NOT SO HARD TO UNDERSTAND

After Experience With Truthful Parent, Teacher Got Great Light on Johnny's Case.

A teacher who believed in co-operating with the parents of her pupils called at the house of a small boy whom she had caught in a number of falsehoods in order to take counsel with his mother.

"I can't see how you can say that," the boy's mother objected. "John never tells me lies. I'm mighty particular about it myself. He's out in the yard now. Annie," she said to his small sister, "you go out and tell him to come right in this minute!"

Annie went, but in a few minutes she returned without the small prevaricator. "He won't come," she announced proudly. "He says he won't."

"Did you tell him who was here?" inquired his mother.

Annie shook her head.

"All right," said the truthful parent. "Go back and tell him his grandmother is here and has some candy for him. That'll bring him!"—Youth's Companion.

Country Uses Much Cocoa.

The United States is the world's largest consumer of crude cocoa, having taken in 1918 about 50 per cent of the total world production of 398,000 tons. The imports of crude cocoa into this country for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919, were 313,037,419 pounds, valued at $35,953,990, a falling off of 21.6 per cent in quantity and 12.9 per cent in value from the high record of 1918.

"When I got home tuther evening," related a citizen of Sandy Mush, "I found a couple o' dozen of my acquaintances and several fellers that I'd never heered of before, setting on my porch and otherwise hanging around, waiting for me."

"What was coming off—a surprise party, or something that-a-way?" inquired the neighbor to whom the incident was being related.

"Nope; nuth'n' specially surprising about it, considering that some infernal fella had told 'em I'd been orating around that I recollected when the courthouse in Tumblerville was built a bottle of fine old licker was put in the corner stone. They wanted to know which corner."—Kansas City Star.

Made Him Feverish.

The story is going the rounds that when in New York recently, Harold Lloyd stepped into one of the New York shops and asked to be shown a certain kind of overcoat.

"How much?" asked the movie man.

"Two hundred and fifty dollars," was the reply.

"Nothing doing! Take it away," said Mr. Lloyd firmly.

"Why, you can afford that," the salesman said, unwilling to lose the sale.

"Sure I can!" replied Mr. Lloyd.

"But I'm darned if I'm that cold."

People Must Choose Own Course--Good or Hard Times

Despite Great Demand Building Operations Will Cease Temporarily If Waste of Time and Money Continues, Says Financial Experts.

S. W. Straus Company Bulletin.

There are indications that the building industry may receive something of a set back in the near future in connection with similar conditions which may result in general business lines. While fundamental conditions are sound, and while the outlook is favorable to a long and prosperous era in this country, it would not be surprising if we passed through a transitory crisis, the severity and duration of which depends on the determination of the people to give up their present false standards of living and settle down to a solid period of hard work and thrift.

The pronounced housing shortage throughout the country would indicate a long period of active building, but conditions are such that the law of supply and demand may cease to function for a while. The tremendous shortage of material wealth of all kinds as a result of the war and the vast amount of inflation has been augmented by an orgy of waste, extravagance, and speculation. For more than five years humanity has been destroying, consuming and wasting more wealth, more material resources, than it has been producing. Deflation and stabilization only can be brought by increased production and lessened consumption. Moreover, this country has been shipping to Europe a vast amount of material wealth and production, therefore, only credit. That this credit is now greatly impaired is shown by the condition of the foreign exchange market. Our people also have been going through a process of killing wages which has resulted in moving up living costs with each new wage advance. We have been simply going around and around in a circle of higher costs.

What the country needs is more factory buildings, more homes, more apartment houses, more office structures, and more hotels, as well as a greater supply of commodities of all kinds.

Nothing but the widespread practice of thrift will bring this about, and it is apparent that our people will not learn this lesson until they have been given the stern warning of a temporary setback in business.

When such a warning does come the intelligence and patriotism of the American people will be asserted, conditions soon will be raked and the country will face the most prosperous period it has witnessed in a great many years.

