SIMMONS TRIAL IN JULY.

Walter R. Simmons, charged with the murder of Frank Pahl of Spencer, May 14, will be tried at Butte at a special term of district court July 17. Simmons was brought to O'Neill from Lincoln Sunday afternoon and taken to Butte Monday where his preliminary hearing was held and the date of the trial determined upon. A large crowd attended the hearing Monday, but there was no disorder or threat of lynching. The preliminary hearing was before Judge Dickson.

SENATOR HITCHCOCK MEETING DISAPPOINTS DEMOCRATS

Local democratic leaders are disappointed over the address of United States Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock at the K. C. hall last Saturday night and also over the comparatively small attendance to hear the distinguished gentleman from Omaha. Senator Hitchcock is one of the several candidates for the democratic nomination for senator this year, and because of his failure to vote as a senator on many of the important questions pending and decided during his incumbency, his unalterable and offensive opposition to woman suffrage, his indifference to the cause of the oppressed Irish people and his neglect of the agricultural interests of his constituency, is apt to be defeated for the nomination at the primary by a candidate of the agricultural and allied interests. His audience Saturday evening just comfortably filled the K. C. hall, but there were plenty of seats vacated during the entire evening and more became vacant during the course of the address as several rock-ribbed democrats became sleepy and yawning departed for home. The scarcity of women in the audience was very noticeable and much commented upon, being attributed to the senator's anti-suffrage record.

Senator Hitchcock was introduced by Judge J. J. Harrington, who when he arose to call the meeting to order spied, through the open doors, a number standing on the sidewalk in front of the hall. The judge urged them to come in and then introduced the senator. Senator Hitchcock in his opening remarks thanked the people for permitting him to serve in the United States senate during this history making epoch and stated that he would confine his remarks to national issues for the coming campaign, which he declared as yet were not clearly defined. About the only state issue, he said, was a reduction of taxes and public expenditures. Then he referred to the republican majority of more than seven million in the last presidential campaign, saying that it needed no explanation, but that a little discussion would do no harm. He neglected to discuss the election however, but at once entered upon a tariff talk as a pronounced opponent of the pending tariff bill. He blamed present conditions on the republican tariff, which he said hasn't yet been passed and declared that a number of the high schedules were for the express purpose of raising the price of commodities to the consumer. He illustrated this contention by saying that the United States is the largest producer of wood alcohol and inks in the world, and that the importation of inks into this country amounted to less than $30,000 annually. A high tariff on inks and wood alcohol was wanted he said, not because the home producers of these feared foreign competition, but to enable them to raise the prices of the commodities with the assurance that foreign competition would be impossible. Then, taking up wheat, the senator told how the United States was the largest grower of wheat and that it was the leading exporter of the grain. It had nothing to fear from foreign exports of wheat he insisted and consequently the high tariff the republicans proposed placing on wheat would not raise the price of wheat the American farmer had to sell a single cent. The wheat schedule, he insisted, was but a bill of buncombe intended to fool the agricultural interests. As a logician the senator did not attempt to explain how with identical conditions a high tariff would raise the price of wood alcohol and ink and depress the price of wheat. The senator did give a very interesting review of his international bank project for the improvement of conditions, this part of the address being from a non-political standpoint, but the other portions of the talk were dry, uninteresting and not convincing even to the most ardent democrat and there was nothing in the talk to alarm a republican or entuse the most optimistic democrat. It is no exaggeration to state that a number of good democrat actually went to sleep during the talk.

When the senator concluded Thomas Lannigan of Greeley county, butted into the meeting. Mr. Lannigan, who is a candidate for the democratic nomination for congress from the Sixth district, drove up from home with the sheriff of Greeley county and on promise to only say a few words was introduced by Judge Harrington. While Mr. Lannigan didn't say much he talked loud, said Holt county was a nice county and its people good scouts, told one or two witty stories and awoke those in the audience who had been slumbering. This is the second meeting for Senator Hitchcock that Mr. Lannigan has horned in on and it kept the senator's friends busy after the meeting explaining that Mr. Lannigan's presence is not to be taken by any others who might want to run for congress as democrats, as an indication that the Hitchcock machine is behind the Greeley county man.

County Surveyor M. F. Norton Thursday completed his filings as a candidate on both the republican and democratic tickets for the nomination for county surveyor.

