Hurley Jones, formerly a resident of this city but now of Montana, was an O'Neill visitor the first of the week. He shipped his cattle and horses to Orchard where he will have them wintered as there is no feed in Montana. He says that it cost him about $25.00 a head to ship his cattle from Montana to Orchard.

The restrictions placed upon the business houses of the city by the local fuel committee were removed last Monday and the business houses now maintain their regular hours. The action of the local committee was taken after the ban had been raised in several of the larger cities of the state after the settlement of the coal strike. Local coal dealers are limiting the amount of coal to each customer and will continue this practice until coal shipments become more regular.
