the line came from Europe, accompanied by an engineer who, for some unexplained reason, had it caged and secreted from public view. The trial trip was made by moonlight in the presence of a few interested persons, and it is not described as a success. Later, the imported engineer made several attempts to set the kitten—for such was the nickname applied to this pioneer locomotive—in motion toward St. Johns, but in vain; the engine proved refractory, and horses were temporarily substituted for it.

Meanwhile, the railway officials called in a practical engineer from the United States, who announced that the engine, which was thought to be hopelessly unmanageable, was in good order and required only plenty of wood and water. His opinion proved correct, for after a little practice the engine attained the extraordinary speed of 20 miles an hour.—Youth's Companion.
