NEED 100,000 TROOPS TO FULFILL MANDATORY

That Many American Boys Will Be Required in Turkey If Senate Accepts Views of Wilson.

"One hundred thousand American troops will be necessary to the maintenance of our mandate in Turkey under the League of Nations," says Capt. S. Gale Lowrie, professor of political science in the University of Cincinnati, in an interview.

Capt. Lowrie has just returned from Constantinople, where he was in charge of the Red Cross work of extending relief to the families in Armenia and Turkey of drafted American soldiers, several thousand in number, and is on his way home.

"The necessity for so many troops," he said, "arises out of the difficult condition in that part of the world. The Balkan question is unsettled. So are the disposition of Asia Minor and Arabia. The peace conference has not yet taken them up, except to urge that the United States take over the Turkish possessions. England is about to withdraw her troops from Asia Minor. She has enough to do in Palestine and Mesopotamia, to say nothing of Egypt and Africa generally. Even so, she is attempting to edge out France in the control of Syria. She hopes in Mesopotamia's oil resources to recoup her financial losses of the war.

"If we do not accept the mandatory, the withdrawal of British troops will result in anti-Christian and pro-Moslem massacres. We have become a world power and must keep our finger on the pulse of the entire world. If we do not maintain peace in that particular section, we shall have to take part in the engulfment. On the other hand the expense will be great and we shall have divided interests in both hemispheres."

"I have not entirely made up my mind on the subject, but I think we ought to let this mandate alone. Now that the war is over the European nations are already jealous of each other. Any government, no matter which it might be, would have trouble in governing the former possessions of the Turkish Empire. None of the European nations wants the other to take them, but they all want us to do so. At any rate, I am convinced that neither the mandatory nor the league as a whole will stop all future wars."

"Cholly seems uppity. Won't look at the society folks around any more. Has he come into a fortune?"
"He was on the dock the day the Prince of Wales landed."

HAPPY NATIVES OF SARAWAK

Under Wise Government, People Live Easy Lives in Their Gloriously Fertile Country.

The tribe of Kayans, inhabiting the head waters of the Baram and Rejang rivers of Sarawak, have lived for unknown generations almost isolated in the interior of the island of Borneo. There are many reasons for believing them to be originally of Caucasian origin. Many of them have very light skin, and they probably reached Borneo by way of the Malay peninsula from lower Burma. Rigid discipline is characteristic of the domestic menage, resulting in good manners and recognition of authority.

For a good many years Sarawak was under the independent government of a white rajah, Sir Charles Brooke, who controlled his mingled subjects with unusual wisdom and sympathy. Among other far-sighted edicts he instituted stringent game laws, so that the island is one of the best protected parts of the world in this respect. Birds, beasts and butterflies are protected, not more than two specimens of any one species being allowed to the collector. In this way the very beautiful and rare trees and insects of the country are being maintained for the enjoyment of future generations.

Another wise move of the rajah was to continue the native costume—what there is of it—in place of introducing the unsuitable, ugly and artificial modern clothing of Europeans. This, as Stevenson points out, has usually exactly the opposite effect from that intended by well-meaning missionaries, and the happy natives of Sarawak are very well off as they are.

GOOD WORK WITH CAMERA

Explorers in Northwestern Canada Have Photographic Studies of Wilderness Wild Life.

After a three years' hunt with the camera in the almost unknown Laird river district in northwestern Canada, H. A. Stewart and John Sonnicksen have come back to civilization by way of Peace river, Alberta, bringing several thousand photographic studies of the manners and customs of the wild life of those remote woods and streams. The explorers, for they well deserve the name, worked into the wilderness by way of Hudson's Hope and the forks of the Findlay and Parsnip rivers as far as Fort Grahame. Their negatives illustrate the habits of the ptarmigan, moose, beaver, Canadian wild geese and other animals and birds that have seldom been observed with anything like thoroughness by means of the camera. The travelers had devices of various sorts whereby their subjects were enticed to spots upon which the hidden lenses were focused; and upon reaching these spots an ambushed camera man "snapped" them by twitching a long cord attached to the lens shutter. A single negative of some specially shy animal was often the only fruit of many hours of patient waiting. Sometimes for days the explorers would watch a single spot through their field glasses awaiting the favorable moment to "shoot." But it was all worth it.

Gleaning the Stumps.
The rapid decrease in the number of tall stumps which have been so familiar to the traveler through the coast hills of Oregon, is regarded as an indication of their approaching extinction. Hitherto some 20 feet of each stump has been left standing, silent relics of former monarchs of the forest, too thick for most saws to compass and too full of pitch to suit the sawmills. But now the need for timber is greater and men no longer climb high up on to boards thrust into notches in the trunk to suit the saw and the sawmill. They have learned thrift and they cut low down lest good lumber be uselessly wasted. Only as a record of past wastefulness are the tall stumps with their deep notches still visible.