Building operations can not be expected to proceed on a large scale and the general, substantial prosperity to which the people of this country are entitled cannot be brought about on our present economic basis. No country can be continually prosperous when it is habitually thrifless. Before we have enduring prosperity and stabilized conditions in the building industry, we must have a general adoption of the principles of thrift.

To Battle for Ohio.

From the New York Evening Post.

General Wood's invasion of Ohio is in accordance with the traditions of that state. Ohio is the place where republicans fight their bitterest wars among themselves. The long struggle between the McKinley and the Foraker wings of the party had national consequences of the highest importance and ceased only with the death of the leaders. Then came a period of comparative peace, culminating in a series of democratic victories. This ill-omened tranquillity is now disturbed by a strange combination of events. General Wood enters the lists from outside the state to contest for it with a "favorite son," Senator Harding, in taking this course he is doing no more than McKinley's managers did in 1896, when they challenged Senator Cullom's claim to Illinois and won a complete triumph in the convention of that state. But 1912 has intervened since those historic days, and it is this factor that gives the Wood move its novelty.

Instead of going after delegates in the familiar fashion, Wood forms an alliance with James R. Garfield, one of the most prominent survivors of the famous "tennis cabinet." Harding feels compelled to counter by an alliance with a candidate who lives as far from Ohio as a presidential candidate can live—Senator Johnson, who ran for vice president, with Roosevelt in 1912. Here is a clear recognition that the former progressives are to be reckoned with—not in the old way, however, as a separate body, but as a potential force in the republican party.

The Ohio primary law binds delegates that are elected to a national convention to vote in accordance with the preference expressed by the voters. In order to allow for eventualities, this preference may be expressed for a second choice as well as a first choice candidate. The first choice to be voted for so long as he is a factor in the balloting. Wood is taking advantage of this provision by putting Garfield, who is announced as favoring Garfield for second choice, while Harding, according to the latest reports, is playing a double game by using Johnson as second choice in progressive strongholds and General Keifer in stand pat districts. These arrangements create a mixed situation as even Ohio voters can desire. The one thing fairly certain is that Harding will not go to the Chicago convention with a solid delegation from his state behind him. But just how many delegates can Wood take away from him? That is the question to be answered by the campaign now beginning.

Why do Wood's managers stir up partisan bitterness by making war upon "favorite sons"? Is it because they are desperate and inclined to take any and all chances for delegates? Or do they feel something of the confidence that led Mark Hanna—with encouragement from anti-Cullom republicans of Illinois—to stage a doubtful battle the issue of which went far to settle the result at St. Louis? Whichever be the true reason, the eyes of the country will be upon Ohio for the next two months, observing with keen interest a political battle royal.

The Merchant Marine.

From the New York Times.

In giving views on the American merchant marine almost every public man avoids details. All agree that we should have cargo carriers under the American flag in sufficient numbers to transport American products to all parts of the world. It is the question of continuing to pay rent when a man should own the house he lives in. Why pay the British, Norwegians and Japanese for cargo space when we can build and operate our own ships? The war gave us our opportunity. Ships were built by the gross to carry troops, munitions and supplies to Europe, and the war over the building program was continued in order to found an American merchant marine and put the Stars and Stripes in ports where for 40 years it was rarely, if ever, seen.

Some questions of prime importance remain unanswered. Can the ships be sold cheap enough to tempt firms and companies to buy? What government control shall there be over private operation, if any? Would it be expedient for the government to lease some of its ships, retaining title? Is government ownership in what was German East Africa officers be provided for as large a merchant marine as would be able to compete with the British before they got the cream of the ocean carrying trade? Can crews be obtained and kept at living wages, American standards? The American merchant marine is in an inchoate state, waiting for congress to do something, with congress reluctant, backing away, fearful. The problem must soon be dealt with courageously and with resolution. One thing is certain—if these questions relating to operation cannot be answered satisfactorily, the sun rising on the American merchant marine will be obscured by clouds.

Great Rift Valley.

From the London Times.

