John's Discouragement.

Little John sat upon the stairs looking disconsolate.

"What's the matter, Johnny?" asked Cousin Isabel kindly.

"Well, you see, Cousin Isabel, they let me hold the baby on my knee, sometimes, though he can't even hold his head up straight. And they weigh him every single day, but since they began it he's gained only two pounds and three ounces. And I've just been thinking that I'll be an old, old man before that fellow'll be of any use on the team."

PEACE IN IRELAND.

THE world rejoices that the Irish question is at last settled. A running sore of many centuries' standing is thus healed. Britain has immeasurably strengthened herself throughout civilization and especially wherever Irishmen and their descendants are settled. The Irish peace has a peculiar significance for America, whose citizenry embraces millions of Irish blood. The rancor with which Americans of Irish descent have regarded Britain may now be expected to abate, preparing the way for a more wholehearted concord between Britain and the United States. And so a feeling of blessed relief settles over America, as it may be taken for granted, a similar feeling settles over the whole British commonwealth of nations.

And from the settlement there emerges a much greater Lloyd George—great as he has hitherto been. His patience, his courage, his finesse, have been the most potent factors in bringing about an agreement. Spectacularly, just when nearly everyone had given up hope, peace was concluded. It is a typical Lloyd George denouement, surprising, overwhelming.

Of greatest moment to the outside world are not the terms of the agreement—though they are important enough—but the fact that the pact is satisfactory to the Irish in Ireland and the British in Britain. It matters not a whit what a rabid Orangeman in New York or a rabid Sinn Feiner in San Francisco thinks about it. The parties really concerned are those who must live under the settlement.

Ireland, it appears, is to be a free state, with a status resembling somewhat that of Canada. She must bear her share of the national war debt. She must give reasonable guarantees to the unionist minority in southern Ireland. Her legislators must swear allegiance to the king and his successors "in virtue of the common citizenship of Ireland and Great Britain and her adherence to and membership in the group of nations forming the British commonwealth of nations."

Ulster is to be given a month in which to decide whether she will cast her lot with the Irish free state. If she decides adversely a commission will set to work to define her southern boundary so as, presumably, to include in the new free state as many as possible of those portions of Ulster which wish to be so included. Apparently this boundary matter is the whip with which it is hoped to force an agreement from northern Ireland.

The settlement must yet be ratified by the British parliament and the Irish dail. Ulster's ratification is not necessary. If parliament fails to ratify, the British government intimates that it will take the matter to the people.

Signs are not wanting that Ulster will ultimately acquiesce in becoming part of a united Irish nation. Ulster will not be long in finding out that it will be to her advantage economically to belong part and parcel to the Irish state, once the Irish state is functioning.

MORONS AND SEX.

Dear Guy Lee: You may remember that one day last summer you and I walked over town together. Whether you do or not, let me refresh your memory further.

As we crossed the boulevard, a girl was a few feet ahead of us. She wore a skirt, in appearance something like those worn by the Hawaiian girls who dance on the stage. You no doubt know that this kind of a skirt intensifies a certain shaking effect.

You will recall that this girl's skirt was shorter than my description of it. You gave it the once over, because that's what it was there for, and your comment was: Such women are making morons of the men."

"That's what I am writing to you about, Guy Lee. You are so brilliant that you splash all over the paper from disarming conferences to pup shows.

I am never surprised when I find your stunt in the paper. You can rapport a sermon and double as a society editor, and not cause one to turn a hair.

You are grand, high everything else around this place, Guy, but you got this moron business wrong.

Morons, like poets, are born, not made. A moron is a feeble-minded person, and people destined for feeble-mindedness are born with the place already mapped out inside them.

No amount of looking at barelegged ladies could make any one feeble-minded. But that was only one way you are wrong, Guy Lee.

Though you did not say it, your remark plainly indicated that you thought there was some relation between sex considerations and moronism, or feeble-mindedness.

Not so. As a rule, the morons are undersexed rather than oversexed. If you go down to the very bottom of the scale of feeble-mindedness, the subjects have no more sex impulses than has a dead log. And moronism is on the way in that direction.

On the other hand, the man or woman of compelling, masterful mind is apt to be oversexed.

If that is what you are looking for, run down a list of financial wizards, captains of finance, dominating statesmen, political bosses, great queens—only to mention a few groups.

Of course, Guy, a feeble-minded fellow is somewhat more likely to do foolish sex things. Things so foolish that the community decides he must be a nut. But what is more likely?

A feeble-minded fellow is more liable to get caught or, being caught, not to be able to buy his way out with money, power or influence.

Text of British-Irish Treaty.

Article 1.

Ireland shall have the same constitutional status in the community of nations known as the British empire, as Canada, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa, with a parliament having powers to make laws for peace and order and good government in Ireland, and an executive responsible to that parliament, and shall be styled the Irish Free State.

Article 2.

Subject to provisions hereinafter set out, the position of the Irish Free State in relation to the imperial parliament and government and in other ways, shall be that of the Dominion of Canada. The law, practice and constitutional usage governing the relationship of the crown and parliament to the Dominion of Canada shall govern their relationship to the Irish Free State.

