No Savoir Faire.
Defining "savoir faire," Assemblyman Rosa said in Madison:
"A certain pretty show girl had no savoir faire. A wealthy Madison broker took her to a Broadway cafe one evening after the show, and when their cocktails were set before them the broker lifted his glass and said:
"I should like to propose a little toast."
"The show girl shrugged her beautiful white shoulders.
"Nothin' doing, dear boy," she said. "I want a square meal."
The Result.
"What a thin voice that singer has!"
"So thin, one almost expects her to sing in a skeleton key."

Oh, You "Dixie" Tune.
The Houston Post notes that "some Cincinnati feller is writing new words for 'Dixie,'" and it discourages him with—
"No use. Few people have ever learned the old words. It is the 'Dixie' tune that plays the wild with human emotions and makes a patriot want to yell and shoot holes through the enemy."

Aerial Post.
"How did you send your fugitive poetry?"
"Naturally, in the flying mail."

Bridging the Gap From Steer to Steak

Live stock is raised on the farms and ranches of the West.

Meat is eaten in the large cities of the East, and by our boys in France—thousands of miles away.

The day of transporting live animals from ranch to seaboard and overseas has passed. There was too much waste. The modern packer locates his large and specialized plants in the producing regions. He ships the dressed beef in refrigerator cars, and holds it in his own refrigerated branch warehouses until delivered to the retailer. For shipment to foreign ports, he transfers the meat to refrigerated ships.

By means of his nation-wide organization the modern packer maintains a continuous flow of meats to all parts of the country, so that each retailer gets just the quantity and quality of meat his trade demands, and at the time he wants it.

Swift & Company recently shipped 1,000 carloads of meat products in one week to our Armies and to the Allies.

Bridging the gap from ranch to consumer can be done successfully—and at low unit costs and profits—only by large business organizations.

Swift & Company's profit on meat, always so small as to have practically no effect on prices, is now limited by the Government to about 2 cents on each dollar of sales.

Americans Never Fought Better Than In First Real Go at Huns

Capture of High Ground Near "Elbow" of Famous German Wedge One of Finest Feats In Annals of U. S. Arms —"Top Dog" In Their Sector Now.

BY FRED S. FERGUSON, United Press Staff Correspondent.

With the American Army in Picardy, May 29 (delayed)—American troops showed their punching power at Cantigny.

From behind a friendly pile of beets, on a knoll in the great plain which faces Cantigny, I witnessed the attack which resulted in capture of the village.

Amidst the detonations of hundreds of guns which filled the valley with smoke and dust and flame, the American troops went over the top. With a spirit which would not be denied they followed the French tanks preceding the assault, the smoke and with them penetrated more than a mile into the boche positions.

Overhead French and American shells made veritable ribbons of sound as they hurtled across the German positions. As I walked past battery after battery in action, the crash of guns was deafening.

Rounding a sharp corner, I came upon one battery which had been wheeled into the open and was withering the enemy with direct point blank fire.

So smothered with French and American shells was the boche artillery that French guns were standing squarely in the open at a crossing of the roads, bellowing defiance and hammering the way for the American infantry. Overhead French aeroplanes carrying American observers darted in and out amidst the smoke of battle, flying low, signaling to the batteries and harassing the enemy.

"Old Glory" Over Huns.
I saw an American flag fluttering from one plane which was headed straight for the front after having dropped a message at headquarters and a moment later I knew that the stars and stripes were waving over a new scene in American history, directing the fire of our guns whose shells raked the ground until it was like the open gate of hell.

Across the valley the outlines of Cantigny's ruins were occasionally visible through the smoke. To the rear an observation hill, once wooded, had been almost stripped, the bare skeleton of the remaining trees standing like skeletons in the early sunlight.

Then a straight line of fluffy white smoke appeared at the base of the hill and moved slowly upward, enveloping everything as it advanced. It was the barrage behind which the Americans could be seen through field glasses like mere dots creeping slowly and steadily forward behind the curtain of their own fire. In the valley French tanks crept and slid and slipped like caterpillars toward the enemy. Their sides spat fire at the Germans as they advanced and cleaned up the enemy machine gun nests with the doughboys trailing behind them.

Battled in Gas Clouds.
Meanwhile the artillery fire continued in terrific volume. Bursting shells from the big guns could be seen far to the rear of the German lines. All the German batteries were bathed in a deluge of gas and the roads behind over which the enemy might send reinforcements were kept under a constant rain of high explosive shells. German sausage balloons attempting observation work drifted and swung in mid air but the French planes main-

CENSURING MOVIES BIG JOB IN CHICAGO

Superintendent of Police Tells Something of Task Twelve Censors Have.

Chicago—Ten years of moving picture censorship in Chicago have resulted in the elimination of hundreds of thousands of feet from films shown to more than 400,000 persons daily, according to Maj. M. C. Funkhouser, second deputy superintendent of police, who reviewed the problems he had encountered as "moral censor" of the second largest city in the United States, when he defended the ordinances under which he operates, from recent attacks.

According to Major Funkhouser, the board of 12 censors, the members of which are selected by civil service, and which sits in judgment on the pictures, has little or no discretion in ordering "cut-outs" or refusing to issue permits, as they merely adhere to city ordinances, and the state law which prohibits their hanging scenes. The ordinances, among other things, prohibit the showing of pictures immoral, obscene or which portray riotous, disorderly or other unlawful scenes which have a tendency to disturb the public peace.

Within the last year 10,694 motion pictures were inspected by the censor and his aides and out of this number only 123 were rejected in the city, Major Funkhouser asserted. The average film is approximately 1,000 feet in length and the total number of feet rejected by the censor last year was 216,556.

