The Adventures of Raggedy Ann and Raggedy Andy

by Johnny Gruelle

Raggedy Ann and Raggedy Andy and the kind Cookie people planned fooling Hookie the Goblin. You see, Hookie had captured the nice, kind hearted Snitznoodle and had him tied to a chair. Then too, little Weekey was up on the roof of the Goblin's house and could not get down; it was much too high, and he would get a hard bump if he jumped.

So Raggedy Ann, who always seemed able to think of ways out of difficulties planned to disguise herself and go to Hookie's house to sell something. Then, when Hookie opened the door, Raggedy Ann and the Cookie people were to rush through the door and rescue the nice, kind Snitznoodle.

Raggedy Ann disguised herself as a Witch, then followed by all her friends she went to Hookie's house. Raggedy Ann carried a little basket on her arm and in it were 11 cookies, six cream puffs and nine jelly tarts. Goblins are quite fond of these things, and no wonder, they are very nice. When Raggedy Ann and the Cookie people were safely hid at the side of the Goblin's door, Raggedy Ann walked up to the house crying, so that the Goblin would hear, "Nice fresh cream puffs! Nice fresh cookies covered with candy icing! Nice fresh jelly tarts! Who wishes to buy. Who wishes to try?"

Hookie the Goblin was upstairs teasing the nice, kind Snitznoodle. "Aha, Mister Snitznoodle," the Goblin was saying, "Just as soon as I can borrow a sausage grinder I shall make Snitznoodle sausage! Yum, yum!"

The nice, kind Snitznoodle did not reply to Hookie the Goblin, because he knew it would do no good! "Goblins are mean creatures!" the Snitznoodle thought, "So why should I quarrel with him?"

"Listen!" the Goblin cried. "I haven't said a word!" the Snitznoodle said.

"I know it!" the Goblin replied, "But you might say something, and I wish to hear what that person is saying!"

"I did not intend saying anything!" the Snitznoodle said, "So you may listen all you wish!"

"Will you please be still?" the Goblin said.

"Yes, I will!" the Snitznoodle replied.

Of course, the Goblin could not hear what Raggedy Ann was saying when both he and the Snitznoodle were talking, so he went down stairs and opened a crack in the door. "What are you saying, Witch?" the Goblin asked of Raggedy Ann.

"I am selling nice fresh cream puffs, jelly tarts and lovely cookies with candy icing on them!"

Suddenly the Goblin opened the door, and catching Raggedy Ann, pulled her inside the house, slamming the door behind.

The Goblin was so quick, Raggedy Ann and his Cookie friends had no time to jump inside. Then the Goblin poked his head out of the upstairs window and laughed. "You thought you could fool me, didn't you, I knew it was Raggedy Ann by her shoe button eyes! Now, I have the Snitznoodle, little Weekey and Raggedy Ann captured, and it was I who fooled you!" Then the mean little creature shut the window and Raggedy Ann and the Cookie people walked sadly away for there was no need in staying to listen to the Goblin making fun of his captives.

Hookie the Goblin had wanted to borrow a sausage grinder so that he could make Snitznoodle sausage.

The nice, kind Snitznoodle was tied to a chair in the Goblin's house. And Raggedy Ann was also a prisoner in the Goblin's house.

And little Weekey was up on top of the Goblin's house and could not get down. Now Raggedy Ann stood waiting at the Goblin's door with Mrs. Cookie, food chopper under his arm. A food chopper and a sausage grinder are almost the same thing.

Raggedy Ann could hardly wait until Hookie opened the iron door. He could hear the Goblin running down stairs, "clippity! clippity!" his footsteps getting nearer all the time.

Finally, Raggedy Ann could hear the Goblin unlocking the iron door. The key went, "click! click!" then the door was opened just a teeny weeny crack and the Goblin peeked out with one eye.

Raggedy Ann held the sausage grinder behind his back.

"Are you trying to fool me, Raggedy Ann?" the Goblin asked, "I do not see any sausage grinder!"