Article 3.

The representative of the crown in the Irish Free State shall be appointed in like manner as the governor general of Canada.

Article 4.

Members of the parliament of the Irish Free State shall take an oath swearing allegiance to the constitution of the Irish Free State and the king, in virtue of a common citizenship in Ireland and Great Britain and Ireland's membership in the group of nations forming the British commonwealth.

Article 5.

The Irish Free State assumes its share of the public debt of the United Kingdom and the payment of war pensions in equitable proportion, having regard to the just counter claims of the Irish Free State.

Article 6.

Until an arrangement is made by the British and Irish governments whereby the Irish Free State undertakes to provide her own coastal defense, the British government shall undertake that defense, but shall not prevent the Irish Free State maintenance of vessels necessary for the protection of her revenue and fisheries. A British-Irish conference shall be held five years hence with a view of Ireland's undertaking her own coastal defense.

Article 7.

In peace time and war time the Irish government shall afford the British government harborage and other facilities as may be required for purposes of defense.

Article 8.

With view to the observance of international limitation of armaments if the Irish Free State establishes an army, it shall not exceed Great Britain's army in proportion to population.

Article 9.

British and Irish ports shall be open to each other's ships upon payment of the customary dues.

Article 10.

The Irish Free State agrees to compensate on a basis equally favorable to the act of 1920, all judges, officials, police and so forth who are discharged or retired as a result of the change in government. This shall not apply to police recruited in Great Britain, who shall be paid by the British government.

Article 11.

The powers of the Irish Free State may not be exercised in respect to Ulster, the provisions of the act of 1920 remaining in force as far as they relate to northern Ireland, and no election to the parliament of the Irish Free State from constituencies in Ulster shall be held, unless the northern parliament, by resolutions, favors such elections before the end of one month from the date of the ratification of the treaty.

Article 12.

If before the end of one month from the date of such ratification, Ulster petitions the king opposing elections to the parliament of the Irish Free State, the Irish Free State shall no longer exercise its power in northern Ireland, and the provisions of the home rule act of 1920, including the council of Ireland, shall continue to apply to Ulster, subject to necessary modifications. If such a petition is presented, a commission of three, consisting of one member from the government who shall be chairman, one member from the Irish Free State and one member from Ulster, shall determine the boundaries of northern and southern Ireland.

Article 13.

In accordance with the foregoing article, the powers of the parliament for southern Ireland to elect members to the council of Ireland shall be transferred to the parliament of the Irish Free State when the latter is constituted.

Article 14.

After the expiration of one month, if the petition provided for in article 12 is not presented, Ulster shall continue to exercise the powers conferred upon her by the act of 1920, but in matters where Ulster has no power to legislate under the act of 1920, the parliament of the Irish Free State shall have the same powers as it possesses in respect to the rest of Ireland, subject to provisions hereinafter agreed on.

Article 15.

At any time after the date hereof the government of northern Ireland and the provisional government of southern Ireland, hereinafter constituted, may meet for discussing provisions, subject to which the last of the foregoing article is to operate in the event of no such address as is therein mentioned being presented, and those provisions may include (a) safeguards with regard to patronage in northern Ireland; (b) safeguards with regard to the collection of revenue in northern Ireland; (c) safeguards with regard to import and export duties affecting the trade and industry of northern Ireland; (d) safeguards for the minorities in northern Ireland; (e) settlement of financial relations between northern Ireland and the Irish Free State; (f) establishment and powers of a local militia in northern Ireland and the relation of the defense force of the Irish Free State and of northern Ireland, respectively, and if at any such meeting provisions are agreed to, the same shall have effect as if they were included amongst the provisions subject to which the powers of parliament and of the government of the Irish Free State are to be exercisable in northern Ireland under article 14 hereof.

Article 16.

Neither the parliament of the Irish Free State, nor the parliament of northern Ireland shall make any law so as either directly or indirectly to endow any religion or prohibit or restrict the free exercise thereof, or give any preference or impose any disability on the account of religious belief or religious status, or affect prejudicially the right of any child to attend school receiving public money without attending the religious instructions of the school, or make any discrimination as respects state aid between schools under the management of the different religious denominations, or divert from any religious institution any of its property except for public utility purposes and on the payment of compensation.

Article 17.

By way of provisional arrangement for the administration of southern Ireland during the interval between the date hereof and the constitution of a parliament and a government of the Irish Free State in accordance therewith, steps shall be taken forthwith for summoning a meeting for summoning members of parliament elected for constituencies in southern Ireland since the passing of the government of Ireland act in 1920 and for constituting a provisional government. And the British government shall take such steps as may be necessary to such provisional government the powers and machinery requisite for the discharge of its duties, provided every member of such provisional government shall have signified in writing his or her acceptance of the instrument. But this arrangement shall not continue in force beyond the expiration of 12 months.

Article 18.

This instrument shall be submitted forthwith by his majesty's government and by the Irish signatories to a meeting summoned for the purpose of members elected to sit in the house of commons of southern Ireland, and if approved, it shall be ratified by the necessary legislation.

Where Quality Won.

From the New York Herald.

