It is estimated that 4,000 farms in the state of New York have been aban-dened. In Steuben county there is for sale 135 acres of land with a river flow-ing through it. It has a good big comfortable farm house, outbuildings, barns, spring house, etc., and 75,000 feet of standing hemlock and hard-wood of standing nemices and hard-wood timber, and a large producing orchard. There is a school and a village three quarters of a mile distant. The price is $3,300, of which $1,000 is to be cash. A farm near Binghamton, owned by a woman who can not work it, is being offered for $2,500. It has running water, spring house, horses, cows, chickens, a good house and much new farm machinery. Several are listed at less than it would cost to construct the farm buildings. Many of the country boys drafted for the army have come in con tact with the excitement of city life, and refuse to go back to the farms. Another cause for such offerings is the city prices of union labor applied to the

FIVE CANDIDATES AFTER M'KELVIE

Fail to Agree on Which One Is to Make Race For the Republican Nomination.

Lincoln, Neb., March 22.-Strenuous efforts are being made by republican candidates opposed to Mc-Kelvie for governor to get together on some one of them. As it is now there are five who want to wrest the nomination from McKelvie, not counting Howell. Because of the failure of former efforts to thin out the field, a number of republicans have turned to Howell as the man upon whom to unite.

This caused the appearance in Lincoln Friday of McLaughlin, McMullen, Pollard and Hall, and they spent several hours in several conferences, which were chaperoned by Frank A. Shotwell, a member of the executive committee of the state committee. Shotwell is hot upon the trail of Mc-Kelvie, and McKelvie says it is because he appointed another Omaha lawyer supreme judge when Shotwell

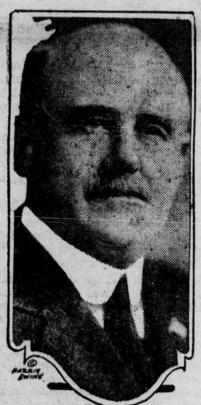

McMullen, McLaughlin and Pollard have agreed to a plan which includes the naming by each candidate of three friends. These are to gather in secret conclave and choose one of the four, the other being Hall, to make the race. Hall objects to this, and proposes that if the party interest is the chief concern-it being urged that McKelvie cannot be elected if nominated-the thing to do is for all to withdraw and leave the matter of drafting a prominent republican to contest with McKelvie. On this rock they remain split. George D. Mathewson, of Fillmore county, is the fifth entrant. He filled Friday.

Kremmer, a druggist of Niobrara, has appealed to the supreme court from a conviction and fine of $100. assessed in Knox county on the charge of having Jamaica ginger in his possession for the purpose of using the same as a beverage. Kremmer says that on the day in question he had fallen and fractured a rib. He had taken two teaspocnfulls of ginger to relieve the pain, and when that did not do it he took some morphine. He said that the condition in which witnesses said they found him was due to the morphine. The doctor who was called said that Kremmer was intoxicated and that to produce the condition in which he was he must have taken four to six ounces. The young women who lived in the where the seizure was made, are believed to have escaped to Kansas City.

Discovery of the "plant" was made after A. Bonoff, 1409 Douglas street, had trailed the two women to their room after he suspected them of tealing a mink cape from his store. AIMS HOT WORDS AT GOV. M'KELVIE

Retiring Fire Marshal Likens Nebraska's Chief Executive to a Czar-Has Mind of His Own.

Lincoln, Neb., March 19 .- Telling Governor McKelvie that he need not wait till next Monday to get his resignation but that he could have it right away, State Fire Marshal Beach put on his coat and walked out of his job Wednesday. To the reporters he said:

"Abraham Lincoln freed 4,000,000 slaves, but the supreme court decision has knocked the shackles off a bunch of code law appointees in this state house. The governor questioned my honor, and no man, even the governor of Nebraska, is big enough to do that without my resenting it.'

In his letter of resignation Mr. Beach said he hoped the governor would stay in the state long enough to fill the vacancy, and intimates that the governor is not telling the truth when he says that he has been interfering with other branches of the service and that he was sore because he did not get a $3,000 salary when rewards for code law officials were being made up. He defies the governor to prove this.

"My returning this money to the state in excess of the salary I would have received under the old law, the court now says was in force, was purely a personal matter and none of your business." He adds that the governor has no reason for calling him down now for running for delegate at large when he has known that for some weeks.

