

DRESSMAKER MADE WELL

Followed a Neighbor's Advice and Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Vernon, Tex.—"For three years I suffered untold agony each month with pains in my sides. I found only temporary relief in doctor's medicine or anything else I took until my husband saw an advertisement of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I mentioned it to a neighbor and she told me she had taken it with good results and advised me to try it. I was then in bed part of the time and my doctor said I would have to be operated on, but we decided to try the Vegetable Compound and I also used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. I am a dressmaker and am now able to go about my work and do my housework besides. You are welcome to use this letter as a testimonial as I am always glad to speak a word for your medicine."—Mrs. W. M. STEPHENS, 1103 N. Commerce St., Vernon, Texas.

Dressmakers when overworked are prone to such ailments and should profit by Mrs. Stephen's experience.

Write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass., about your health. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

One of the members of a negro church in Alabama was talking to the minister one day of the temptations Satan placed in one's path, when the pastor grunted impatiently and replied:

"Folks make me tired representin' Satan as runnin' after dem with a pitchfork. De truth is, my friend, dere is so many people pullin' at de devil's cantails dat he ain't got much time to chase anybody."

Get Back Your Health

Are you dragging around day after day with a dull headache? Are you tired and lame mornings—subject to headaches, dizzy spells and sharp, stabbing pains. Then there's surely something wrong. Probably it's kidney weakness! Don't wait for more serious kidney trouble. Get back your health and keep it. For quick relief get plenty of sleep and exercise and use Doan's Kidney Pills. They have helped thousands. Ask your neighbor!

A South Dakota Case

N. G. Davis, Tyndall, S. D., says: "I had a terrible pain in my back and when I stooped over to lift it nearly killed me to raise up. I was used a lot of trouble by having to pass the kidney secretions so often. I had such dizzy spells I fell right over. Seeling Doan's Kidney Pills advertised I bought a box. They soon relieved me and two boxes cured me of all kidney ailments."

Smuts, Colonel House, Irish Peace.

From an Article by Stephen Bonsai, in the New York Times.

The writer of this article, at the time lieutenant colonel of the military intelligence division of the general staff, United States Army, was the American member of the Inter-Allied Mission which, under the leadership of General Smuts and under instructions from the peace conference in Paris, proceeded to southeastern Europe in March, 1919. General Smuts' return to Paris from Budapest was hastened by the approaching Irish crisis provoked by the arrival of the Irish-American delegates in Paris, and the launching of what was known to inner circles at the World congress as the House-Smuts plan. How the semi-official negotiations that ensued were carried on is here disclosed for the first time by one familiar with this plan for the pacification of Ireland, which failed two years ago, but is now being tried out again with better chances of success:

The herculean task which has been tacitly imposed by Lloyd George and the members of the British imperial conference in London upon that wheel horse of world democracy, Jan Christian Smuts, prime minister of South Africa, is one that is at least familiar to this famous negotiator of difficult problems. As a matter of fact, he is merely reassuming a role he was chosen to fill in the spring of 1919 at Paris by Col. E. M. House, of the American peace delegation. It was the arrival of the Irish-American delegates, Messrs. Walsh, Dunn and Ryan, that brought the Irish question upon the carpet of the peace conference. What actually happened after many amusing moves and diplomatic passages, is this: The Irish leaders and the English prime minister did not get together and down to business, as they are happily doing now. They were kept apart, apparently, but only apparently, I think, by a puerile question of etiquette. The Irish-American delegates could not write the mighty little Welshman because they were not so instructed, and Lloyd George—well, he "flinched."

That is what was generally said. But is it true? It seemed to me then, and I am quite certain now, in the light of recent events, that the English prime minister in England by the simple method of launching rumors and contradicting them, and receiving a well-nigh unanimous negative from his home press and parliament, fled away in his mental archives the House-Smuts plan of compromise and pacification, to be drawn out again under more favorable conditions, as now. The American plan for pacification of Ireland did not fail; it was only postponed.