A regular cyclone passed north of O'Neill last Thursday afternoon demolishing the barn and other outbuildings on the F. J. Dishner farm six miles northeast of town. The buildings on the Mike Paul Sullivan place were also wrecked with the exception of the house. A boy at the former place was cut by glass from a broken window but was not seriously wounded. The storm seemed to disappear after leaving the Sullivan place. The outbuildings on the Martin Stanton farm were also badly damaged by the same storm.

Fight fans of northern Nebraska are going to see one of the greatest fist feasts ever staged in this part of the country next Wednesday night, when Jerry Vokac, the fighting Bohemian from Verdigré, will attempt to knock the block off Andy Schmader of Louisville, while Mr. Schmader is busily engaged in attempting to massacre Mr. Vokac. It will be a real scrumptious affair as both men are heavyweights and very heavy hitters and neither has a very friendly feeling toward the other. Jerry, who is the heavy weight champion of Nebraska because no other heavy weight has yet been able to prove that he isn't, needs no introduction to lovers of the boxing game in this community. He is a real one. Schmader is known as one of the fastest and most furious heavyweight boxers in the central west, and the bout will be full of action from the sound of the first gong until the clang of the signal for the close of the tenth if the time keeper doesn't have to clang it sooner because of the laying away of one of the two contestants. Before the main affair Pete Deitrich of Atkinson, who so unmercifully laced Bird Head, the Knox county Indian at the last boxing exhibition, will stage a six round preliminary with Leon Devereaux of north Grattan. Both of these men are middle-weights and are very fast. The combination card will be the most thrilling one ever witnessed in O'Neill and the advance sale of seats over at Reardon's drug store already is exceedingly heavy, reservations having been made from Norfolk to Chadron. Most of Knox county is coming over to watch Jerry defend his title and possibly annihilate the contender.

NOTES FROM THE NORTHEAST.

Clark Edson and family of Middle Branch, were Sunday visitors at the Frank Butterfield home near Knoxville.

Annual School meeting in District No. 49 elected T. W. Hendrick, director for two years to fill vacancy; Flora Knight, moderator, for three years. Did not vote any tax as the district has funds for all immediate expenses. Money on hand for building purposes to be placed in bank on time certificate.

Many farmers are planting corn, especially listed corn. The unusual heavy rain of June 8th washed the fields and in many places covered the corn.

M. H. Newgard, of Omaha, representing the Nebraska Lightning Rod Co., was in this part of the county Monday and Tuesday. Floyd Wertz, local agent, was with Mr. Newgard canvassing this part of Holt county.

Lysle Wertz was in Page Monday returning home Monday evening.

Your correspondent and family were Sunday visitors at the J. S. Noble home. Ice cream, strawberries with cream and sugar and cake was served. Mr. Editor, it looked good to your correspondent to see a large pan full of red, delicious, large strawberries, have your dish refilled until taste and appetite was satisfied. The hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Noble was thoroughly enjoyed by everyone present.

The elements turned loose on this part of Holt county Thursday, June 8th, about 4:30 p. m. It left destruction of crops, fruit and forest trees, pastures, hay and some live stock. The hail storm was two miles wide. Hail on the Wertz farm was six inches deep on the level and lay in places the following day. On this farm alone the loss is estimated at $2,000. The most destructive in this part of Holt county in its history. We are not informed how far in Knox county it extended.

The county line bridge across the North Branch of Verdigré near the F. W. Phillips' farm, was washed out Thursday night. A few of the piling on one side were left, but part of those were broken. The wreck was found about two miles below. This bridge was located on the mail route. Small bridges were also washed out.

MISS MARGARET DORSEY WEDS.

(Lusk (Wyo.) Herald-Standard) A wedding ceremony was solemnized in Lusk Saturday evening, June 3, 1922, when Miss Margaret Dorsey became the bride of Tom O. Miller.

The ceremony was performed by Father George, of Douglas, in the new bungalow home which the bridal couple have just finished furnishing at the corner of Third street and Diamond avenue.

The friends who witnessed the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Walter Farrell, Miss Louise Larson and Glen Cates.

The bride is well known in Lusk, having lived here for several years, where she has been an excellent teacher in the public school. She is the daughter of Mrs. Frank Hanson of Hat Creek.

The groom needs no introduction to the people of Lusk, having lived here all his life. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Miller, of Lusk. After graduating from the Lusk high school, he attended the state university at Laramie. Since then he has been in partnership with his father in the real estate firm of Miller & Miller, holds the office of town clerk and is known as a reliable, energetic young man with prospects for a bright future.

The many friends of this young couple join with the Herald-Standard in wishing them bon-voyage over the sea of wedded life.
