TROUBLE CERTAIN

Youngstown Telegram: Tom Daly, humorist and poet, tells a little story that throws some light on the kind of liquor that is handed out in the drinking places of the metropolis.

A stranger in the city, the story goes, went up to a barkeeper and ordered a drink.

After serving the stranger the bar-keeper immediately grabbed him by the collar and hustled him to the door.

"What'd you put me out for," the stranger demanded, indignantly. "I ain't started nothin' yet."

"I know," the barkeeper replied, "but you are going to in a minute."
