GARTNER CASE APPEALED TO SUPREME COURT
(Lincoln Journal.)

William J. Gartner is seeking the powerful aid of the supreme court to right a wrong he says was done him when Judge Dickson instructed a jury in Holt county that he did not have any cause of action against the Northwestern railroad. William is quite sure that he has a real lawsuit, and desires the expert opinion of the supreme judges.

Gartner sued for $25,000 damages, and the court told the jury that if he had been led to believe that the train had stopped at Inman by what the train crew had told him, he was entitled to recover. The jury gave him a verdict for $15,000. The company asked for a new trial, charging among other things that Gartner had not told the truth. Judge Dickson ordered a new trial, and when it was in progress he sustained a motion of the railroad company for an instructed verdict on the ground that the proof did not show liability.

GOLD IS USED ON POTTERY

Its Value for Gilding Lies in Its Resistance to Oxidization—Not Expensive.

Gold is used on pottery either for gilding or as a coloring agent in glazes. Its value lies in its resistance to oxidation and the fineness of the layer that can be produced, for which reason it is not an expensive stain. The aid of a flux is employed in application and mercurous oxide is found to reduce the amount of gold required. The following mixture is used:
Fifteen parts of black mercurous oxide, 2.5 parts of basic bismuth nitrate and 0.3 parts of melted borax. The addition of three parts of silver carbonate to this composition produces a greenish tint. After firing in the muffle the gold has a matt surface and must be polished with bloodstone or agate. A cheaper process, which does not require polishing after the burn, is the use of glanzold or Meissen gold, a preparation of gold solution with an organic medium such as turpentine, lavender oil or a balsam or resin. As a coloring agent in glazes, gold produces shades from violet to purple and red, of which the best known is purple of Cassius, a lake of precipitated gold with metallic hydroxide, preferably that of tin, which was formerly regarded as a definite compound. The presence of ammonia or alum in the stannous chloride solution produces shades from dark to rose purple and the tint may be further modified by the substitution of antimony or magnesia for tin. Choice of flux materially influences the color.—Washington Star.

TWO THEORIES PUT FORTH

Scientists Have Disagreed as to the Composition of the Chemical Elements.

It is an old question, "Are the seventy-odd chemical elements really elementary, or are they compounded of something still more elementary?" In the light of the discoveries of the last few years about radium one authority recurs to a theory, advocated by him many years ago, that as the planets are evolved out of the original nebula which gave birth to the solar system the chemical elements themselves were also evolved out of something far less complex than themselves. The fact that existing nebulae are very simple in composition, while stars in various stages of development exhibit more and more complexity until in solidified bodies, like the earth, a great number of chemical elements with a myriad of compounds are found, is regarded as strongly supporting this theory. The phenomenon of radium leads to the additional suggestion that as in the development of the heavenly bodies we seem to see the growth of the elements, so in radioactivity we witness their decay.—Exchange.
