The American Manufacturers' Association has started a fight against trade mark pirates in various foreign countries. Argentina is one of the worst offenders. It is not necessary that a person who registers a trade mark in that country be the actual manufacturer of the goods, but once registered, a trade mark can be used by no one else. There are individuals who make it a business to appropriate the trade marks of foreign concerns, reading magazines and newspapers to decide what products are likely to find a market in Argentina. They can then register the trade mark of the foreign country and then extort a price for surrendering them to the owner. One United States corporation is said to have paid $30,000 to recover its trade mark from a pirate.

If the world war veterans are entitled to a bonus, the Spanish war veterans do not understand why they are not also entitled to one. A movement has started in South Dakota to grant "justice to those who took part in the fight with Spain." It is maintained by the Spanish war veterans that they do not ask any bonus, either the government or legislature, but they feel that they should be given one if the boys of the great war are so rewarded. They point out that every one in the service at that time was so voluntarily and that in the 22 years which have elapsed since then, they have never sought any material reward.

Next July, British Columbia, with the exception of Vancouver Island, will adopt the right hand turn as a rule of the road. Hitherto the left hand turn has been used, as in England. It is explained that the turn to the left custom is the survival of an ancient habit whereby men could shake hands as they passed each other and at the same time keep their weapons out of the reach of the one they passed. But when vehicles came into vogue, the driver sat on the right to better guard the wheels in passing.

A fine of $3,000 imposed recently upon the American Socialist society by the federal district court of New York has been affirmed by Judge Henry G. Ward, of the United States circuit court of appeals. The society was convicted of violating the espionage law by publishing and circulating a pamphlet entitled "The Great Madness," written by Prof. Scott Nearing. Judge Ward set aside the contention of the society that the espionage law does not apply to corporations because of the word "whoever" in the statute.

"Brain workers" have organized in Great Britain, men who are supposed to do their work in black coats and starched collars. It is commonly called the "Black Coat Combine," but technically it is the National Federation of Professional, Technical, Administrative and Supervisory Workers. It will not affiliate with the labor party, or join the Trades Union Congress.

When nearly 500,000 railway men went on strike in Great Britain on September 25, 1919, the British public did not content itself with writing letters to the Times protesting the "holdup." Nor did it run around to somebody looking for an injunction. Under the aggressive leadership of the government, an army of volunteers, from ducks to dry drivers, came forward to man all available means of improvised transportation and in just nine days the strike was at an end, says the New York Evening Post's Washington correspondent.

The citizens of Wakefield, Mass., have instructed the municipal light board to make a contract with an out of town corporation for the purchase of gas. The local gas plant has supplied the town for the last 26 years, but losses have aggregated $14,000 since the town bought the plant and that the shortage last year was $4,000.

Rumors are in circulation that American bankers in Switzerland have within the last few days purchased extraordinary amounts of German marks, the figure reaching 30,000,000 in one day. To this in part, is attributed the rise in the exchange value of the mark from 8 to over 10, while the dollar fell from 588 to 550 Swiss francs.

Leading temperance societies of the country will make every effort to have the present congress pass a law withdrawing the protection of the American flag and consuls from persons who enter foreign countries to do business, which is against the law in the United States.

Deportation proceedings against William von Brincken, former military attaché of the German consulate at San Francisco, who was sentenced in 1917 to two years in federal prison for conspiring to foment revolution against British rule in India, have been cancelled by the department of labor.

"A large consignment of clothing, made in the United States and exported to Norway before the war, came back to this country today on the steamship, Bergensford, the owners expecting a substantial profit because of the great increases in prices here," says a news item from New York.

The government campaign to reduce the cost of living is about to come to a close, because it is too expensive a luxury to be maintained at the present time.

The American Legion legislative committee declares that an immediate appropriation must be made for the care of 72,000 mentally deranged former soldiers.

Birmingham newspaper publishers have flatly denied the request of a committee of retail clothing that news of the "overall movement" throughout the South be suppressed on the ground that it was damaging the retail clothing business.

National prohibition enforcement should not cost more than $5,000,000 a year, according to Wayne B. Wheeler, counsel for the Anti-Saloon league. Mr. Wheeler's letter was prompted by a recent statement in the Senate that enforcement would cost $50,000,000 a year.

SUGAR PROFITS MAY BE LIMITED

Department of Justice Renews Efforts to Check Soaring Price—House Members to Query Palmer.

Washington, April 26.—Margins of profit on sugar, collected by both wholesalers and retailers, may be limited as a result of a conference this week between sugar refiners and officials of the department of justice.

The department will try to find out exactly why sugar has risen in price to 20 or 25 cents a pound retail, and sometimes more, which is twice the wartime figure. The department plans to act under the anti-profiteering clauses of the Lever act if evidence of speculation and profiteering are found. The project of limiting wholesalers to a cent a pound profit, and retailers to 2 cents, is under consideration.

Complaints Nationwide.

The procedure would be to regard profits in excess of these amounts as excessive, and subject to action under the Lever act. Uncertainty as to the feasibility of the suggestion exists, and there is considerable doubt as to the practicability of invoking a war time measure after a year and a half of peace.

But Attorney General Palmer, and those of his subordinates who are directing the so called war on high prices, are smarting under the accusations that they are unable to cope with the situation, which is bringing complaint from the entire country, and have determined some relief must be provided if there is a way.

The department of justice has had the responsibility of keeping sugar prices within bounds since the government regulations ended. Agents of the department have been busy in many cities and instructions have been given to housewives who have been overcharged for sugar to report to these agents. However, prices have continued to advance.

Attorney General Palmer will appear later in the week before the house judiciary committee to answer questions regarding the sugar situation.

House members will ask Palmer why Louisiana sugar growers sold their product for 17 and 18 cents a pound.

They are trying also to ascertain the effect of the failure to purchase this year's Cuban crop.

FIGHT FOR REED MAY GO TO FRISCO

Kansas City Democrats Bitter Because He Was Rejected as Delegate.

Joplin, Mo., April 26.—The repudiation of Senator James A. Reed by the Missouri democrats may be taken to San Francisco for adjudication, his friends declared last night.

Senator Reed, rejected by the convention first as a delegate at large and then as a district delegate after he was regularly nominated in his home district, was the storm center of the convention. So bitter was the fight, which lasted from dark until dawn, that democratic presidential nominations were not even considered.

Kansas City and St. Louis members of the convention defiant at the convention's action, claim Jackson county has the right to send delegates of its own choosing, despite the convention's decision.

The threatened split in the party in Missouri, now declared to be inevitable, was aggravated when Senator Reed declared in Washington that "Missouri will go republican next fall by 75,000 unless something is done to save the situation."

POLITICS OF IOWA TALKED IN CAPITAL

Something Smart.

There was a flip young clerk at the boarding house table, who was always trying to show off. He seldom asked in the usual way to have a thing passed to him, but had to get off something smart.
