From the Columbus Dispatch.
The department of public highways in Ontario has put a curb

On the highways under its jurisdiction no individual or company may hereafter remove branches from trees without permission. When permission is granted, it is specified that the work must be done under supervision of the official forester of the district, or such other person as the forester. such other person as the forester may name. The chief trouble has been with the telephone, telegraph, electric light and power companies. The Canadian Forestry Magazine thinks that Forestry Magazine thinks that the larger companies will readily fall in with the spirit of the movement and employ expert tree pruners hereafter, at whose hands the health and beauty of the trees will not suffer. Cooperation in this way for the public good would be of more value to them in good will than the small amount to be saved by employing an ignorant slasher employing an ignorant slasher rather than the skilled pruner.

PODUCING CLEAN MILK

During the Paris exposition, H. B. Gurler shipped some fresh milk pro-duced on his farm at DeKalb, Ill., to France. When opened, this milk was found to be sweet and wholesome and France. When opened, this milk was found to be sweet and wholesome and it received a gold medal.

Although no preservative was added, it did not sour for several weeks after it was produced. Immediately after being produced it had been iced and at no time was its temperature allowed to rise far above the freezing point. This was one factor in the wonderful record made by the Gurler milk at Paris. The other one was cleanliness. It was milked from healthy cows into clean, small mouth pails by cleanly people and that was the other factor.

The deiry husbandry department of the University of Illinois investigated to determine where the germs get into the milk. They say unclean milk cans are the principal cause of the trouble. Each 15 drops of milk (about) as it reaches the country dairy the morning after it is produced contains about 50,000 bacteria. Most of these are of harmless varieties such as cause souring. The number may be increased to 50,000,000 if the milk is improperly handled. It may be only a few hundred or a few thousand if the utensils are all clean and the milk is kept cold.

The University of Illinois investigation indicated that at least 80 per cent. of the germ life getting into milk comes ordinarily from the utensils. The only perfect way to sterilize a milk can or pail is to treat it with steam under ordinarily from the utensils. The only perfect way to sterilize a milk can or pail is to treat it with steam under pressure. A can sterilized after this fashion should be covered by a cap and kept tightly closed until ready to be used. The cover should be removed, the milk poured in and the cover replaced as quickly as possible. On the other hand if the can has been washed with water, hot or cold, or even treated with ordinary steam, the top should be left off until the can has dried out.

In fact, if the can can be dried with dry heat so much the better. After drying, the cover should be removed and the uncovered can and its cover should be set on a can rack in the sun for as the uncovered can and its cover should be set on a can rack in the sun for as long a time as possible. If the cover be left on a fairly clean but moist non-sterile milk can for several hours the stench will be fearful. No milk man who knows his business will put milk into such a can until it has been deodorized. In other words, covering the can is good business if the sterilizing has been done with steam under pressure. It is the reverse if the cleaning has been done with water and ordinary steam.

A farmer can produce clean milk with a low bacterial count in an inexpensive

A tarmer can produce clean milk with a low bacterial count in an inexpensive and not very clean barn if he will be clean in his methods and especially if he will keep his cans and pails bacteriologically clean.

A demonstration made by Dr. North at Homer, N. Y., nearly 10 years ago proved all these points. The Univer-sity of Illinois finds that what is true in New York is true in the upper Mississippi valley. If some one would try it out in California, Mississippi and Minnesota they would come to the same conclusion in each instance.

Repairing French Coal Mines.

From the Columbus Dispatch. The difficulty of bringing a ruined coal mine back into effective production is strikingly illustrated in figures given by the fortnightly survey of French economic conditions, published by the French commission in the United States. The mines at Lens were yielding an annual output of over 3,500,000 tons in 1913. So thorough was the determine the states of the state tons in 1913. So thorough was the destruction wrought that only 3,165 tons were taken from them in 1920. At Aniche, the 1920 output is a trifle over 500,000 tons, as compared with a prewar yield of over 2,000,000. At Escarpelle, it was possible in 1920 to extract but one-fifteenth of the 750,000 tons produced in 1913, while the mines of Courriers gave but 13,000 tons as compared with 2,297,000 before the war. It must riers gave but 13,000 tons as compared with 2,297,000 before the war. It must be borne in mind that France has had every reason to push the reconstruction of these mines as rapidly as possible, since she has had to pay for English and American coal enormously higher prices than those at which the output of her own mines is sold. There was no military advantage to Germany in the destruction of these mines, just as there was no military advantage in Zeppelin raids over the undefended towns in which the British and French soldiers had left the aged, the women soldiers had left the aged, the women and the children of their families when they went into the army. The United States could have no higher mission, under present circumstances, than to take the lead in a determined effort to outlaw these and other barbarities introduced into modern warefare by the central powers, in violation of every humane tendency of modern civilization.

A Move for Peace.

From the Wichita Eagle. Now that President Harding has shelved our chances of getting into the League of Nations for at least four years, the American people, who fight and pay for our wars, should welcomeny move that holds forth any promise of lessening the likelihood of war. We cannot have the league protection against war at this time; therefore, let us take what we can get, and take it gladly, if only it is a sincere move for Representative John Jacob Rogers, of Massachusetts, has introduced a resolution urging President Harding to invite Great Britain, Japan, France and Italy to send delegates to a conference on disarmament.