A Filipino Vassar.
What the occidental ideals of universal opportunities of education are to mean to women of the Orient takes on a large significance with the establishment in the Philippines of a university for girls only. This university is to be part of an educational group called Centro Escolar de Senoritas, where until now the instruction to girls has been only in the primary, secondary and intermediate grades. That this Filipino Vassar will develop traditions characteristic of girls' colleges in the United States cannot be doubted by anyone who has observed how wholeheartedly though shyly, girl students from the Orient have entered into the undergraduate studies, festivities and pastimes at American colleges.

Coquelin's Memory.
"How many parts do you know well enough to play tonight if need be?" somebody asked Coquelin. He took a sheet of paper and wrote down the names of 53 plays of his repertoire. His friends laughed.
"You are boasting surely, mon ami?" said the Viscount de Lovenjoul.
"You have every one of these plays in your library," said Coquelin quietly. "Get them all out and put them on the table." The viscount did so. "Now," said Coquelin, "let anybody select a cue from any one of these plays at haphazard and give it to me."
They tried him with 16 plays out of the 53 and he never missed a single cue or made one mistake.—Fortnightly Review.

G. A. R. PLEASES SENATE.

Washington, Sept. 22.—Adoption by the Grand Army of the Republic at its annual encampment at Columbus, Ohio, of resolutions condemning the League of Nations has created a profound impression upon the Senate, now discussing the entire peace treaty.

The action of the veterans is particularly significant because they have for fifty years been the wards of Congress and have had in the past a nation-wide political influence. They have stood for America against any weakening force. Their latest action will, it is expected, have an influence upon their successors in the newly formed American Legion of veterans of the war against Germany.

This is only one of many manifestations of sentiment against the league as it now stands. These have been pouring in upon members of the Senate almost daily, both in resolutions and letters from constituents. As Representative Ricketts, of Ohio, puts it: "It would be incorrect to state that sentiment throughout the country on the League of Nations is changing. It already has changed."

With the Democratic desertions of the President's standard, it is anticipated that there will be sufficient votes to put through all Republican committee reservations.

Futures.
"When I grow up," said clever little Uriah Nimson, "I'm a gonna write a book, and if you're real good I'll put you in it."

"And if I'm bad?" queried Aloysius Amley, defiantly.
"Then I'll build a jail and put you in that."—Youngstown Telegram.

The Survivor.
Little Marie was sitting on her grandfather's knee one day, and after looking at him intently for a time she said: "Grandpa, were you in the ark?"

"Certainly not, my dear," answered the astonished old man.
"Then, why weren't you drowned?"
—London Blighty.

When the Actors Struck.
"How was the play?"
"Well, they had a millionaire producer playing the part of a butler and he overshadowed the rest of the cast."

A Good Word.
That interesting word "Gadzooks"

We've seen a romance make a hit entirely on account of it. We have no other word, 'tis clear. So good for lending atmosphere. Has helped a lot in making books.

Give Us the Chance

WE are always glad to talk business with the man or woman with a Missouri viewpoint—"Show Me."

If you own dairy cattle what we can "Show You" in the way of a cream separator is going to intensely interest you.

The Primrose Cream Separator is the stingiest proposition on earth with cream—never wastes a drop. Equipped with two cream outlets instead of one, the cream is never crowded in flowing out. This prevents the breaking of the fat globules—result, smoother butter.

The Primrose separator skims extremely close. The cream is always of uniform grade—is sweet, clean and always in first-class condition. And the warm skim milk is invaluable for calves and pigs. Built strong and simple, with frame open and sanitary, and supply can large and low. The Primrose is an ideal machine for the dairy farmer seeking maximum results.

There are so many exclusive good features connected with the Primrose separator that we know we can "Show You" where you will profit much by its use. Let us demonstrate its many fine points to you—if it is not convenient for you to call, phone us and we will bring a machine out with us to your home.

SPRAGUE—The Hand-Built Tire

Sprague Tires are hand-built throughout. That's one reason why they give you more mileage—why they are so much cheaper in the end. In the making of these tires, human hands place layer upon layer, first of fabric and then of rubber. Their work is inspected and re-inspected many times. It must be perfect. Machines could turn out tires faster. But machines could not give you the high quality workmanship that you have learned to expect in Sprague Tires.

Sprague's Are Built of the Best Materials

PURE PARA RUBBER the richest and most costly of all, goes into every Sprague Tire. Tires using 40 to 60 per cent pure Para Rubber are considered good tires. Sprague tread and sidewalls are 70 per cent pure Para Rubber. Is it any wonder that they wear longer and give you better service while they wear?

Sprague Tires have an extra ply of fabric. They weigh from three to five pounds more than ordinary tires.

SEA ISLAND FABRIC made of the strongest cotton that grows, is used exclusively in Sprague Tires. The Sea Island cotton used in these tires costs more, but it means far greater mileage—and mileage is the measure of a tire's worth.

Not only is the best fabric used, but the life of this fabric is not stretched out of it in an effort to make it build more tires.

Sprague Tires have proved by their performance that quality materials, backed by quality workmanship, are cheaper in the end. Test them against the best tires you now have and you'll soon appreciate the economy of Spragues.