Now Lloyd George wanted to confer with the Irish-American delegates. He, better than any one in Paris, knew how close they were to withdrawal from the Sinn Fein organization. He saw the great opportunity and sought to seize it, but in his own way. He sensed the possible settlement, but he wanted it forced upon him. He told President Wilson, Colonel House and Clemenceau "that as these gentlemen wanted to see him, had indeed expressed this desire repeatedly, and that as they were distinguished American citizens of Irish ancestry or affiliations, and above all evidently men of irreproachable character, he could find no reason why he should not receive them."

Several hours later Mr. Lloyd George was saying to every one in his numerous entourage, sounding them as it were: "These gentlemen in most courteous terms have written me that they would like to confer upon Irish affairs, and it seems to me it would be grossly discourteous not to accede to their request. Besides President Wilson, House and

Germany and the Swindler.
From the Columbus Dispatch.

It was supposed that the past generation had made Germany a nation of hard headed realists, peculiarly able to size up the character of a business proposition. Has the war bred most of the business shrewdness out of her, and left a rather unusual gullibility in its place? It is only a short time since the story of the German "sport banks" came over the cable, revealing a swindle as easy as the Ponzi must have wondered why he wasted his efforts on the New Englanders when so much easier marks were available. Ponzi covered the source of his assumed gains under a cloak of deep mystery, but the "sport bank" swindlers merely proclaimed their intention to make fabulous sums of money by gambling on races and other such events with the thousands paid into their outstretched hands.

A similar scheme in Italy, a decade or two ago, was made the theme of a short story, "Trenta per Cento" (30 per cent.) by Matilde Serao, the well known newspaper woman and novelist of Naples. The German swindlers were not so modest, but offered something like 160 per cent. within a few weeks; and the money flowed in in proportion to the very absurdity of their promises. And now an American, barely out of a German jail for a former swindling scheme, has organized a "firm" on the mere pretense of English and American backing, bought goods extensively on credit, sold them abroad for cash, and escaped over the German borders with the proceeds, leaving Germany the sole loser of jailing his less nimble German partner in the crime.

European money and various United States stocks dropped gently together Monday. A few years ago any statesman in Europe or America would have undertaken to tell all about finance. Now the wise admit they know nothing about it. Germany starts paying billions to France and England and French and English money go down, even more rapidly than German money.

Over here, there was a stock gambling effort to cheer up because the president "was talking disarmament," which would cut down taxation. But somebody asked "what will happen to the poor steel companies if they stop building warships?" And the cheerfulness died out.

Shame on Them.

PERHAPS there are a few mothers who do not know the virtues of Fletcher's Castoria. Perhaps there are a few who know that there are imitations on the market, and knowing this demand Fletcher's. It is to ALL motherhood, then, that we call attention to the numerous imitations and counterfeits that may be set before them.

It is to all motherhood everywhere that we ring out the warning to beware of the "Just-as-good". For over thirty years Fletcher's Castoria has been an aid in the upbuilding of our population; an aid in the saving of babies.

And yet there are those who would ask you to try something new. Try this. Try that. Even try the same remedy for the tiny, scarcely breathing, babe that you in all your robust womanhood would use for yourself. Shame on them.

Children Cry For Fletcher's CASTORIA

Your Friend, the Physician.

The history of all medicines carries with it the story of battles against popular beliefs; fights against prejudice; even differences of opinion among scientists and men devoting their lives to research work; laboring always for the betterment of mankind. This information is at the hand of all physicians. He is with you at a moment's call be the trouble trifling or great. He is your friend, your household counselor. He is the one to whom you can always look for advice even though it might not be a case of sickness. He is not just a doctor. He is a student to his last and final call. His patients are his family and to lose one is little less than losing one of his own flesh and blood.

Believe him when he tells you—as he will—that Fletcher's Castoria has never harmed the slightest babe, and that it is a good thing to keep in the house. He knows.

Hopeless.
Little Grace was met by a strange lady on the street who endeavored to question the child as to her father's first name.
"What does your mother call your father?" was the question first put.
"She calls him my daddy."
"Yes, yes, I know; but when she wants to speak to him, what does she say?"
"Oh, she says, '337, please,'" was the child's reply.
"Yes, yes, I know; but when she tells him to get up in the morning, what does she call him?"
"Oh, she says to be ready in about five minutes."
