The Adventures of Raggedy Ann and Raggedy Andy

by Johnny Gruelle

"Ha, ha, ha, Raggedy Andy," the funny old magician said as he turned from peeping through the key hole to where Raggedy Andy hung by his waist on the pot hook in the magician's fire place. "Harry Hoolygooly took a bite of my magic pan cake and he turned into a squeaky pig and has run away into the bushes. Pretty soon, the fat policeman will take a bite of his pan cake and he will turn into a squeaky pig too. Then I shall run to Harry Hoolygooly's house and take the magical stick!"

"You are a very mean person to change Harry Hoolygooly into a squeaky pig!" Raggedy Andy said. "How would you like to be changed into a pig and have to live in mud puddles?"

"What I want is the magical burning stick!" the old Magician said. "Then I can have a fire any time I wish without having to build one to cook my magic potions!"

The funny old man went again to the door and peeped through the key hole. "I wonder why the fat policeman doesn't eat his pan cake?" he said.

"I hope he doesn't even take one little teeny weeny bite!" Raggedy Andy said. This made the funny old magician very angry and he opened the door a little way and called to the fat policeman who sat out in under a tree reading from a little red book. "Why don't you eat your pan cake?"

"Because!" the nice fat policeman replied, "I am busy reading how to become a detective so that I can find a way to catch you and arrest you!"

"Besides, it is a magic pan cake and will change me into a pig if I eat it, just as it did Harry Hoolygooly!"

"Silly!" the funny old man said. "Don't you know that the magical pan cake will make you a fine detective? Just you take a bite and see! Then you won't care to read the little red book!"

"Honest, won't I have to read the little red book if I eat the pan cake?" the nice fat policeman asked.

Raggedy Andy wanted to call to the policeman and tell him not to eat it, for Raggedy Andy knew the funny old man was trying to fool the nice fat policeman, but Raggedy Andy could not yell loud enough.

"Honest!" the old Magician said, "If you eat the pan cake, you will not read the little red book!"

"Then I shall eat the pan cake!" the policeman said, "But remember, if you are telling me a story, I shall have to arrest you, sure pop!"

And the nice fat policeman found the pan cake which he had thrown away into the bushes and took a bite. "Ha, ha, ha!" the old Magician chuckled as he kicked his heels in the air. "See him run! He turned into a nice little fat squeaky pig! Whee! Now I can run over to Harry Hoolygooly's house and get the magical Burning Stick. And leaving Raggedy Andy hanging upon the pot hook in the chimney, the mean old Magician ran out the door and through the woods towards the home of the Hoolygoolys.

All the time when Raggedy Andy was hanging by his waist, caught upon the pot hook in the chimney of the Magician's house, and while the nice fat policeman and Harry Hoolygooly were out in front where they were finally changed into the squeaky little pigs, Raggedy Ann was at Mrs. Hoolygooly's house helping her make lovely doughnuts and pies and cookies and cream puffs. But long ago, they had finished doing this and they could not imagine what could be keeping Harry Hoolygooly, Raggedy Andy and the nice kind fat policeman so long.

The policeman had gone home to get his night so that he could stay and make his home with the kind Hoolygoolys and Raggedy Andy and Harry Hoolygooly had gone with him.

"They should have been back a long time ago!" Mrs. Hoolygooly said, "I am beginning to feel worried! If they do not come in a few minutes, I shall go see what is keeping them!"

"Do you think they could have found an ice cream mud puddle and have stopped to play in it?" Raggedy Ann asked.

Before Mrs. Hoolygooly could reply, a little squeaky pig dressed in Harry Hoolygooly's clothes came running up on the front porch and into the house.

"Mercy me!" Mrs. Hoolygooly cried, "What do you mean by running into my nice clean house?" and catching up the broom she was just about to give the little pig a whack when Raggedy Ann cried, "Stop, Mrs. Hoolygooly! That must be Harry Hoolygooly and he has been changed into a little squeaky pig!"

The little pig nodded his head to Raggedy Ann and Mrs. Hoolygooly as if to say, "Yes, that is true!"

"Oh, dear!" Raggedy Ann cried, "Slightly Nervous From the Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph."

An English barrister, after a particularly trying day, came home with his nerves on edge, and at once sought refuge in his own study, well away from the noises of the household machinery. He sat down by his fire and was gradually getting calmed down when the cat which had been sitting there, too, got up slowly and walked across the room.