It costs time and money for American mills and factories to turn out export products which represent highest quality and workmanship. But the policy of quality first pays in the end.

An incident has just been closed in Argentina with the rather surprising climax of a presidential decree awarding an order for 25 locomotives and a large quantity of spare parts to an American company. The value of the order is $6,500,000. An order of the same size has been awarded to an American car building concern.

German firms had submitted several bids cutting their prices 25 per cent under the American quotation. But the reputation of the American firms, their ability to make prompt deliveries and to meet exacting specifications, won the order. Instead of brokering the contract and awarding it to the German company at a lower price the presidential decree gave it unqualified approval.

This incident proves what has so often been preached to American manufacturers; quality is the key which opens world markets and keeps them open.

King George, war with Ireland being over, immediately issued a proclamation freeing all political prisoners interned in Ireland. Many of them were accused of murder and were proud to admit that they had fired on English troops. This act may interest our officials that are keeping old Eugene Debs in jail because, a little prematurely as Wells points out, he worked for the universal peace for which the Washington conference is now working with the United States government back of it.

CHOICE BETWEEN TWO LOVES

Can One Wonder That Malvina Turtledove Hesitated When It Came to a Showdown?

Malvina Turtledove wept bitterly. Those dear, bright blue eyes were in danger of being washed clearer and bluer still.

She was in love! Then she dressed hurriedly, in preparation for Jack's expected visit. Promptly at eight he arrived.

"Jack," she breathed, "I am so worried."

"My pet, my angel, what is it?" asked Jack, in great concern.

"I have got to give one of you up, and I don't know which I love best. Can't I?" the maiden wept.

"No!" returned Jack, determinedly. "You must choose between us—be or I!"

"Jack," she wept, "show me some mercy!"

But he showed her none, and so, with a last look of love, Malvina threw her Pomeranian, Bob, out of the window and said:

"Jack, I am yours!"

ATTORNEY SURELY A WONDER

But Old Ducky's Admiration Must Have Been Embarrassing Under the Circumstances.

In Alabama they tell of a prosecuting attorney who was so uniformly successful with his cases that he became both the terror of evil-doers in the vicinity and the admiration of all, especially the dusky portion of the population.

Upon his withdrawal from office he was at once sought out by those charged with crime. Much to his disgust, the first two cases that he defended resulted in the conviction of his clients.

An aged ducky, named Joe Clinton, who had watched his prosecutions with wonder and who looked on with equal amazement now he conducted the defense, met the attorney just after his second defeat.

"Mistah Cal," said the old chap, in awed tones, "yo' shore is a wonder. No matter which side you is on, they goes to the pen just the same."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

No Offense.

Chairman Lasker of the shipping board said, in an interview:

"These men are taking needless offense. They were taking offense where none is intended."

"A tall, gaunt, vinegar-faced woman walked into Wawa station one day and said to the ticket agent:

"Gimme a ticket for Chester Heights."

"Single?" asked the agent.

"The woman's eyes flashed steely sparks.

"None o' yer darn business," she hissed, "Gost knows, though, I might have parried a dozen times over if I'd been willin' to grubstake some shiftless, putty-faced monkey like yerself."

'N Ev'rything.

"My own!" he exclaimed, as they were starting on their wedding journey. "Does it make you happy to know that you are mine—all mine—forever?"

"Yes, it makes me awfully happy," she replied. "Now I can eat caddy without being afraid of getting fat, and have a charge account and everything, can't I?"

Couldn't Fool Him.

An Indianapolis woman was visiting her three-year-old grandson, and one day saw him standing before the mirror looking at himself, and saying:

"Yes, that's me."

"Thomas," said grandmother, "you should say, 'That's I.'"

"Well, it might be I, but it looks like me."

Surprise for Mother.

Marjory—Mamma, were you at home when I was born?

Mother—No, darling. I was at grandma's in the country.

Marjory—Wasn't you awfully surprised when you heard about it?

DIFFERENT, OFF THE STAGE

Master Crook Had to Seek Ordinary Mortal to Perform What Would Seem Simple Task.

Dareham Drake, the world-famous film villain, had had a very busy day at the studios.

In the performance of part nineteen of "The Master Crook" he had deftly cut open with his electric saw five formidable safes, mastered swiftly the mysterious combinations of nine more, and with a nonchalant air had picked the lock of his prison cell.

And now, his day's work finished, he breathed a sigh of relief as he alighted from his car and reached the door of his flat.

It was locked. Anxiously he searched every pocket of his clothes for the latchkey, but failed to unearth it.

"Here's a fix!" he groaned.

After another vain search the Master Crook walked around to the nearest locksmith's shop, fong a $20 bill into the counter and begged the unshaven man in charge to come and open his "blessed" door!

MOTHER! MOVE

CHILD'S BOWELS WITH CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP

Hurry, mother! Even a sleek child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup" and it never fails to open the bowels. A teaspoonful today may prevent a sick child tomorrow. If constipated, bilious, feverish, fretful, has cold, colic, or if stomach is sour, tongue coated, breath bad, remember a good cleansing of the little bowels is often all that is necessary.

Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.—Advertisement.