The cost of maintaining the censoring department is more than paid for by the permits issued to the producers, which cost $1 each. Last year 29,697 permits were issued. The 12 censors draw salaries ranging from $120 to $135 a month.

"The trouble with the motion picture producers of today is that from 25 to 40 per cent of the pictures produced deal with sex, the eternal triangle, affinity, and white slave problems," Major Funkhouser declared. "As approximately 80 per cent of the motion picture audiences are composed of women and children, especially children, in theaters, outside of the downtown district, and as children often obtain their ideas of morality from the pictures, a close guard is necessary to see that the pictures do not convey erroneous ideas."

Within a year the city was made defendant in 12 suits by motion picture concerns, Major Funkhouser said. The courts, both state and federal, have declared the city ordinances constitutional, and out of seven cases tried, the city has won six. The seventh was lost on a technicality, the moral censor explained. Five suits are pending.

Two kinds of permits are granted the producers, one being called the "white" permit, and the other the "pink" or adult permit. The latter, Major Funkhouser explained, was for adults only. In these pictures, some sex problems and scenes are permitted, he said.

The number of films received weekly for inspection runs from 200 to 250, and the moral censors are given three days to pass on a picture, and issue a permit. A regular motion picture theater is established in one of the larger rooms of the city hall, where three screens and three motion picture machines enable more than one picture to be run at the same time. As a rule, two or more of the censors' staff sit and pass judgment on one picture.

"The city of Chicago is the only city in the country which has a civil service censor board," Major Funkhouser said. "Ohio, Kansas and Pennsylvania, however, have state censorship boards."

Some Self-Made Men.
From the Omaha World-Herald.

If you want the evidence that the United States is in fact a democracy, in fact a land of opportunity, take a look at the antecedents of the men who are directing the war for its defense.

President Wilson was the son of a country parson; General Pershing was born on a little Missouri farm; Mr. Taft, chairman of the Red Cross central committee, began his career as a newspaper reporter; Charles M. Schwab, director general of the emergency fleet corporation, started as a 16-year-old boy in a Pennsylvania steel mill; John D. Ryan, director of aircraft production, was clerk in a small town grocery store; General Goethals started at the bottom of the ladder as a West Point cadet; Hoover ran a laundry agency, worked his way through college by waiting table, and then went to work as a miner at $2 a day; Henry P. Davidson, head of the Red Cross war council, was a school teacher and then a bank runner; Edward L. Steinhilber, surveyor general of army supplies, worked in his father's boat building yard on the Mississippi; Bernard Baruch, chairman of the war industries board, started as a stock broker's clerk; Edward N. Hurley, chairman of the shipping board, worked on a farm for $18 a month, and later was a Burlington railway locomotive fireman; Vance McCormick, chairman of the war export board, was a farm boy; Henry Ford started as a mechanic at $2.50 a week; Paul Warburg, vice chairman of the federal reserve board, was a commission house clerk; Samuel McRoberts, head of the procurement division of the ordinance bureau, taught school to get money to study law; Julius Rosenwald, carried salesmen's satchels and clerked in a store; William G. Cose, right hand man to Schwab, was a ship yards apprentice.

"Spank 'Em."
Letter of Police Matron, in the New York Sun.

The recent arrests in New York of girls of from 15 to 20 in the Tenderloin cafes, chop suey joints and back rooms of saloons ought to bring about a little better training and discipline in some homes. Girls who willfully lie to their mothers about their absence at night and their companions are in need of proper discipline. Girls ought to be obliged to be at home at 10 p. m. if not on business of necessity. Mothers of girls between 11 and 20 should look after them and find out about their companions and amusements. Girls who frequent cafes, chop suey joints and the rear rooms of saloons ought to be picked up by an officer, taken to a police court and their parents subpoenaed and a notification given them of their daughter's delinquency. Then a magistrate could impose a sentence to have them taken home and a severe spanking administered. I venture to say that correction in this form would do more good than lectures and heart-to-heart talks. There are times when it becomes necessary to spank a girl for deliberate lies and disobedience, even though she be brought up strictly and carefully. There were also many married women in these reports without their husbands' knowledge, and they ought to have a little of the old-fashioned treatment with a slipper or shingle.

They Had Retired.
Dr. Ellison Browning said in an address before the antigambling league of Duluth:

"It's impossible to speak a good word for gambling except in jest. "One of my addresses was interrupted on a certain evening by a chap who yelled:

"Don't knock gamblin' so hard, doc. I know three men in this town who have retired, thanks to gamblin'."

"What's their address?" I demanded skeptically.

"Corner of State street and Washington avenue," yelled the chap.

"The whole audience then burst out laughing, for that was the address of the local almshouse."

"YES, I THINK SO."

"Why, Bernard," his mother said, "why did you not give that to Robert?"

"Oh, mamma, I did, but after the party was over I asked his mamma to give it back."

Steals EATONIC FOR YOUR STOMACH'S SAKE

Cures Him— Comes Back and Pays For It It's the Acid Test of Man and Eatonic They Both Win!

It takes a big man to stand up and say "I am wrong and willing to do right"; and it is needless to say that this poor sufferer will not want for EATONIC as long as he lives. To stomach sufferers and those not getting full strength out of their food, suffering from indigestion, dyspepsia, sour stomach, bloaty, gassy feeling after eating, stomach distress of any kind, we urge the money to spare to get a box. EATONIC has done me so much good my conscience bothered me until I had to come back and pay for it. This is the most wonderful testimonial statement in all my experience in the interest of any preparation. It is positive proof to my mind, that EATONIC is all that is claimed for it. If it had not helped this man his conscience would have left him unmolested. Very truly yours, A. W. Cramer.