The master turned on her and said indignantly: "Now what are you stamping around here for?"

In a "get out the vote" campaign, put on in Detroit during a recent election, 125 telephone operators inquired of 10,000 subscribers whether they had voted yet.

"The policeman has been changed into a pig too. Now we can expect Raggedy Andy to come running along in a moment squealing too!"

But Raggedy Andy did not come along; instead there came the funny old man, who was really a mean Magician.

Raggedy Ann quickly closed the doors and locked them, then she took Mrs. Hoolygooly's broom and waited. Pretty soon the Magician walked up and knocked upon the front door. Then he knocked upon the back door. But as no one answered, he came and poked his head into the window, just as Raggedy Ann brought the broom down real hard.

"Oh! Excuse me!" Raggedy Ann said, "Did I hit you on the head?"

"Yes you did!" the Magician howled. "And it doesn't feel good either!"

"Then you mustn't come snooping into other persons' windows!" Raggedy Ann laughed as she closed and locked the window.

"I shall sit here until you give me the magical burning stick!" the Magician shouted as he rubbed his head. "Then you will sit there a very long time!" Raggedy Ann laughed as she gave each of the little pigs a lot of cakes and cookies.

The mean old magician sat upon the Hoolygooly's front porch. "And I shall sit here until you let me in so that I can take the Magical Burning Stick!" he cried.

"You shall never get it!" Raggedy Ann replied from the inside where she and Mrs. Hoolygooly were feeding cookies and cream puffs to two little pigs. The two little pigs were Harry Hoolygooly and the nice fat, kind policeman. Raggedy Ann and Mrs. Hoolygooly recognized them because, although they were little pigs, they still wore their own clothes.

"And if you do not open the door pretty soon, I shall change you all into little squeaky pigs!" the mean Magician howled through the key hole.

"How did you change Harry Hoolygooly and the nice kind, fat policeman into pigs?" Raggedy Ann asked.

"Ha, ha, ha!" the magician laughed, "I made two magical pancakes and as soon as they took a bite, they changed into pigs!"

Raggedy Ann did not say anything to Mrs. Hoolygooly, but she saw a piece of the magical pancake sticking from one little pig's pocket.

She took this, and without the others noticing, she mixed it right in the cream of a great large cream puff.

Raggedy Ann put the cream puff into her pocket and went to the door. "Will you change Harry Hoolygooly and the nice policeman back into their own real selves!" she asked the Magician through the key hole.

"Indeed I shan't unless you give me the Magical Burning Stick first!" the Magician replied.

"Oh, no!" Raggedy Ann said, "If we should give you the Burning Stick first, then you would run away and not change them into their own shape!"

"Then if you will open the door and put the Magical Burning Stick where I can see it, I will come in and change them. Then you can give me the Burning Stick."

Raggedy Ann put all the cookies and cream puffs away except the one she had in her pocket. This she put in a dish and placed it upon the table.

Then she got the Magical Burning Stick from the kitchen and placed it in the corner of the room.

Then she went and unlocked the door. "Come in!" she said to the Magician. "Here are the two little pigs! Change them back into the Policeman and Harry Hoolygooly."

The Magician looked around the room and saw the Magical Burning Stick. "I must hold the Burning Stick!" he said as he took the stick in his hand. Then seeing the cream puff on the plate, he said, "Aha! I see you have something nice to eat here!" and without asking he took the cream puff.

"Do not eat that unless you change the two little pigs back to their right forms!" Raggedy Ann said, but the Magician laughed and walked out the door.

"Ha, ha, ha!" he cried, "that's the time I fooled you: Now that I have the Burning Stick you can all whistle!" and he began eating the cream puff. He had only taken two bites when he changed into a little pig. For Raggedy Ann had given him some of his own magic pancake in the cream puff.

75% of disease avoided through internal cleanliness

WHY run the risk of sickness? Keep clean internally. When you are constipated, poisons form in the accumulated food waste. These poisons, absorbed by the blood, attack all parts of the body.

The first results, headache, biliousness, a feeling of "heaviness," etc., serve as warnings of a graver danger. If this intestinal poisoning continues unchecked, you become the victim of some serious organic disease.

This is why intestinal specialists state that constipation is the primary cause of three-quarters of all illness, including the gravest diseases of life.

Laxatives Aggravate Constipation Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favor Lubrication Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Not a Medicine Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water it is harmless.

Get rid of constipation and avoid disease by adopting the habit of internal cleanliness. Take Nujol as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.