While we plan disarmament we must go on building a big navy, says Representative Rogers. Probably fundamentally sound policy. Unless we are to have peace, we must be about building the ships to whip the world. Quite a few ships, that will take.

What we want is peace. Therefore, we hope Representative Rogers is sincere in his proposal, and we hope President Harding will receive it sincerely and thoughtfully.

Hero and Hero Worship

"I am somewhat interested." C. F. S. writes, "in the question of competitive athletics between grade school teams. Some of us have felt that the college attitude toward athletics is being introduced into the high schools, not always with the best results. Where I live we have had this spring basketball contests between schools representing the various towns in the county. These teams were composed of pupils below high school age. There was a championship tournament with all the accomplishments of organized rooting and please to stand behind the team," etc. "Without wishing to degenerate into "I am somewhat interested." C. F. S.

"Without wishing to degenerate into the did logy class that disapple of the everything the youngsters wish to do. I have my own feeling that such highly organized competitive events estween pupils of the seventh and eighth grades pupils of the seventh and eighth grades are not desirable.

"Moreover, it does not seem to me to be a good thing to change the proper duties of a physical instructor to those of an athletic coach whose main purpose is to build up a championship team. Naturally the larger and older pupils, some of them possibly in the grades because of backwardness, are made the heroes of such contests.

Your letter raises one or two interesting questions not directly related to your main theme. One is the advisability of organizing the partisanship of pupils in the grade schools. Most people hold that children of the grade ages are better off when their play activities are left pretty much alone.

Whatever we do, initiative, decision, self-reliance, individuality, inventiveness must be given opportunity for development. Organization can be carried far enough to stifle these qualities. Organization of play activities runs this risk.

ganization of play activities runs this risk.

The machinery of major competitions in college athletics has its harmful qualities as well as its good ones. These harmful qualities are not lost when the same machinery is carried over into high school major athletics. Why extend them to the grades?

Another secondary point which your letter brings out is the mob spirit and hero worship which it builds up behind the high grade feeble minded and the backward boy. Boys of this type rarely get to college. They have neither the capacity nor the appetite for college education. Not many of them are passed or care to be passed into the high school. But their infirmity holds many of them in the grades when they are old enough and strong enough to be in the high school.

Find Queen's Necklace.

From the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. San Francisco—The stolen amber "love necklace," gift of Napolean Bonaparte to Josephine, has been recovered. And with its finding is revealed a tale as intriguing as any of the historic jewel mysteries.

Some twenty-five years ago, the weck-lace was stolen from the Louvre in Paris. An international search was started. The French chamber of deputies offered a reward of $150,000 for its recovery. The French secret service was sent on the trail. But no trace could be found of the historic necklace. And as the years went by, its disappearance was forgotten by all but a few secret service detectives and some exsecret service detectives and some ex-perts on antiques.

About six months ago the necklace

About six months ago the necklace found its way to a curio store in Chinatown here. So little attention was paid it that there is but slight information at hand regarding the identity of the individual who peddled it. It is believed, however, to have been brought into port by a French sailor who sold it without any realization of its value.

And so the Bonaparte beads, unrecognized by tourists and owners, were placed on display in a modest showcase with a price tag of $25 stuck behind them. In the assortment of valuable scarabs and cameos they were over-

Finally, a few weeks ago, a New York couple, tourists in California, bought it. The remainder of the story has been gathered from correspondence chiefly with the Tiffany Company of New York, according to police reports here. Returning home the tourists went to a jewelry firm in Maiden Lane. They worth the $25 paid for them. They were amazed when, a few moments later, a price of $50,000 was offered for the neck-

Why Castoria?

VEARS ago Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups were the remedies in common use for Infants and Children; Castor Gil so nauseating as to be almost impossible and the others all containing Opium in one form or another, but so disguised as to make them pleasant to the taste, yet really to stupify the child and give the appearance of relief from pain.

It required years of research to find a purely vegetable combination that would take the place of these disagreeable, unpleasant and vicious remedies that from habit had become almost universal. This was the inception of, and the reason for, the introduction of Fletcher's Castoria, and for over 30 years it has proven its worth, received the praise of Physicians everywhere and become a household word among mothers.

A remedy ESPECIALLY prepared for Infants and Children and no mother would think of giving to her baby a remedy that she would use for herself, without consulting a physician.

He Objected.

The woman next door was much given to borrowing and had acquired a reputation in the neighborhood. So when one morning she came over to the L. house, eight-year-old Fred watched closely to see what she wished. Blithely she said to his mother, "Oh, dear, Mrs. I., I'm horribly lonesome. May I borrow your baby this morning?"

Then he strenuously objected. And mother, who was busy and willing for the baby to be amused by most anybody that day, expressed her disapproval to his objecting. "But mother," he said earnestly, "you don't want our baby hurt, do you? You know everybody in the neighborhood says Mrs. L. doesn't bring home anything as good as it was when she got it."