"That is because you are only peeking out with one eye!" Raggedy Ann said, "How can you expect to see a great big sausage grinder with only one eye? Everyone knows it takes two eyes to see a sausage grinder!"

Then Hookie, the Goblin opened the door a little more so that his long nose stuck out.

"Hold the sausage grinder up close so that I can see it before I open the door and give you a hard thump."

"He is well-meaning, but commonplace," commented Miss Cayenne; "he is one of those people who honestly believe that 'what a beautiful sunset' is an original remark."

Misunderstood.
"Has Jones any hard stuff in his cellar?"
"Yes; a trifle over a ton."

FIRES FOLLOW COLD WEATHER

Overheated Furnaces Cause Scores of Alarms in Chicago Friday

Universal Service
Chicago, Jan. 4.—Temperature of zero and below held sway over the country Friday. No relief was in sight Friday night. Suffering increased.

A hundred families were driven from their homes by fire in Chicago alone. Many families in other cities throughout the northwest and middle-west suffered the same misfortune. The fires were due to overheated stoves and furnaces in an attempt to fight back the biting cold.

It was 33 below zero at Minot, N. D., the coldest place on the map, while St. Paul had 18 below, Sioux Falls, S. D., 20, and other cities reporting from 10 to 30 below. Chicago escaped with three above, although the weather bureau had forecast 5 below. Below zero will be reached in Chicago before morning, it was predicted.

Innumerable cases of frozen hands and feet and frostbitten faces were reported.

Mrs. Agnes Jewell was found wandering homeless on the streets here. Her hands and feet were frozen when she was taken to a police station and thence to an emergency hospital. Charles Mack of Brooklyn was taken to the county hospital with badly frozen ears.

Mrs. Marie Ramsay and her two children were rescued from their burning home by firemen.

Records of the fire department showed 102 fires during the last 24 hours, all traceable to the cold.

Scores of homeless sought relief in police stations and public buildings. Chicago's municipal lodging house was being refitted to care for 700 wanderers. Patrolmen searched doorways for men and boys seeking slight protection from the cold. Many were found, nearly frozen, and sent to headquarters.

He told officials that he read of the charges in the newspapers, so he came into the state and surrendered, rather than put the officials to unnecessary trouble.

He appeared with his attorney and was released on a $2,000 bond, which he signed. J. J. Hastings, who is charged jointly with Townley, has not been arrested.

Diameter of Universe Is 10,000 Milky Ways
The diameter of the universe is the length of 10,000 milky ways. And this milky way yardstick is 30,000 times the distance that light, traveling 186,000 miles per second, covers in one year. Light comes from the sun to the earth in about eight minutes.

This is the conclusion of Prof. Archibald Henderson of the University of North Carolina, given in a communication in Science, the official organ of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. He assumed that space and the universe are constructed according to Einstein's general relativity theory.

"It would take a ray of light, traveling at the rate of 186,000 miles per second, 1,000 million years to go around the universe," Professor Henderson says. "To go around the universe it would take the fastest airplane three quadrillion years; the fastest automobile five and a half quadrillion years, and an express train, traveling at the rate of sixty miles an hour, eleven quadrillion years."

Romans Made Bridgework of Gold and Capped Teeth

There are specimens in the museums in Italy which show that the Romans capped teeth and did bridgework of various kinds in gold, and probably also used gold wire in various ways for the fixation of loose teeth.

The Romans transplanted teeth and a slave maiden was sometimes required to give up a tooth to be implanted in her mistress's mouth, after she had lost one for any reason.

In one of the laws of the Twelve Tables at Rome, the date of which is not later than 450 B. C., it was forbidden to bury gold with a corpse, except such gold as was fastened to the teeth.—Detroit News.

No Kissing in South Seas.
Another "close-up" finale is being attacked. The South Sea Islands are often the scene of romantic stories and scenarios, but a traveler from there has remarked on the fact that there are no customs there which include kissing among the savages.
