Lincoln Neb., Feb. 27.—Capital stock, surplus and undivided profits of state and national banks, loan, trust and investment companies in Nebraska must be assessed and taxed as intangible property under the revenue act of 1921, according to a decision handed down by the supreme court today. The effect of the decision is to reduce bank assessments and taxes for 1922 to one fourth of the amount fixed by assessors and board of equalization throughout the state and charged against the banks and similar financial institutions on the tax list. In an opinion written by Judge Day, the supreme court grants an injunction asked by the State Bank of Omaha vs. the county treasurer and other officials of Douglas county to prevent their collecting more than one fourth of the regular rate of tax. It is based on a federal court decision in the famous Richmond case of several years ago, declaring that no state could tax stock of national banks at a higher rate than other capital in private hands is taxed.

FOURTIETH ANNIVERSARY.

The Christian Home Orphanage, Council Bluffs, Iowa, will have rounded out forty years of service in behalf of orphan and destitute children on March 16th. This great institution, known in all parts of the country, has been built up and maintained wholly by the voluntary contributions of the people. It has no other means of support. It cares for a daily average of more than two hundred children, received from all parts of the country, and also conducts a hospital department, a department for aged, dependent women, and a department for the crippled and deformed. At present a most serious epidemic of flu has stricken the Home, more than one hundred being sick many of them seriously. Funds are badly needed to help meet the expense of this onslaught, and to help keep the work from debt. Every department of the institution is crowded, and appeals are made to the people to help. It is hoped that a Fortieth Anniversary offering to this work will relieve a pressing situation which, if long continued, will work serious injury to the Orphanage. Send something to help these little ones. Address The Christian Home Orphanage, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

ECONOMY FOR THE SHOPPER.

(By Mrs. Harlan H. Allen.)

When you go to buy meat, there are certain pieces that should never be asked for by the pound or piece.

For instance, you should not say to the butcher, "Give me two pounds of porterhouse steak," nor should you say, "Give me 30 cents worth of pork chops."

The way to buy steak is by the cut, and you should always specify to the butcher the thickness that you desire. For example, you may ask for an inch-thick sirloin steak or a two-inch porterhouse steak, and so on. A steak should never be cut less than an inch thick, but it may be from one to two and one-half inches thick, according to the personal preference of the family to be served. One of the commonest and most flagrant mistakes of cooks is to order steaks cut one-half inch or less in thickness, and then fry them to a tough and leathery mass. Any steak worthy of the name should be cut very thick.

Chops should be bought according to the number of persons to be served. The rule is, a chop or two to each person.

A rib roast should be ordered by specifying the number of ribs. Thus, you would ask for a rib roast containing two, three or more ribs, depending on the size of your family.

Roasts from any other part of the beef, such as rump roast or chuck, may be bought by the pound. They can be cut into almost any size desired, without working a disadvantage to either the dealer or the customer.

When buying round steak, it should be purchased by thickness, the same as sirloin or any other steaks. But frequently an entire cut is more than you need to get. In that case specify that you want an "upper round" or "lower round." The lower round should come cheaper.

As we have already said, the quantity of meat to purchase depends, of course, on the number of people served. But sometimes it is economy to get more than you will need for a single meal. A large roast always cooks up better than a small one, because it does not dry out so much in the process and is a saving in both fuel and your time, as the part that is left over can be served in a variety of ways for other meals.