When I accepted the appointment at your hands I did not sell my soul to you. I did not waive any of my rights as an American citizen. I wish to assure you I shall enjoy a rest from the dictation of petty officials in your czar-like administration.'

From the Popular Mechanics. Immobility, as the word is ordinarily understood, is only relative after all, Archimedes, in the exuberance of his discovery of the if only a fulcrum were provided. When a city has reached the dig-nity of more than 10,000 population, with substantial brick buildings and a street car line, and all the other customery appurte-nances of municipal enterprise, it is a habit to regard it as a fixture, without putting any fur-ther thought on the matter. But even a solid city can be moved by the most powerful of all levers, the force of gold.

The city of Hibbing, Minn., stands directly upon one of the richest deposits of iron ore in the whole Mesabe region. On three sides of it, east, west and north, the huge open pit mines of red hematite creep closer and closer, as their great 360-ton steam showels, biting off 16 tons of ore at each sweep, nibble away at the earth. Now impatient industry will wait no longer for the good steel mill food that lies un-der the main street, and under the city hall, the hotels, dwellings, and oher buildings.

So Hibbing is going south, the only line of retreat left open. It has been promised sanctuary by its little neighbor, South Hib-bing, and already many of its goods and chattels have been moved to the new home. By summer the hegira will be in full swing, and in a few years Hib-bing, busy on its new location, will almost have forgotten to identify the great pit to the north as its former site.

Mexican Labor for Texas.

From the Houston Post.
Secretary of Labor Wilson is to be congratulated for his ruling extending the modification of the immigration restrictions, by which Mexican farm laborers will be permitted to come into the southwestern states to assist with making the crops this year. The sec-retary shows a much clearer under-standing of the situation than did mem-standing of the situation than did members of the congressional committee who refused to concur in a recommendation for amending the immigration laws to permit such suspension of certain provisions in the law, when necessary. By the action of the secretary, prospects of making a crop in South Texas this year are greatly enhanced, and the whole country will be benefited by the increased production of necessities that is assured by reason of the availability of a larger labor supply.

If anybody understands Mexicans and the Mexican situation, it ought to be his people living in the southern part of Texas, who have employed Mexican labor for years and who have been living among Mexicans all their lives. And if these people, including the business men and leaders of commerce who understand the special value of the Mexican laborer to Texas agriculture because he is willing to stay on the farm, in preference to going to the city, desire to bring in Mexican labor and stand sponsor for it, other people in distant parts of the country certainly ought not to object to the process of bringing it in.

Too Much Shoe Profit.

From the Los Angeles Times

An inquiry in Massachusetts appears to establish the fact that the high price of shoes is due to the three-cornered speculation in leather immediately following the war, which resulted in the more than doubling of the cost of the material in less than six months. The packers, the tanners and the jobbers were all in it and each gained handsome profits in passing the hides and leather on to the next. There are too many profits in a pair of shoes before they reach the consumer's feet. If there is a dollar's worth of hide in a pair of shoes to start with the leather would represent at least $3.75 to the consumer by the time the different interests had each taken out their 25 per cent profit.

In the days when primitive man killed the wild boar and made his own san-dals from the jelt all these go-between profits were unnecessary.

Moderns are in the habit of assuming that their accomplishments transcend in importance those of the ancients, but their are fields of activity in which, with all the appliances furnished by the ingenious mechanics of our times, we been absent only once, when there was a death in the family. with all the appliances furnished by the ingenious mechanics of our times, we have not succeeded in remotely approaching the achievements of peoples who flourished millenniums ago and who, from all accounts, worked with tools of the most primitive character. We have made our boasts about cutting through the Isthmus of Panama and prided ourselves on the construction of the Roosevelt dam in Arizona, but the British engineers operating in the region between the Tigers and Euphrates rivers, in Central Asia, have made discoveries which indicate that the irrigation system constructed to utilize the waters of those great streams was a more daring conception, and accomplished more for the good of man, than any project convelved or carried out by modern men. At a recent meeting of the British Royal Geographical society one of these engineers read a paper describing the observations made by the aviators of the corps to which he was attached in which he expressed the belief that by the aid of this irrigation system a population of perhaps 90,000,000 people was subsisted.
