TWO IN A PLOT
By A. W. PEACH
(© 1923, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.) HAYES came abruptly into the room and examined himself carefully in the mirror, while his roommate, Allen Bowman, looked on with amusement.
As Hayes saw himself revealed he announced, "Al, I am about five times ing Allen's groan, he went on, "but handsomer than I was before!" Ignor-I got the surprise of my life today. I went into the gift shop to get some trinket for Hallie, and while I was at the counter, she came in, stood beside me, looked me over with some interest by the way, and never recognized me!

I started to speak to her, then thought I'd see how long it would be before she caught on!

"Now that's a pretty note! Stand right beside the girl I am to marry in a few months and she doesn't know me. But I don't look like the old specimen she knew!"

When at the appointed hour, Hayes was introduced to the fair rose and silver girl, whose friendly, merry eyes were lifted to his with welcome, he almost "spilled the beans," as Allen said later, by a near approach to gathering her in his arms; but he shifted his action to a warm and admiring greeting.

The dinner went along famously.
In response to questions Hayes described himself with glowing terms, while Allen labored to suppress an appreciative grin. Hallie's dark eyes were sincere and earnest when "Van Rea," as Allen had introduced him, told some of the dangers that Hayes was meeting in the Americas.

When the time came for parting later in the evening Hallie's eyes told a story of their interest in the tall, distinguished engineer from the tropics, and her interest gave Hayes a queer thrill.
The two men talked it over in their rooms. Allen was glad. "For once she stumbled, old man. You certainly made a handsome picture across the table—and the bluff you put up, why, it was immense!"

Hayes laughed. "I used to think I might make an actor."
The next morning Allen came from the telephone with his familiar grin extended. "Say, Hallie wants me to get up a party for a drive along the shore and supper afterward. Are you on? Whow! but she is gone!"

"Sure," Hayes agreed. "We might as well square accounts with her now as any time."
So the drive came about—a long glide in a great car along the beautiful coast to a hidden inn, then dinner, music, dancing, and the hushed sweep through the moonlight home.

Tucked in beside him, Hayes had all he could do to keep himself from drawing her firm, slight body close to him and kissing the fragrant lips that chatted with him. As the miles went by he was startled to find she was snuggling a bit nearer him, and her gloved hand touched his hesitatingly. It might have been all perfectly natural and possible, but—"By George, Al, I'm afraid this game is going too far! I almost believe she's falling in love with me!" he said, once more in their rooms.

Allen stared, then chuckled. "I thought she looked kind-a mooney at you. Man, you make a handsome picture beside that leather-faced Yankee.
Hayes, down in Brazil!"

Hayes did not rise to the comment.
"But, man, it might be a serious thing —a girl falling in love with the chap she's already in love with!"

Allen "haw-hawed" in a manner always irritating to Hayes's nerves.
"You're right! She might like Van Rea more than she likes Bill Hayes—that would be a mess! Bar-bar!"

"I think the time's ripe to call this off! The joke is on her good and proper—what's that, the telephone?"

It was Hayes who answered. He heard the sweet voice of the girl he loved as he had heard it in dreams many times in the night watches of his exile, but this time beneath its music there was something else. She said:
"That you, dear Van Rea. Please shave off that beard—I will NOT be kissed by a man with a beard; and come tomorrow, alone, Will. I can't wait any longer to have you—just you." The wistful, tender accent vanished. "I didn't know you in the shop, but you better bring two gifts, don't you think? And tell Allen I want to speak to him. Good night—"

It Has Been Done, So Scores of O'Neill Citizens Say.
To get rid of an aching back,
The sharp twinges,
That tired out feeling, You must reach the spot—get at the cause.
In many cases 'tis the kidneys.
Doan's Pills are for weak kidneys.
O'Neill citizens testify.
Ask your neighbor!
J. M. Ashley, O'Neill, says: "My back has bothered me and pained so I could hardly keep going. Sharp pains darted through the small of my back and the kidney secretions were highly colored and unnatural. The last attack came on after having the measles. After taking the first few of Doan's Pills I could see a change for the better and kept on with them until I had used three boxes which I got at Reardon Bros. Drug Store. I was cured of the trouble and my kidneys were put in a strong and healthy condition again."
Price 60c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Pills—the same that Mr. Ashley had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs.,