The great Rift valley, as it is called by Prof. J. W. Gregory, extends over one-sixth of the circumference of the earth. It begins in Lebanon, follows the canyon of the Jordan and the Dead sea, and crosses a high "divide" to become the deep fjord of the Gulf of Akaba between the highlands of Edom and Sinai. The Red sea, a great trough 11,000 feet deep, measured from the summit of its rocky wall to the sea bottom, continues it between the high deserts of Arabia and Arabia to the narrow neck of Bab-el-Mandeb. It strikes across Abyssinia to Lake Rudolf, runs almost due south through British East Africa and traverses a range 7,000 feet high to Lake Natron, in what was German East Africa. Where it crosses the Uganda railway its walls are so steep that the trains used to be hauled up or lowered by cables. It is continued by the rift which holds Lake Nyasa, an inland ocean whose surface is 1,600 feet above sea level, with a depth of 700 feet below sea level.

From Nyasa it runs down the Shire valley, crosses the Zambesi and ends in the Indian ocean at the Sabi river, in Gazaland. A minor branch forms the lower Nile and a gigantic arm stretches from the upper end of Nyasa through Tanganyika, the second deepest lake in the world, its bottom 1,500 feet below sea level, to the upper Nile. We are accustomed to think of valleys as having been formed by erosion, but the Rift valley is clearly the result of some more catastrophic agency. There have been differences of opinion as to the mode of its formation and as to its age. The steepness and apparent freshness of its sides are such that some observers have placed its formation within the historical period. But the discovery of fossil mammals, of types long extinct makes it impossible to regard the fountaining of the Dead sea as coincident with the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah.

St. Helena Prospers.

From the Salt Lake Tribune.

St. Helena, for years and years known to the general public only as the spot of Napoleon's exile, has suddenly come to the front as a place of commercial importance. It has won prominence owing to its strategic value in connection with African west coast trade. A port of call for no fewer than seven big steamship lines, St. Helena is made the converging point for sailings back and forth between Europe and South America, North America and South Africa and the far east.

As proof of the commercial regard which St. Helena has gained, it is only necessary to say that a bank has been established there. It is said to be the first time that international banking facilities have been provided for the business which enters the port of St. Helena. The new bank is a branch of the National Bank of South Africa, whose headquarters is at Pretoria. Curious things come to pass as the years go on.

Sing Sing prison, in New York state, is building a new death house, as the old one has long been over-crowded. The new death house will be provided with 40 cells for men and two for women; a kitchen, a hospital, and a dental room, beside the death chamber.

Water on the Knee.

A certain man of rather a waggish disposition, contends that his wife has no imagination. At dinner one night he chanced to mention a tragic circumstance, which he had read in the evening paper on his way home. A passenger on a transatlantic steamer had fallen overboard in mid-ocean, and had never been seen again.

"Was he drowned?" asked the wife.

"Oh, no," answered the husband, "but he sprained his ankle, I believe!"

The Reformation.

Admiral Mark Kerr said at an airman's wedding:

"Women often marry men to reform them, and oftener than people think, the women succeed in this. The reformed husbands, however, are seldom very grateful.

"My wife married me to reform me," a man said bitterly on a sea voyage Cubaward.

"Did she succeed?" asked another man.

"You bet she did!" said the first one. "Why I wouldn't marry again if I lived to be as old as Methusalem!"

BOSCHEE'S SYRUP.

A cold is probably the most common of all disorders and when neglected is apt to be most dangerous. Statistics show that more than three times as many people died from influenza last year, as were killed in the greatest war the world has ever known. For the last fifty-three years Boschee's Syrup has been used for coughs, bronchitis, colds, throat irritation and especially lung troubles. It gives the patient a good night's rest, free from coughing, with easy expectation in the morning. Made in America and used in the homes of thousands of families all over the civilized world. Sold everywhere.—Adv.

Benefit of Silence.

"I don't see your name in the paper quite so often as it used to be, senator."

"No," replied the senator. "I find it just as well not to inform the public of my whereabouts. When they don't actually know where I am it is natural for them to believe that I am busy working for their interests."
